The law governing the importation and sale of proprietary medicines in the Philippine Islands has been interpreted by the Philippine Health Service to apply to "any substance or preparation except those used exclusively for cosmetic purposes." The formula must be in English, and attached to each separate package or part thereof. The formula must al[illegible] appear on any advertising matter di[illegible]uted or published, and the use of s[illegible]ents that are false or misleading in any respect is prohibited and may also result in the exclusion of the preparation advertised. Before any patent or proprietary medicine may be offered for sale it must be analyzed and favorably reported on by the Bureau of Science.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

At the opening of trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange prices were strong and offerings comparatively light. Advances were recorded in the leading issues with Republic Iron and Steel selling ⅜ above its preceding high of 78¾. Trading was brisk for the first half hour, after which the market turned irregular as a result of profit taking in those issues which had shown the greatest advances on Friday. Thereafter the market sagged and losses of ½ to 2 points were registered by the leading issues in the succeeding hour. In the last half hour the market steadied under the leadership of Steel common.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The distribution of wheat seems to be the most important factor in the situation at present. Prices are fixed by the Government and consequently fail to be influenced by any changes in the situation, and handlers of wheat are particularly interested in the movement from the farms. Receipts last week were smaller, with losses of about 600,000 bushels from the previous week. It has been shown, however, that wheat this season is being delivered to the mills without appearing at terminal points, and it has been asserted that the marketing has been more liberal than appears on the surface.

RYE.—Market firm; No. 2 Western, $1.89, cost and freight New York.

CORN.

The corn market was moderately active and price changes were feverish and irregular. Early the December position in Chicago made a new high record, selling at $1.25, which is within 3 cents of the fixed maximum price. Offers were quite readily taken, however, and after a decline of ¾ to 1c for the late months, prices rallied in sympathy with oats and for a time the whole list was selling above the final of Friday. Toward the close there was a partial reaction under profit taking for over Sunday, and quotations were ½c net higher for December and ⅜c to ¾c lower for the other months. In the local cash market new yellow corn was quoted at $2.02, cost and freight New York, ten days' shipment; Argentine at $2.05 to $2.10, free on board cars New York, to arrive.

OATS.

Further buying by exporters and continued light offers from the country on account of the scarcity of cars acted as a stimulating influence in the oats market. At least, prices rallied after an early decline, and new high records were again established. Profit taking at the close brought about a decline of about 1c from the top, however, and final quotations were ⅛ to ¼c net lower. The local cash market was strong; standard quoted at 78¾@79c; No. 2 white, 79c; No. 3 white, 78@78½c; No. 4 white, 77½@78c; fancy clipped white, 78½@80½c; ordinary clipped white, 77½@78½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

A decline of 10 points in the hog market and prospects of more liberal receipts next week at interior points gave the provision list an easier tone on Saturday. There was some good selling by strong interests, and the demand was limited. The cash position was much stronger, and prices for contracts are selling below a parity with hogs, but the trade seems to fear further restrictive regulations by the Food Administration. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 22,000, estimated for Monday, 44,000, and for next week, 175,000; Kansas City received 4,000, and Omaha, 3,900 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market was a trifle more active than of late, but total sales were only 2,100 barrels. Shorts were more disposed to cover, and as offerings were light, prices were firmer, closing 5 to 20 points net higher. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

Friday's reactions were followed by a steadier tone in the coffee market yesterday. There was covering by December shorts and a scattering trade demand which absorbed light offerings from Wall Street and other sources, with the market closing at a net advance of 6 to 10 points. The local spot market was quiet at 7½c for Rio 7s and 8¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 4,019 cases. The market closed firm on high qualities of fresh gathered, which are very scarce. Medium and lower grades irregular, and the range of values continues wide. Storage eggs are meeting only a moderate demand. The business reported is about at unchanged prices, but the tone of the market is weak and in buyers' favor. Nearby eggs in light supply, but trade is quiet and buyers, paying top quotations, are critical; undergrades are of very irregular value. THE FINANCIAL SITUATION AND STOCK MARKETS

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Irregular in a Narrow List—Sharp Contraction in Loans—Reserve Up.

Although a number of inactive stocks enjoyed good gains yesterday the prevailing tone of the market was one of disappointment, and most of the active stocks closed the day under the previous final prices. There was a good display of strength in the tobacco issues which carried Tobacco Products, United Cigar Stores, and Liggett & Myers all forward easily, but other gains were few in number. The advancing course of the steel shares was halted and the rails were fractionally lower on the calling of a conference looking to the pooling of transportation facilities.

Yesterday's bank statement showed an increase of $4,123,000 in the excess reserve, bringing the total to the highest point touched since Aug. 4. There was a decrease of $182,000,000 in loans, which was mainly accounted for by the redemption of $130,000,000 of Treasury certificates during the week. Net demand deposits decreased $37,394,000 and time deposits by $10,589,000. The Federal Reserve Bank reported an increase of $147,000,000 in acceptances and bills bought for discount, with an addition of $28,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes outstanding.

The reported move to throw all railway facilities into one system has been looked upon for some months as the inevitable answer to the increasingly serious problem of avoiding congestion. The War Board has accomplished a great deal in the way of improving car loading and in eliminating unnecessary runs, but the situation has been growing steadily more difficult to handle, and the usual handicaps that occur with Winter storms now threaten serious interruption of service in many sections. The proposed abandonment of passenger service cannot be accomplished without working discomfort and even hardship upon many people, but the price is a small one to pay in relation to the importance of the objects to be attained. Not only are the railroads far below their requirements in the way of locomotives and cars, but they are threatened with the worst fuel shortage in history. It is a wise precaution to face these threatened dangers before they compel attention.

Lockport Took $1,886,550 in Bonds

The Liberty Loan Committee issued a statement yesterday calling attention to the fact that owing to a clerical error the amount of subscriptions received to the Second Liberty Loan in the City of Lockport, N. Y., had been erroneously given as $186,650. The actual amount received was $1,886,550, which is equivalent to 102 per cent. of that city's quota.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Calumet and Hecla Mines Produced 12,205,380 Pounds in October.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—The quarterly report of the Davis-Daly Co. shows production of 4,275 tons of ore, yielding 498,811 pounds of copper and 26,075 ounces of silver, all from the Colorado shaft. The figures for the preceding quarter were 1,158,356 pounds of copper and 71,535 ounces of silver. The ore now being mined shows 10 and 12 per cent. copper, besides good silver values. About fifty tons of manganese is being shipped daily from the Hibernia and Great Republic.

The October output of the Calumet & Hecla mines was 12,205,380 pounds of copper, against 11,556,438 pounds for September and 12,338,795 pounds in August.

Consolidated Copper mines are producing at the rate of 1,500,000 pounds of copper a month.

The Ohio Copper Co. in the first ten months of this year produced 4,700,000 pounds of copper. It will be some months before the company will show the full effects of the mineral flotation.

The output of the Anaconda mines is increasing daily. The property is operating at 80 per cent normal.

The New Cornelia Copper Co. is expected to turn out 12,000,000 pounds of copper during the last three months of the year. The net profit for the year is believed to be at least $7,500,000.

The Chile Copper Co. has increased the capacity of its plant to 10,000 tons daily, but delays and inability to obtain a steady supply of fuel oil have interfered with full utilization of facilities.

SCRAP-HEAP WASTE IN METAL ABOLISHED

War Conditions Bring About a Remarkable Saving in This Industry.

DECREASE IN MELTING LOSS

Geological Survey Report Says Facilities Are Being Increased for Utilizing Junk.

One of the remarkable economic effects of the war upon American industry has been the manner in which it has promoted the scrap metal and junk trades, particularly the various industries dependent upon scrap metal of all kinds. A report of the United States Geological Survey on "Secondary Metals in 1916"—secondary metal is the official name for scrap metal—shows that war conditions have brought about much missionary work to eliminate the wastefulness of the scrap heap.

The Government report reveals that in 1916 the total quantity of scrap metal of various kinds recovered in the United States was valued at $265,377,856. This was more than double the value, and represented nearly double the quantity of scrap metal recovered in 1915. The amount of scrap lead included in this total equalled 16.8 per cent. of the total American output of new lead, and exceeded the output of new lead in several of the biggest mining States put together. The total value of scrap aluminum recovered was almost five times that recovered the previous year, and represented about 40 per cent. of the total domestic production of this metal, in which the United States leads the world.

"Collections of metal have been so large," the Geological Survey reports, "that it has been difficult to obtain labor properly to break, segregate and ship the varied classes of material. In fact, the public has been educated sufficiently to appreciate the importance of waste; even the farmers in remote regions are being askd to collect and ship scrap iron, steel and other metals. The large manufacturing plants, foundries and smelters have increased their facilities for saving and segregating scrap metals, and have also adopted methods for decreasing melting losses.

"Manufacturers of magnetic separators state that the sales of their products have shown a large increase in the last two years. The chief use for their separators was for the magnetic concentration of metals. One of the main uses now is for the elimination of iron from brass and other nonferrous metals. The use of magnetic separators has been greatly extended. Iron and steel filings are thus recovered from sands, ashes and other foundry refuse. In the manufacture of pottery, glassware, &c., the clay and sands are run through a magnetic device to extract small particles of iron."

Another interesting point in the new scientific economy being introduced into American industry is the manner in which light scrap, metal shavings and clippings are now saved. This used to be shoveled indiscriminately into the melting furnace, if it was saved at all. But it occurred to far-seeing engineers that in this method, as the amount of exposed metal surface on these small, thin fragments was large in proportion to their weight, the amount of metal lost by oxidation, literally burned off in melting, must be large. So the expedient was adopted of "briquetting" this light scrap—that is, pounding it together into solid bricks before melting. It was found that fully that fully 50 per cent. of the metal that had been made useless under the old process was now saved.

"There are as many romances in the utilization of waste," says the Geological Survey, "as there are in the discovery of new mines. If the public were better informed about the many industries partly or wholly dependent on junk, and how the products of such plants were made more expensive because the raw material had not been properly selected and segregated, greater interest would be taken in the national propaganda of conservation, and this would lower living costs."

OLD COLONIAL BOOKS TO BE OFFERED HERE

"The Isle of Pines," by Henry Neville, Printed in 1668, Among Collection.

VOLUME WAS LONG LOST

Other Works Included in the Sale Are by W. Hughes, Sir Francis Bacon, and Zabdiel Boylston.

One of the "lost books" of the Colonial Press at Cambridge in New England is in a sale by the American Art Association in New York tomorrow and Tuesday. It was printed by Samuel Green, the elder, in the college building in Cambridge, in 1668. The book was lost until it turned up in the Bishop White Kennett sale in London on July 30, 1917. It has his autograph on the title. The author was Henry Neville. The book is oddly entitled as follows:

The Isle of Pines, or A late Discovery of a fourth Island in Terra Australis, Incognita, being A True Relation of certain English persons, who in the days of Queen Elizabeth, making a voyage to the East India, were cast away and wracked upon the Island near to the Coast of Terra Australis, Incognita, and all drowned except one man and four women, whereof one was a negro. And now lately, Anno Dom., 1667, a Dutch ship driven by foul weather there by chance has found their posterity, speaking good English, to amount to ten or twelve thousand persons, as they suppose. The whole Relation follows, written and left by the man himself a little before his death, and declared to the Dutch by his grandchild.

The work is a romance after the manner of Swift and Defoe, quite popular in its day. It passed through several editions.

"The American Physitian, or A Treatise of the Roots, Plants, Trees, Shrubs, Fruit, Herbs, Etc., Growing in the English Plantations in America," by W. Hughes, London, 1672, is the extremely rare first edition. A wax portrait of George Washington was done from life by Joseph Wright. From it he made the plaster cast which he sent to his mother, Patience Wright, as a model for the famous wax relief portrait of Washington. "The American Querist," by Myles Cooper, New York, printed by James Rivington, 1774, is the rare second issue of this work. No copy is recorded as sold at auction in America. "A Declaration of the Demeanor and Cariage of Sir Walter Raleigh," by Sir Francis Bacon, London, 1618, is the rare first edition. "An Historical Account of the Small-Pox Inoculation in New England," by Zabdiel Boylston, Boston, 1730, is very scarce. No copy is recorded as sold at auction in America. "The White-Footed Deer and Other Poems," by William Cullen Bryant, New York, 1844, is of the greatest rarity. It is in the original wrapper, uncut, and equals the famous Poor copy.

"Case of Great Britain and America," by Gervase P. Bushe, Boston, 1769, is scarce. Only two copies have been sold at auction in America. "An examination of the Connecticut Claim to Lands in Pennsylvania," by William Smith, Philadelphia, 1774, is a rare and important historical item. Green's "Register for the State of Connecticut," New London, 1784 and 1785, is the rare first and second issues. Among the autographs in the sale is a letter by Daniel Parke Custis, the first husband of Martha Washington. It is dated May 5, 1755, and is addressed to his supply agent, or merchant. "Sabbath Profanity," by Francis Worcester, Boston, 1760, is probably unique. "America, or a Poem on the Settlement of the British Colonies," by William Livingston, New Haven, 1770, is scarce. No copy is recorded as sold at auction in America. Livingston was an ardent patriot, and was Governor of New Jersey in 1776. "A Philosophical Treatise of the Original and Production of Things Writ in America in a Time of Solitudes," by Richard Franck, London, 1687, is the exceedingly scarce first edition. There are two scarce editions of Sir Martin Frobisher's Voyages, both printed at Nuremberg in 1580.

"Notes on the State of Virginia," Paris, 1782, by Thomas Jefferson, is the extremely rare original edition, of which only a limited number of copies were printed and privately issued to friends. "A Letter to a Friend," by John Kearsley, Philadelphia, printed by B. Franklin and D. Hall, 1751, is of excessive rarity. No copy has ever been sold at auction in America. "Statement of the Kennebec Claims," Boston, 1786, is exceedingly scarce. "A Report of the Causes Determined by the Late Supreme Court," Lexington, 1803, by James Hughes, is a fine copy of the rarest of the Kentucky reports. An autograph letter of Governor William Clark of the Northwest Territories to Henry Dearborn, Oct. 17, 1808, has watercolor pen-and-ink sketch of the man referred to in the letter, entirely in Clark's autograph. "New Hampshire Committee of Safety." Exeter, 1779, is one of the rarest of all American broadsides. No copy has been sold at auction in America. "The Military Glory of Great Britain," Philadelphia, 1762, is a rare Princeton College item.

"A Concise View of the Controversy Between the Proprietors of East and West Jersey," by Ebenezer Cowell, Philadelphia, 1783, is exceedingly scarce. "The History of Peru," by Diego Fernandez, Seville, 1571, is the original and only edition of this scarce book. An autograph letter by Henry R. Schoolcraft, the noted ethnologist, to Governor Lewis Cass, is accompanied by a manuscript map in Schoolcraft's autograph. "A Narrative of the Rise and Progress of the Difficulties Which Issued in a Separation Between the Minister and People of Bennington," by David Avery, Bennington, 1782, is exceedingly scarce. It was the first book printed at Bennington. "The History of the First Discovery and Settlement of Virginia," by William Stitch, Williamsburg, 1747, is the original edition of the first American printed history of Virginia. "An Ode Sacred to the Memory of General Wolf, London, 1759, is a poetical piece of the greatest rarity.

HELPING BELGIUM TO PAY.

Greatest Need from Allies Will Be in After-War Financing.

HAVRE, Oct. 10, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—"Belgium's great financial problem will come after the war," said A. Van de Vyvere, Belgian Minister of Finance, to The Associated Press. "She will require in its solution the help of her protectors and friends quite as much as she needs it now to secure the restoration of her independence.

"The bigger States have been able, during the progress of hostilities, to lay the foundation for a fiscal system responding in a measure to the needs the war will have created, but the Belgian Government, thrown out of its territory during the first months of the war, separated from the chosen representatives of the people in Parliament, deprived of the resources of the country, which were turned against the country itself by an enemy without shame and without honor, could make no arrangements for raising money. It could only confine its efforts to the reconstitution of the army and the relief of the distress of Belgians in exile and those remaining in occupied territory.

"We unfortunately encountered the most generous financial aid from England and France, and now the United States, in its turn, admits us to participation in the proceeds of the Liberty Loan.

"Since the battle of the Yser we have spent nearly 2,000,000,000 francs—just about 50,000,000 a month—on our military effort, and during the same time have paid 950,000,000 francs to the American Relief Commission for the provisioning of the occupied part of Belgium. These latter payments were made at the first of each month at the rate of 25,000,000 per month up to October, 1916, when they were increased to 37,500,000. Since June of this year the credits allotted to Belginm from the Liberty Loan have been applied to this object."

In spite of all the difficulties it has encountered the Belgian Government has not defaulted in any payment, meeting regularly the interest on its public debt, though it might have invoked the force of circumstances to defer payments.

GERMANY'S LOST TRADE.

Industrialists See a Long, Uphill Fight After the War Is Over.

In a statement addressed to their stockholders and printed in German newspapers recently reaching London Mannesmann Brothers, the great Westphalian firm of industrialists that had works in England and Italy, make confession of the difficulties which German industrial interests will probably have to contend with in attempting to recover their pre-war position abroad.

The Mannesmanns, who had written off and set aside since 1914 more than $10,000,000—a sum which, they state, "does not begin to cover" their trade war losses in all parts of the world—warn their shareholders of the enormous efforts and the expenditure of money that will be required for the restoration of pre-war conditions. In view of this, they are setting aside this year a further $1,000,000 as the nucleus of a fund for "reconstruction of our world-trade establishment" after the war.

KAISER ADMIRES JAPANESE.

Refers to Them as Clever Political People, Who Gain by the War.

In an article found in a copy of the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger, recently received in London, Karl Rosner, a war correspondent who has lately been accompanying the Kaiser on his frequent trips to the various fronts and through the Balkans to Constantinople, represents the Kaiser as now combining admiration of Japan with an unshaken belief in "the yellow peril." Herr Rosner writes:

"The conversation turned to Japan. It is quite wonderful to see with what absolute objectivity and what reasoned historical justice, avoiding all passion without abandoning anything of his hostility, the Kaiser sketches the position of the Japanese in this war. With his acute vision, he understands and describes the clever political people which is growing while blinded Europe is committing suicide. He shows what a lot England has already lost irreparably to her allies."

Herr Rosner then says that the Kaiser boasted as follows of the famous picture which he painted and distributed at the beginning of this century as a representation of "the yellow peril." The Kaiser said:

"Twenty years ago I made the drawing, 'Peoples of Europe, Defend Your Holiest Possessions.' At that time people made jokes about it and laughed at me; German prophets must not even draw. Today, however, many people think otherwise, perhaps, of the jokes that they made then."

BLOCKADE AS A BLESSING.

German Argues That It Has Saved the Nation Its Wealth.

In connection with the campaign for the seventh German war loan, which closed on Oct. 18 with subscriptions totaling 12,430,000,000 marks, ($2,958,000,000 at normal exchange,) Arthur von Gwinner, head of the Deutsche Bank, turned out an essay on "The Inexhaustible Wealth of Germany," in which he enlarged upon the idea frequently advanced by many Germans that the British blockade had been a financial blessing in disguise by compelling Germany to spend her money at home.

As summarized in the London press, Herr Gwinner pointed out that if it had not been for the blockade Germany would long ago have spent her economic strength. It had been particularly fortunate that she had not been able to import "luxuries" during the past three years. The war had taught Germany not only to work but to save. On beer and spirits alone, taking peace prices as a basis of reckoning, Germans were saving more than $3,000,000,000 a year. War's iron necessities were also responsible for enormous savings on clothes, light, heat, food, and commodities in which the country in pre-war days overindulged.

Germany was now living on the great supplies which the empire, grown rich during forty-three years of peace, had accumulated. These supplies were still sufficient "for years." Such articles as were no longer obtainable in adequate quantity Germans had either learned to do without or had invented substitutes for, such as nitrogen for production of explosives and fertilizers. In consequence of the slow consumption of her great reserves of supplies such gigantic amounts of capital had flowed into the banks that the demand for good interest-bearing investments was constantly rising. Banks and savings banks had twice as many depositors today as before the war, and their aggregate deposits, notwithstanding the billions invested in war loans, were much higher than in 1914.

Knows His Business.

During a dust storm at one of the army camps a recruit sought shelter in the cook's tent.

"If you put the lid on that camp kettle you would not get so much dust in your soup."

"See here, my lad, your business is to serve your country."

"Yes," replied the recruit, "but not to eat it."—Christian Register.

GERMANS RUSH AIRPLANES.

Plants Speed Up to Meet Expected Allied Offensive.

Cablegrams telling of the speeding up of Germany's motor works in an attempt to produce enough airplanes to hold out against the great air offensive expected from the Anglo-Franco-American forces on the western front are confirmed by items found in Berlin papers recently reaching London.

The Daimler Company of Canstatt-Stuttgart has just voted to increase its capital from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000. The importance the Government attaches to the company's plans is shown by the facilities granted by the Imperial Bank for flotation of the new shares. A circular issued by the company says:

"We entered the war with a large reserve for extension purposes, but this has been used up to meet the large demands the military made upon us. We can no longer speak of 'expanding' our works, but must consider multiplying them and building entirely new factories."

An additional purpose, it is said, is "to strengthen our resources for the duties which industry will have to perform after the war."

An electric company, which has vast facilities for the manufacturing of parts for airplanes and submornes, has raised its capital to a round $50,000,000, an increase of nearly $7,000,000. It announces that on July 1 its employes "in Germany" numbered 79,293.

MISS THE POINT.

A Judge's Sarcasm Leads a Jury to Wrong Verdict.

A good story is being told of Lord Bowen by Austin Dobson in his recently published "Bookman's Budget." The judge was recently summing up a case, and he was caustic:

"If, gentlemen," he said to the jury, "you think it likely that the prisoner was merely indulging an amiable fancy for midnight exercises on his neighbor's roof; if you think it was kindly consideration for that neighbor which led him to take off his boots and leave them behind him before descending into the house; and if you believe that it was the innocent curiosity of the connoisseur which brought him to the silver pantry and caused him to borrow the teapot, then, gentlemen, you will acquit the prisoner."

To the judge's dismay the jury did acquit the prisoner, and that instantly. The judge had made out too good a case, and the jury had no idea that his remarks were "intended sarcastic."—Christian Science Monitor.

VARIED PHASES OF THE COUNTRY'S BUSINESS LIFE

THE MERCHANT'S POINT OF VIEW

Efforts for the readjustment of trade in its larger currents have divided attention during the past week with the active beginning of retail buying for holiday purposes. As to the latter, it is a kind of second season, the first having been mainly devoted to purchases for the soldiers and sailors abroad. The new buying has set in in fair volume and promises well despite the high prices asked for the gift articles displayed. There is, however, more of a tendency displayed toward purchasing articles that are useful. This applies especially to gifts for the grown-ups. The children still demand their share of toys, and, from indications, they are not likely to be disappointed in spite of the prevailing bent toward economy. In matters of readjustment to the varying conditions which the continuance of the war is bringing, the changes appear in so many directions as to affect practically every industry to some extent. They are most marked in the methods of doing business, in upsetting time-honored trade usages, and in eliminating waste whether it be of material, of time, or of credit. This much, at least, was to be expected of a country trying to get down to hardpan. Official price regulation has also been a spur in the direction of a greater efficiency.

Pitfalls of Price Regulation.

This price regulation, however, is not without its pitfalls. In its attempts to fix the prices of certain metals, foods, and the like, the Government runs counter to some fundamentals. Money, for example, is a measure of value, and the touchstone of prices is the purchasing power of so many grains of gold of a certain purity or fineness represented in this country by the dollar. Under normal conditions and with unchecked competition in commodities, what variance is shown is apt to average up gradually through a wide range of what may be called necessities. If a bushel of wheat sells for a dollar, the proceeds of the sale may be put into the purchase of a certain amount of woolen, cotton, or other goods, or flour, bacon, or other foods. If prices advance for wheat—which means an increase in the cost of living—prices for articles made or produced by human labor are apt to rise in proportion. In the great advances in prices which have occurred since the European war began, some unusual factors have been at work, and rises have been disproportionate. It is taken for granted, and, as a matter of course, that war brings with it automatically an increase in living costs. The taking of many persons from the ordinary productive occupations and putting them either into war forces or in vocations making munitions is alone sufficient to account for such an increase. And, when the war occupations are bidding high for labor, wages in other industries rise to correspond and prices must be advanced.

Rises Not in Proportion.

Long before this country entered the war prices jumped to very high levels, and many of them were absolutely unjustified by any pretense either of scarcity or cost of production. This was true as to food and munitions and of other articles needed by the belligerents. The fighting nations did not stop to consider expense. Time was the essential and every order was a "hurry up" one. Then, too, each nation had its own purchasing agents in the field, and the bidding was one against the other. Speculators took advantage of this condition and took a most exorbitant toll. The result was an orgie of inflation in prices all around from which the country had not recovered when it entered the ranks of belligerents. The Government orders which had to be filled quickly tended to push prices up still further until a halt was called and a check put to profiteering. Iron and steel, copper, coal, wheat, and certain other articles were placed on price levels. An effort has been made, with more or less success, to see that certain things destined for civilian use shall cost no more than the same articles when bought for the Government. If all essentials had been brought within the purview of the official regulations, the proportion would have been preserved. As this, however, was not done, inequalities have resulted. What prices were fixed gave the dollar a certain purchasing power as to some commodities. As to all others the purchasing power is less, and this has resulted in some unfairness and accounts for much of the discontent that shows itself every now and then. Restriction of profits in some industries and none in others must result in giving those engaged in the latter more than their equitable share.

Substitution of Labor.

Lack of available labor, which is only slightly felt in this country as compared with Great Britain and France, is being made up in divers ways. The greater employment of women in occupations which were formerly attended to by men is only one of them. Putting into use the spare time of many is becoming a large factor. This is shown prominently in the great amount of knitting and other work done for the Red Cross by volunteer helpers. Less noticeable, but not less notable, are the many instances of the part-time workers in the stores and the cases of retired merchants who have gone back into harness to take the places of younger men who have volunteered or who have been drafted into the military forces. There has also been a development, in different parts of the country, of the plan to turn over to persons living at home some of the work that has usually been done in factories. Such persons do not work any set number of hours a day, but merely employ their spare time. A case of the kind is reported from Reading, Penn. In that city and vicinity, knitting manufacturers are installing free of expense electrical looping machines in private homes for women who cannot work in factories. Scores of such machines, each of which with its attachments takes up no more space than a sewing machine, have been installed. Automobiles are used to collect and distribute garments and hosiery, and the women lose no time in going to or coming from the factories. The extra income thus obtained is found very useful in meeting the high cost of living.

Concerning Hours of Labor.

There was held in this city a few days ago the annual meeting of the National Founders Association. The business of this organization has been to fight organized labor by propaganda and otherwise. It was therefore quite natural that the addresses should have this end in view. The President of the association, William H. Barr, was especially denunciatory of organized labor and urged that the eight-hour day should be abolished during the present period of stress. In this he ignored the teachings of British experience, which showed a greater output in munitions and other factories with a shorter workday. But some of Mr. Barr's reasoning was peculiar. Thus he argued:

> Do they battle at the front on an eight-hour schedule? Does the Chief Executive encompass all his duties in eight hours? Can the farmer, without whose support the war cannot be won, increase the products of the soil by reducing his workday to eight hours?

It is easy to point out the absurdity of this kind of reasoning. There is quite a difference, so far as physical fatigue goes, between the different kinds of labor mentioned and the steady grind of factory work. Then, too, Mr. Barr evidently labors under the impression that soldiers at the front work continuously, which is not the case even in trench warfare, they being relieved from duty at stated intervals. The case of the President is peculiar to itself. But the average farmer who works hard for only a few months in the year rarely, if ever, works the equivalent of eight hours for each working day. Some other kind of reasoning might be more convincing than that of Mr. Barr.

High Prices for Cottons.

Cotton went to new high levels during the week, the prices exceeding any for half a century. The causes ascribed were many. Among them were the comparatively small figures of ginning, the large consumption in domestic mills, and widely circulated reports of low estimates for the crop. Perhaps the best reason is that there are many down South who are enabled to keep their holdings, and who are doing so in the belief in a rise. No one seems to doubt but that there will be more than enough cotton to last until after the next crop comes in. The high quotation for the raw material had its influence in the goods market, where all prices showed an upward trend. New price levels were made in printcloths and sheetings, and wholesalers who had been holding back for recessions have been forced to buy at prevailing prices. Contracting in a few instances was done up to June with some reluctance on the part of mills, some of which are not as well provided with cotton as they might be. The call for ginghams continues. Bleached and printed fabrics and napped goods have been advanced in price, and everything in the knitted line, from hosiery to sweaters, seems in active demand.

The Woolen Situation.

The situation in wool has shown no marked change. There is much less anxiety displayed than there was over a possible shortage. The needs of the Government have apparently been looked after without much bother, and without very seriously trenching on the supply for civilian needs. The proposition to have the Government fix prices for the material is not taken seriously. Should it do so, it is difficult to see what objection could be made to its also fixing the price of cotton—a move that would raise a political hornets' nest. Boston wool dealers have offered more wool to the Government at the former scale of prices. It is said by some that the purpose in this is to avoid official regulation. At any rate there has been no particular increase in the prices of the various grades of wool. The market for woolen goods is not especially active just now. The principal factor in the trade announced the other day increases in the price of fabrics of about 10 per cent., applicable to all-wool goods only. From all the data available it would appear that the mills are now working at their maximum on war orders, the increase in loomage for the purpose having been especially marked in October. Clothing manufacturers are still awaiting the openings for the next heavyweight season. They have been led to understand that prices will be higher and the output limited. Dress goods are still in good demand. Many of the mills decline to sell further ahead than March. Buyers are very cautious about paying the prices that are asked.

PROVIDING AGAINST BUSINESS FRAUDS

Bankrupt Act Amendments and Law Against Bad Checks Urged by Credit Men.

Two things for which the Retail Credit Men's National Association has pledged itself to work, in conjunction, where possible, with the National Association of Credit Men or with local associations of wholesale credit men, are the amending of the National Bankruptcy law so as to eliminate the crook and to make uniform, so far as possible, the various State measures covering the use of bad checks. In New York and other States which do not have specific bad-check laws the members of the association are to take the matter up with the legislative bodies.

This program was outlined to a TIMES reporter yesterday by W. H. J. Taylor, credit manager for Franklin Simon and Company of this city, and President of the Retail Credit Men's National Association. Speaking of the need of changing the Bankruptcy act, in order more easily to eliminate men who make fraudulent use of its provisions, or at least to make it difficult for them to get discharges from bankruptcy, Mr. Taylor said:

"The National Bankruptcy law, as it stands on the statute books at the present time, favors the debtor as against the creditor. It is an invitation for a dishonest man to cheat his creditors, and it should be changed in several ways along lines that I am going to suggest.

"In all cases of insolvency or bankruptcy, the law should be made use of only by persons engaged in business. They are intended to be an aid to the honest, but unfortunate, business man who, through the natural risks attendant upon business, is unable to pay his creditors in full.

"For this reason the present bankruptcy act should be amended so as to confine its scope to business men only and to permit a discharge from business obligations only, as distinct and separate from personal obligations. In other words, no man should be allowed to acquire expensive personal habits and then live up to them at the expense of creditors. Such things as liability for clothes, rent of house or apartment, and other necessary and reasonable living expenses should not be dischargeable in case the debtor goes into bankruptcy.

"Even business men should not be so lax in their method as to permit their capital to shrink to such an extent that creditors get no dividends at all, and then apply in due course for a discharge and get it. It should be a prerequisite for an application for a discharge that the bankrupt's estate shall have paid a dividend of not less than 20 or 25 per cent. to creditors. It may, perhaps, be provided, in order to protect the really honest debtor, that this provision may be waived by the consent of, say, 80 or 90 per cent. of the bankrupt's creditors, both in number and in amount.

"Inasmuch as the granting of a discharge in bankruptcy is a favor to the bankrupt, the law should provide that the burden of establishing that the bankrupt is entitled to his discharge should be placed upon him, and not upon the objecting creditor, as the law now provides.

"Another suggestion is that the law should require the bankrupt to furnish sufficient funds for the proper administration of the estate. As the law now stands, if a debtor files a petition scheduling no assets, the burden of indemnifying the referee and paying the other expenses incurred in an examination of the estate falls upon those creditors who seek the examination. There is no way of recouping these expenses unless assets that belong to the estate are located.

"Further, the law should provide that, instead of having a system of providing receivers and trustees and attorneys for receivers and trustees, &c., in each case, Federal officers be appointed whose duty it should be to administer all bankrupt estates; that these officers should act in conjunction with the office of the Attorney General and the Federal Attorneys of each district, so that, should the facts warrant it, an investigation may be started by the Federal attorneys, who shall at the same time and in the same proceedings, so far as practicable, endeavor to locate assets and to prosecute the person or persons who are guilty of concealing them.

"The law also should be amended so that failure on the part of a debtor to meet his written obligations, like a check or note, for a period of, say, a week or ten days after presentation, shall constitute an act of bankruptcy. Further, that no fees shall be paid to attorneys for petitioning creditors unless it be shown that the acts of these attorneys have in some way aided in conserving or adding to the assets of the estate.

"Of course, there is no law that is perfect or can be administered perfectly. Expenses are necessarily high. Assets are sold at a forced sale, and generally realize a sum far below their actual value. Creditors, as a class, take too little interest in the administration of bankrupt estates. This permits the bankrupt either to buy in the assets at his own price, or to perpetrate any other frauds he may desire without hindrance on the part of the creditors.

"On the rare occasions when one creditor desires to look into the affairs of a bankrupt estate, the other creditors generally refuse to co-operate to the extent of sharing a part of the expense. The result, therefore, is that if a single creditor is determined enough to proceed, he takes all the risk of his attorney's fees and his expenses, with the result that if something is realized the estate, as a whole, benefits. If nothing is realized, this creditor has lost all that he has advanced."

Apropos of the desirability of making uniform the various State laws relating to bad checks, and illustrating how similar the wording is in the measure recommended for passage in this State by the New York Credit Men's Association to the present Massachusetts law, which was offered by the Boston Credit Men's Association, Mr. Taylor showed the reporter fac similes of the bill and the law. This is the way the New York State bill reads:

Section 1. Any person who, with intent to defraud, shall make or draw, or utter or deliver, any check, draft or order, for the payment of money, upon any bank or other depositary, knowing at the time of such making, drawing, uttering, or delivering, that the maker or drawer, has not sufficient funds in, or credit with, such bank or other depositary for the payment of such check, draft or order, in full, upon its presentation, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable by imprisonment by not more than one year, or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or both fine and imprisonment.

Section 2. As against the maker or drawer thereof the making, drawing, uttering, and delivering of a check, draft, or order, payment of which is refused by the drawee, shall be prima facie evidence of intent to defraud and of knowledge of insufficient funds in, or credit with, such bank or other depository, provided that such maker or drawer shall not have paid the drawee thereof the amount due thereon, together with all costs and protest fees, within five days after receiving notice that such check, draft, or order has not been paid by the drawee.

Section 3. The word credit, as used herein, shall be construed to mean an arrangement or understanding with the bank or depository for the payment of such check, draft, or order.

The Massachusetts law differs only in that it allows for a seven-day period in place of the five-day limit in the New York bill, and specifies "written notice from the drawee" instead of "notice," as in the New York bill. Section 3 of the Massachusetts law also goes on to say that "the words draft or order, as used herein, shall not be construed to mean a note, or an acceptance made payable at a bank or other depository."

AT FALL RIVER MILLS.

Demand for Goods of Printcloth Constructions Very Strong.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Nov. 24.—The demand for goods of printcloth yarn constructions has been very strong during the week, and the volume of business done exceeded that of any week for more than four months. The interest which some buyers took was marked, and it is stated that some of the orders which have been received during the week called for unusually large quantities of goods.

Manufacturers of wide goods state they have been unable to meet the demand from the trade. Users and other factors of narrow goods have also bought very freely and have further contracted for their requirements. Prices on both wide and narrow goods have advanced materially during the four weeks, and indications now are that prices will go still higher. There are some mills which will not accept business any further ahead than February, while other concerns have already taken on contracts which will not mature before May 1.

Manufacturers of sateens, twills, and other specialties state that the market is very strong, and converters and printers show a pronounced willingness to do business even at higher prices. Advices from spinners of cotton yarns are to the effect that they have all the business which they care to take, and are unable to accept any new business, however small.

The total sales for the week are estimated at 350,000 pieces, of which about 80,000 pieces are spots.

SITUATION IN BROAD SILKS.

Spring Trade Outlook Good, but Immediate Business Quiet.

Though actual orders in the local market for broad silks show but slight improvement in volume, prospects for the Spring trade have become such as to dispel the gloom which otherwise might have held uncontested sway among sellers. The situation in woolens and other fabrics, which not only are high in price but of which there seems to be developing an actual scarcity, is causing designers and cutters generally, both here and abroad, to turn more and more to silks.

Though there have been evidences of price cutting to get business, this practice seems by no means to have been general. Sellers as a rule, if they could not get their price, have been content for the time to let the business go, confident that better times are not far distant. Filling-in business from the department stores is said to have amounted to a little more, due probably to the approach of the holiday season, and to the fact that goods have been moving over the counter for the last month much better than earlier in the season.

Developments in the coal situation have been such as to relieve apprehension in this direction to some extent, though the problem is by no means solved. A number of mills have been able to get the release of limited quantities for their use, and feeling seems to be that further small amounts will be released as needed. The action of the Paterson mills in closing down at 4:30 in the afternoon is expected to reduce consumption effectively.

TRADING IN GRAY GOODS.

It Was Active Yesterday Despite the Advancing Prices.

Neither the prevailing high prices nor the short business day could keep buyers inactive in the local gray goods market yesterday. The tendency was strongly upward, and recent predictions that, among other things, 38½-inch 64-60s will be selling at 12½ cents before long, seem on the verge of comming true. Further 1917 sales of these goods at 11½ cents were put through yesterday, and they were said to be growing scarce at that figure. For 39-inch 68-72s, 13 cents was paid for deliveries running all the way to June. In the lower count goods the day's sales included late contracts of 38½-inch 48 squares at 8¾ cents.

In the coarser goods, four-yard 56-60 sheetings sold at 14¼ cents for late shipment, and 40-inch 4.25s brought 13½ cents for January-March deliveries. Nearby business was done on 30-inch 3.25-yard drills at 17 cents. Continued sales of specialties, particularly convertibles for the clothing trade, were reported.

Good Demand for Lace.

Lace and embroidery, according to reports from the local trade, have attained an unusual degree of popularity this Fall. High quality table cloths, centre pieces, and doilies on which much elaborate and attractive needle work has been done, are said to have come into even greater prominence than last year. Many beautiful laces in the narrower widths have been used extensively this season, for decoration and for trimming. And for the same purpose, it is said, embroidered materials have been actively sought. Fine needle-point laces for borders on handworked handkerchiefs have also sold well.

Indian Jute Crop to be Larger.

The final official estimate of the jute crop in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, and Assam, India, places the 1917 area at 2,729,699 acres, an increase of 27,000 acres over last year. The yield is estimated at 8,804,384 bales of jute, an increase of 524,511 bales over the production of the same three provinces last year.

CAUTION NEEDED IN ELIMINATION

Not So Easy a Matter to Determine What Industries Are Really Essential.

The proposal to eliminate the manufacture of some 500 articles considered non-essential to the successful prosecution of the war is looked upon by the large retail interests of this city as the most far-reaching suggestion in its effect on business of the many that have been advanced in connection with war economy. As there is no other industry in the country that carries a wider variety of merchandise than the modern department stores, the local merchants feel that they could not fail to be very seriously affected by the adoption of the proposed plan. There is considerable speculation as to whether or not the results to be obtained from such procedure would be sufficient to offset the disruption of the country's industrial life which necessarily would follow.

"There are, of course, feelings of concern throughout the trade," said Mr. E. L. Howe, Executive Secretary of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, "over the probable effect of the carrying out of the proposed plan. The Government, however, will undoubtedly consider every angle of the situation before deciding on a plan of action or before making any specific announcements. The retailer as well as the manufacturer should and, without doubt, will have every opportunity, if such a step is finally taken, gradually to reorganize his business to meet whatever changes may be decided on with the smallest possible loss.

"The retail store carries a certain number of fixed charges which require a given volume of business that they may be absorbed. To eliminate any number of commodities from distribution through the stores would compel the substitution of other merchandise, or the expansion of those lines retained to offset the losses incurred by those withdrawn. The manufacturer, of course, will have a similar problem to face.

"In addition, there must be an honest difference of opinion as to what are and what are not essential. In determining this, many factors will have to be considered. Not only must the immediate effect on business in this country be considered, but it must be borne in mind that this war is not going to last forever, and that we should avoid any action which might in any way put a check on our efforts to build up a substantial foreign trade.

"Those to be affected by the proposed changes should have full opportunity for hearing. This unquestionably will be given. In determining non-essentials it is apparent that the definite and actual results to be obtained by their elimination would be considered, and careful consideration given to these results to determine whether or not such elimination is justified. Any drastic action that would have the effect of disrupting business generally should not, and undoubtedly will not, be taken if the saving to be accomplished by so doing is purely nominal, or at best very small.

"Every curtailment of business must of necessity cut down profits. This, in turn, reduces the ability of business to pay war taxes and to buy future issues of Government bonds. It is true that in wartime business cannot be expected to go on 'as usual,' but any unnecessary dislocation of the country's industrial life, unless it is to yield really big results, cannot be other than harmful to the cause for which we are all fighting. Our association is, and always has been, more than willing to render whatever service it can to the Government, and we shall present at the proper time considerable interesting and helpful information bearing on this most important question.

"The working out of a plan of action in this matter by the Government is bound to take some time. In its countless ramifications, it presents a problem that will require consultation with a great many of the leading men in the country's commercial, industrial, and financial life. The labor in those industries which are to be stopped will have to be provided for in other trades held to be more directly necessary to war purposes. A survey of the whole labor situation in the 'war' industries would have to be made to determine the quantity and the kind of labor required. It would not do to throw out of employment any number of workers for whom immediate provision could not be made.

"Likewise, in the matter of capital invested in these non-essentials, it must not be left idle. Arrangements should be made for turning it to Government uses or into other channels as soon as possible. No greater economic blunder could be enacted than to render this capital unproductive at a time when intensive production on every hand is the vital need. Provision also would have to be made for the working off and disposal of supplies of such goods as are on hand at the time, and of the materials that have been accumulated for the production of these articles.

"It is inconceivable that any regulation of this far-reaching sort will be instituted without having the consideration of almost every department of the Government. Its effect on taxes will be a vital consideration, as will also its effect on reciprocal trade relations with foreign countries. With the many factors to be considered the greatest care, deliberation, and investigation will have to be exercised if disastrous mistakes are to be avoided. Furthermore, any vital changes in our industrial life which may finally be decided on will have to be brought about gradually. The shift could not be made overnight.

"If, however, every phase of the situation is carefully considered, it is possible that a plan may be evolved which might result in benefit to the country generally. There probably are industries which could profitably be devoted to other work during the war without effecting a great loss to the country. Whether there are 500 such, however, and just what industries they are, only careful investigation from every standpoint can determine."

To Control Horse Skin Leather.

The American Consul General at London has informed the Department of Commerce that the British War Office has extended control of horsehides in the raw state to leather produced from them, and that it now takes possession of leather from imported or domestic horsehides.

A CORNER THAT FAILED.

Japanese Attempt to Force Up Yarn Prices in South China.

By underselling American manufacturers of knitting yarns in the South China market large cotton speculating interests in Japan caused imports from this country to drop in the last two years from about 80 to less than 10 per cent. of the total used. These same interests recently tried to increase their profits by cornering the market and forcing prices up. Powerful syndicates, apparently considering the success of their venture assured by existing world conditions, started buying yarn of all grades, especially the finer counts.

Japanese newspapers report, according to Consul General George E. Anderson, who is at Hongkong, that prices were forced up to 520 yen, or $20 gold, per bale of 400 pounds on the Osaka Cotton Exchange, reaching that figure by advances of $15 to $25 gold a day. The situation became such that finally the exchange had to close its doors for several days pending a readjustment. Following this, prices began to slump, until at the time the report of Mr. Anderson was made they had fallen to 250 yen, or $125, a bale. With the drop the speculators, including some Chinese, lost considerable amounts of money.

The exact reason of the collapse of the movement, according to Mr. Anderson, is not wholly clear, but one factor in it was the course taken by the small knitting factories in South China which, when prices went to unheard of levels, simply shut down and bought no more yarn. The Hongkong factories on the whole were able to keep going without much trouble, for nearly all of them were well stocked. At the low prices reached after the decline, these factories bought up all the available stocks they could get hold of. The result is that the smaller factories are unable to obtain supplies at current prices, and since they can not or will not go much higher they are obliged to remained closed. About 220 small knitting mills in South China have been hurt in this way. Incidentally, the attempt to corner the market assisted materially in keeping the consumption of knitting yarns in that part of the world from showing a big increase this year.

RAW SILK MARKETS.

Policy of Maintaining Prices Is Regarded as Beneficial.

The Japanese raw silk market continues quiet, with no change in prices. While the demand is small, reelers are holding to their agreement and quote the same prices right along. While at first manufacturers here may have had some doubts as to the advisability of maintaining prices in the primary market, they now seem to realize the value of the move. As a result of it a decidedly better tone is prevailing in the New York market. The visible stock at Yokohama is now estimated at about 26,000 bales.

Cables received from Canton by A. P. Villa & Brothers, Inc., report that market dull, with a downward tendency. Quotations, however, are not much lower than those recently current, because of the rising exchange. American buyers are still holding off from this market, but there is some buying for European account. Shanghai reports that hardly any business is being transacted there, and that prices are weaker. There has lately been a further drop of 10 cents a pound for all grades.

From Milan come reports of an upward price tendency in Italian silks, with a good demand from European manufacturers. The local market is brightening up as a result of the better business the manufacturers are doing for immediate and Spring delivery.

New Shanghai Department Store.

The Sincere Company, Ltd., a Chinese-owned Hongkong corporation, has opened an up-to-date department store on Nanking Road, Shanghai's foremost retail business street. According to Consul General Thomas Sammons, stationed in Shanghai, this is the largest native store of its kind in China. While primarily it will cater to the needs of the Chinese population, the wants of foreigners will also be considered. The owners evidently have been unusually energetic, for, in spite of shipping difficulties, they have managed to fill the store with seasonable goods, when old-established foreign stores have found it hard to replenish their stock. In conjunction with the store a hotel will be operated, which will be fitted with the latest appliances. There is also a roof garden, where teas and other refreshments are served.

Black Does Not Mean Mourning.

It is not anticipated that the movement to do away with the practice of wearing black for deceased relatives, which started soon after this country entered the war, will have any material effect on the business of those Fifth Avenue shops specializing in mourning apparel. It is pointed out by one authority in the trade that the great bulk of their business is not, as would be expected, with those in mourning, but rather with the great army of women who believe that black is most becoming to them. Black hats and evening gowns, as well as less formal frocks in black, says this authority, always have been and always will be popular because of the striking effects which can be brought out in this hue better than in almost any other.

HARDWARE TRADE QUIET.

Business Dull Just Now, but No Prospect of Lower Prices.

There is said to have been little more than the usual routine business transacted in the local hardware trade during the last few weeks. Retailers of household hardware are not inclined to replenish their stocks at present prices, and, in fact, do not seem to be having any great call for the merchandise they have. It is expected, however, that a fair volume of business will be done during the holiday season, and that after the first of the year buyers will have to come to market for necessities.

There does not seem to be any reason to look for lower prices in the near future. Prices have been firm, with a tendency toward high levels. There is no evidence of price cutting to get business. Manufacturing costs seem constantly to mount higher, the labor situation shows no signs of improving, and raw materials are no lower.

In the builders' hardware lines more or less the same condition prevails. Building operations are still practically in abeyance, and there does not seem to be any prospect of improvement in this direction for some time to come. Practically the only building that is being done now is of factories. In these only the coarser grades of hardware are used. There has been consequently a slight improvement in this line.

NEWEST IN MILLINERY.

Modified Aviation Caps Are Among Those Being Put Out.

Aviation caps of the different countries, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America, are being modified to such an extent that they can be worn by any type of woman. These hats are being made of chamois, leather, duvetyn, satin and angora, and are trimmed with ostrich fancies, small bells of ostrich and beaded ornaments.

The bulletin goes on to say that, among the things now selling here for immediate use, are hats showing combinations of angora brims and satin crowns; satin brims and duvetyn crowns; ratine braid with satin facings, and narrow grosgrain ribbon and satin. The leading shapes are set down as medium mushrooms, roll brim sailors—some with four-piece crowns and flexible brims—turbans both of the "civilian" and military types. The best trimmings consist of angora pom poms, hand-painted straw flowers, hand-made satin flowers, ostrich fancies and wings. As to colors, the bulletin indicates that preference is being given to navy blue combined with American beauty, sand combined with pastel blue, khaki combined with royal blue, and brown.

MAKING OLD GOODS MOVE.

A Way to Keep Alive the Interest of Salespeople in Them.

One of the great factors in selling merchandise, according to an authority on the matter, is the attitude the salespeople take toward it. If a saleswoman thinks that certain goods have been around the department too long, she gets disgusted with them and does not even try to sell them. If she is enthused over the merchandise, however, and thinks that it is "just beautiful," it is certain to predict that it is going to sell. When new goods come into a department, the salespeople almost instinctively turn to them and forget the old. This means an increase in the number of the department's "stickers," and reduces profits proportionately.

In order to keep alive the interest in the merchandise that has not moved as rapidly as expected, a Los Angeles store has a plan which calls for special efforts to sell goods that have been on hand for two weeks. If the merchandise doesn't sell, even with the expenditure of the extra efforts, the department trimming is changed. The new trim lends a new note of interest to the goods, and saleswomen who have handled them over and over again with no success, take renewed interest in them, and thus increase the probabilities of their sale. A check is kept on the length of time goods have been in a department by an invoice number, which is a key to their history. Not only has the practice of making new trims every two weeks been effective in keeping alive the interest of the salespeople in the goods, but it has been found very effective in keeping stocks in good condition.

Military Styles More in Evidence.

In some of the late Fal styles in women's suits, the military effect is beginning to attract considerable attention. Perhaps the most striking of these yet seen which has actually been sold to any extent is a suit of olive drab flannel. The coat is made with the lapels of the English infantry officer's uniform, is close fitter, and reaches down half way to the knees. The pockets are of the patch type, with a vertical plait in the middle. The skirt is eight inches from the ground, and narrow. The Sam Browne belt is worn with the suit.

New Bulkhead Arrangement Makes Three Hits Necessary to Sink the Ship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The first official analysis of the program which the Emergency Fleet Corporation of the United States Shipping Board is endeavoring to rush to completion to defeat the German submarine menace was issued today. It shows that since the corporation was organized contracts have been let for 884 new vessels, aggregating 4,724,300 deadweight tons; that 426 vessels of 3,029,508 tons building on the ways were requisitioned to hasten construction, and that contracts for 99 other vessels of 610,000 tons are pending.

This program presents a grand total of 1,409 vessels of all types, aggregating 8,363,808 deadweight tons. Of the requisitioned vessels included in this schedule 33 of 257,575 tons have been completed and released. The total deadweight tonnage given represents approximately 6,000,000 gross tons.

The Emergency Fleet Corporation, with the patriotic co-operation of the shipbuilders and of organized labor, expects to place all of the vessels in the program on the seas before the end of next year and thus meet the expressed hope of Premier Lloyd George, made in a recent address, when he stated that the accomplishment of that feat undoubtedly would overcome the best efforts of the submarines. It is entirely probable also that contracts for at least 500,000 tons of ships not included in the schedule given will be let.

Includes 70 Transports.

The figures show that there are under contract no less than 278 vessels of 7,500 tons or more, classified as cargo steamers, of which 70 are designed especially for transports. Of the cargo vessels requisitioned 176 also are of 7,500 tons or over.

Most of the vessels of 5,000 and 7,500 tons which have been contracted for are to be built in the new fabricating yards, and it is estimated that it will take five months to complete a vessel after the yards are in operation. The only limit on their output will be the ability to obtain labor and the construction of yards sufficient to build several vessels at one time.

The construction of a great fleet of vessels of 8,800 tons or over was one of the first steps advocated by Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board and Rear Admiral Capps. The theory was that these vessels could attain higher speed and be more effective against the submarines. Vessels for use as transports are being constructed with a new system of bulkheads which, it is believed, will make them "unsinkable." It has been stated that at least three hits would have to be made by torpedoes to cause a disaster, and under the present system of convoy such a feat by a submarine is looked upon as impossible.

The recent reorganization of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, which put Charles A. Piez in direct charge of construction and provided for several organizers and efficiency experts, was brought about to speed construction on the vessels contracted for by providing speedy delivery of materials and a full quota of labor needed for two and three shifts of workmen.

The Program in Detail.

The following table shows the number of vessels under contract, pending contract, and requisitioned by the Emergency Fleet Corporation:

Type of Vessel.	Number of Vessels.	Total Deadweight Capacity.

Bethmann Hollweg Plans Big Political Mission

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Amsterdam says Pan German newspapers received there protest against Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the former Imperial Chancellor, being permitted to go to Switzerland on what they allege is a mission of great political importance, accompanied by his former assistant, Arnold Wahnschaffe, and a staff of secretaries.

KREISLER QUITS CONCERT TOUR

Violinist Finds That He Can't with Self-Respect Accept America's Money.

LOSES $85,000 CONTRACTS

War Sentiment Caused Managers to Cancel Austrian's Concerts in Several Cities.

Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, yesterday announced his virtual retirement from the concert stage for the period of the war, and asked for a general release from contracts outstanding by which he would have earned $85,000 in concerts that he had yet to play this season. Though some of these releases will be refused, it means the end of a tour arranged by C. A. Ellis of Boston for the violinist, who returned from a concert at Fall River, Mass., late last evening to his hotel in New York.

Kreisler had frankly told his personal friends here that under present conditions an artist belonging to a nation allied with this country's enemy in the war could not fairly and with self-respect continue to accept America's money. His statement in a more guarded way told his decision as follows:

"Bitter attacks have been made upon me as an Austrian and because at the outbreak of the war I fought as an officer in the Austrian army at the Russian front. I have also been criticised for fulfilling engagements under contracts made long ago. I therefore am asking all concerned to release me from my obligations under existing contracts. My promise will be kept to play, without compensation, for those charities to which I have already pledged my support. I shall always remain deeply sensible of my debt of gratitude to this country for past kindness and appreciation of my art."

Some of His Concerts Barred.

Three times last week Kreisler played in New York, the last of these to a great shouting demonstration Saturday afternoon at Carnegie Hall, just three years to a day since he had returned to America after being wounded in the thigh by a Cossack spear. The same change of sentiment that ended German opera at the Metropolitan this Fall affected the concert artists also. Mr. Kreisler found a woman's club had canceled his concert at Sewickley, Penn., on Nov. 3.

Since then, at Pittsburgh and Williamsport, Penn., as well as at Youngstown, Ohio, and Morgantown, W. Va., other concerts by him have been barred, officially so in one instance, at Pittsburgh, by Charles S. Hubbard, the Director of Public Safety. He filled engagements at Baltimore and at Washington, where he was heard by many of the Diplomatic Corps, and also at Hartford, where the Mayor in person ordered the concert to go on. Yesterday at Fall River he received as part of his fee ten $100 Liberty bonds.

Mr. Kreisler was disinclined to talk about his decision to end his tour. At the Hotel Wellington, he said: "I propose to live quietly and devote myself to composing some serious works that I have long had in mind." Kreisler married in this country some ten years ago and his wife is an American. In common with other American wives of foreign artists, Mrs. Kreisler herself has had more or less difficulty in adjusting herself to the complex situation arising since the war, and she was sharply criticised last Spring on the occasion of a patriotic demonstration in California.

Kreisler was born at Vienna, Feb. 2, 1875, and studied under Delibes and Massart at the Paris Conservatoire, where he took first prize in 1887. He made an American tour as a boy of 13 with the pianist, Rosenthal, but, like Josef Hofmann, about the same time, he was enabled to retire from the stage. He became a student of medicine, art, and military science, serving his term in the Austrian Army before he next appeared as a violinist in 1899 at Berlin. He toured America in 1900-01 with Hofmann and Gerardy, and has been a favorite here ever since.

The book of Kreisler's war experiences had a wide sale on its publication here three years ago. On the day before he was discharged as an invalid from his country's army, Lieutenant Kreisler was advanced in rank one grade, and was told by his regimental Commander that he was to be "mentioned for distinguished service." In all interview here since then he told what he thought artists could do to help all the nations now in conflict. He said:

"It is my fond hope that after the war has ended we artists will be in a position to carry first the message of peace through all the countries. Surely art and religion will be the first forces that will set about the great reconstruction of world sympathy.

"If, for instance, the dignified figure of Ysaye were seen on the concert stage of any country which had been hostile to his in the war, would there be any one equal to expressing animosity? I don't know what I myself will be able to do, because I have fought, and they may not be able to forgive me at first. I fear art and artists will suffer.

"When peace comes, although art will try to speak its message, will not all the energies of the nations be devoted to re-establishing the material things that are of first urgence? I fear all other things will have to wait for them.

"Then there are so many artists who have fallen. They may not be world-famous, but, after all, the art of a country is the sum of what all its artists are, and the individual does not loom large."

In a previous statement published in THE TIMES only yesterday, Kreisler had told that all his earnings since the war had been given to aid the artists of allied nations left stranded in Vienna, and to the support of orphans of Russian and Serbian soldiers whom his American wife had nursed in Austrian hospitals early in the war.

NO SOLDIERS SENT TO GUARD PIERS; ONLY POLICE THERE

Program as to Barred Zones Changed Here to Take in "Vital Points" Only.

WASHINGTON IS PUZZLED

Can't Understand Failure to Carry Out the Federal Instructions.

HOYLE MAKES INSPECTION

Alteration in the Program Announced After a Conference on His Return from Waterfront.

Although the enemy alien regulations promulgated by President Wilson last Monday and ordered into effect at midnight last night by Attorney General Gregory are theoretically now in full force, no soldier went on guard along the waterfront of New York at that hour. The statement given out by the Department of Justice in Washington on Saturday night was that soldiers of the regular army would assume charge of the waterfront problem at 12 o'clock last night, that they would wear blue uniforms to distinguish them from the khaki-clad fighters of the overseas forces, and that their orders would be to shoot any unauthorized person who refused to obey orders and sought to enter any part of the newly created barred zones.

Soldiers will probably be ordered to guard duty in what are termed "vital points" of the waterfront zones within the next day or two, but it may be a week before the army takes over control of all these "vital points." In the meantime, under an agreement entered into between the city and Federal authorities yesterday, a policeman will be assigned to duty at the entrance to every pier in New York. These policemen go on duty at 8 o'clock this morning.

Brig. Gen. Eli Hoyle, U. S. A., commanding the Eastern Department of the army, with headquarters on Governor's Island, accompanied by several Federal officials and representatives of the City Government, made a tour of inspection yesterday of the entire waterfront, which is included in the barred area of the metropolitan district. At the conclusion of that tour a statement was issued last night at the Governors Island headquarters, which read:

"The situation has been thoroughly canvassed, and the indications are that most of the piers and other waterfront locations are very well guarded and military guards may be placed only at points here and there, at which additional guards may seem needed. No definite action has been taken to spread soldiers over the entire waterfront, and it is not the intention at this hour (7 P. M.) to do so at midnight."

May Not Wear the Blue.

It was also indicated at the Governors Island headquarters that it may not be necessary to put soldiers, ordered to waterfront duties, in blue uniforms. It was said that when war was declared on Germany all the blue uniforms of the old army were packed away in moth balls for the duration of the war, and that all men who will be called for pier or munition factory duty in this part of the country are now in khaki, and that there would seem to be no reason why they should discard those uniforms for the out-of-date blue garments.

The waterfront populations of New York and New Jersey were on tiptoe, so to speak, all day yesterday as a result of the expected midnight coming of the soldiers. It was not until late last night that the news came from Governors Island that the soldiers would not appear on schedule time, and that it might be several days before they went on duty, and then only in certain parts of the barred zones. That the soldiers, as the situation now stands, will not guard the entire waterfront zone appears to be certain.

It appears, according to statements made in official quarters here last night, that the army will take over the guarding of piers, munition works, and other places which are considered to be "vital points," while the police, agents of the Department of Justice, and private watchmen will guard the less important places. It was said by one high Federal official, charged with the enforcement of enemy alien regulations, that some soldiers may go on duty in certain "vital points" in the waterfront zones this morning. These "vital points," he said, will be designated by the Attorney General probably today.

Soldiers for Vital Points.

"It has been decided," said Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox last night, "that the military will take over some of the more important points, and that, in addition, the Police Department will place a policeman on every pier and dock in New York. There will be a general tightening up of the patrol and guard on all docks, and it is probable that no person will be permitted to go on any pier unless he has in his possession certain means of identification, the nature of which will be announced very shortly."

The decision to place policemen on piers was announced after a long conference participated in by General Hoyle, Brigadier Gen. Jesse Carter, representing the Bureau of Militia Affairs in Washington; Mr. Knox, United States Marshals McCarthy of New York and Powers of Brooklyn, Dock Commis-

Five Rifles for Every Man In General Pershing's Army

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Senator Hitchcock, ranking member of the Senate Military Committee, issued a statement tonight saying he had investigated and found to be false several sensational and widely circulated rumors about America's war preparations.

He mentioned particularly reports that the expeditionary force in France was not properly equipped with rifles, when as a matter of fact there were five rifles for every man, and stories that the Liberty Airplane motor was a failure instead of a triumphant success. The Senator said he found that the motor, having stood all tests, was being manufactured in numbers at least doubly as large as the Aircraft Board had hoped for.

AMERICAN AIRMEN RESCUED AT SEA

Three Picked Up by Patrol Boat Off French Coast After 60-Hour Search.

LOST ON SUBMARINE HUNT

Party in Huge Triplane Is Found Famished—Includes Former Student at Yale.

A FRENCH PORT, Nov. 25.—Suffering from cold, exhaustion and hunger, three American naval airmen were picked up by a French patrol boat last night after having been lost at sea for nearly sixty hours.

The three men, in a huge triplane hydroaeroplane, left a French base Thursday morning in search of four enemy submarines which were reported operating off the coast.

When the men failed to return within the usual time fears were felt for their safety and other machines were sent out to search for them. The searching machines, however, returned after several hours and reported that they had seen no trace of the missing plane or its crew.

The naval authorities then sent out a general warning to all allied boats off the coast, and the search for the Americans was continued throughout Thursday night, all day and all night Friday, and throughout Saturday, with naval air machines assisting in the search during the daylight hours.

About dusk Saturday a French patrol boat saw the missing machine drifting helplessly several miles out at sea. A boat's crew rescued the three men, who were Ensign Kenneth Smith, a former Yale student, the pilot; Frank J. Brady of Newark, N. J., observer and gunner, and I. F. Wilkinson, mechanician.

The three men were virtually exhausted when picked up. They received first-aid treatment on the boat, which rushed them to this port, where they were transferred to a relief hospital. All the men have now recovered, and it is expectec that they will be able soon to resume their duties.

The boat's crew was unable to save the hydroaeroplane, which was sunk at sea.

Frank J. Brady, rescued off the coast of France, is the son of Mrs. Mary Brady, a widow of Newark. He served four years as a regular in the United States Army, part of the time on the Mexican border, and then became a member of the Fire Salvage Corps of Newark. He received a medal for saving the life of a man at a fire early this year. In this fire four men were killed. Brady enlisted in April and was sent abroad as a member of the first aero detachment, United States Navy. He has a record for extreme daring and intrepidity. He has several brothers in Newark, one of whom is Police Lieutenant John Brady, attached to headquarters.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 25.—Kenneth R. Smith is a former member of the class of 1917, Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University, and came to Yale from Patchogue, L. I. He sailed for the war front last September.

MEXICO WILL ADJUST CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES

Decree Establishes Bureau to Pass on Indemnities for Losses in the Revolution.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 25.—In accordance with a decree issued May 10, 1913, at Monclova, by the then First Chief, the President today issued a decree establishing a damage claim bureau to adjust claims arising during the revolution. A commission to deal with claims will be appointed by the President, who also will designate the rules of procedure.

All claims must be presented in Spanish, with as many affidavits of proof as possible. Each claim must outline the amount of damages and the name and nationality of the person making it. Claims must be based upon the destruction of private property, the requisitioning of money or animals, or personal injury. Under no condition will claims be considered because of loss of property.

Foreigners must attach to their claims certificates of nationality, or otherwise it will be assumed that they are Mexicans. Companies incorporated under the Mexican law will be considered Mexican concerns. When a foreigner shall be dissatisfied with an award he may present a personal claim through his diplomatic representative, which will be arbitrated by three persons—one designated by the President, one by the foreign diplomat, and one by mutual appointment. In no case may an arbitrator belong to the diplomatic or consular service. The term for the filing of claims will expire three years from the date of the signing of today's decree.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24.—Last evening the Bolsheviki Executive Committee of the Soviet discussed the peace negotiations. The Bolsheviki Premier Lenine, declared:

"Our party never said it would give peace immediately. We said we would make an immediate proposal for peace, and would publish the secret treaties. That we have done, and now begin the revolutionary struggle for peace. Victory is assured. The armistice will be attained by revolutionary methods."

That Lenine did not promise immediate peace is untrue. He did promise it, and that is why the masses followed him.

A member of the Soviet, Chudnovsky, said he doubted the good intentions of the Council of the People's Commissaries. Their action was one of colossal ineptitude. What Lenine, Italin, and Krylenko had done made it impossible for the soldiers to fight if the German Government refused to treat. An armistice must be concluded by the whole of Russia, and not by separate regiments.

Other members complained that the Executive Committee was not consulted before this rash measure was taken. Kameneff urged the Executive Committee to publish a special declaration that peace negotiations would not be begun unless the Germans gave guarantee that they would not take advantage of the armistice to transfer troops to other fronts.

Lenine evaded this demand by securing the relegation of the question to a small committee.

Lenine has been raised to power by the mob. His tenure depends on the fickle crowd who impatiently await fulfilment of his promises, and already the crowd is murmuring. The Socialist papers call his amazing peace campaign the desperate plunge of a hopelessly involved gambler.

Power for Destruction Great.

Of constructive power the Bolsheviki have none, but they have enormous power for destruction. They can make a wilderness and call it peace. They can finally demoralize the army and reduce it to a rabble of hungry, looting bands, who will stream across the country, block the railways, reduce the civil population to starvation and the extreme of terror, and will fight like wolves over their prey. That they can do in the name of peace, and that, if there is no opposing force, will be the effect of Krylenko's order. Already, as a result of their rising transport has been still further disorganized, food supplies for the front are blocked and the army commissaries are telegraphing stern warnings of danger of starvation.

The Bolsheviki have issued land decrees which can lead only to an immense Jacquerie. It is true that a decree orders that estates must be handed over to the land committees and kept intact for the peoples' use, but those who know the complexities of the Russian land problem and the mental level of the peasantry realize that the land committees from but a feeble barrier against their instinct to pillage when once roused.

When Lenine's associates criticised the glaring defects and contradictions of his land decrees he replied that those were merely formal objections, and that the great thing was to give peasants a principle which they themselves would work out in detail in accordance with local conditions. He did not believe in Parliaments, he believed only in "vital constructive power on the masses of the people."

When his friends reminded him of the growing gravity of the food problem he only shrugged his shoulders. When they objected to the dictatorial methods of legislation by decrees on which not even the Bolshevik Soviet was consulted, he coldly ignored criticism.

The publication of the secret documents at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs aroused no sensation. The substance of most of them was known beforehand. The Den declares that they are not worth an eggshell. The Novaya Zhizn admits that no new facts have been revealed and complains that the one-sided publication is all to the advantage of the Central Powers whose secret documents are unpublished. It declares, however, that this official confirmation of negotiations already PETROGRAD, Nov. 23, (Delayed.)—General Dukhonin refuses to surrender the chief command to Ensign Krylenko, and threatens to arrest him if he comes to headquarters. Krylenko left for headquarters tonight.

The Bolsheviki have appointed Colonel Muravieff War Minister.

The proposed Tchernoff Coalition Government has fallen through for lack of support from the army committees.

The Cadet Party and Constitutional Democrats have issued a declaration that no peace proposals issued by the Bolsheviki can be regarded as expressing the will of the Russian people.

Several regiments, in accordance with Lenine's orders, have sent peace parliamentaries to Russian headquarters, who have received a German wireless message saying the Germans refuse to receive the parliamentaries and will only negotiate with a legal Russian Government or Constituent Assembly. In any case, they will only begin negotiations if the Russian Army retires sixty miles.

ITALIANS REPULSE ASIAGO ATTACKS

First Army Takes the Offensive at Meletta, Capturing Machine Guns.

GUN DUELS ELSEWHERE

Berlin Reports "Successful Fighting" Between Brenta and Piave Rivers.

ROME, Nov. 25, (British Admiralty per Wireless Press.)—Troops of the Italian First Army on the Asiago Plateau yesterday repulsed several furious Austro-German attacks and counterattacked with success, the Italian War Office announced today.

The text of the statement reads:

On the Asiago Plateau heroic parties of our First Army, who for ten days uninterruptedly and without yielding a yard of ground have been fighting for the defense of the strong point of Meletta, yesterday again repulsed several furious enemy attacks and counterattacked with success. Two sections of machine guns were captured.

On the rest of the front there were only artillery actions.

Near Monte Grappa two enemy airplanes were brought down by one of our airmen.

BERLIN, Nov. 25, (via London.)—The failure of Italian assaults upon Austro-German positions in the northern battle sectors is reported in this afternoon's War Office statement, which says:

Italian attacks on both sides of the Brenta Valley and against Monte Pertica collapsed before our lines.

The supplementary report on the Italian operations issued this evening says:

Successful fighting occurred between the Brenta and Piave Rivers.

Prussian Guard Cut to Pieces.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 25.—The situation today is virtually unchanged all along the northern battle front and on the Piave River. The artillery activity continues violent, and here and there heavy fighting at scattered points is taking place. But there is a lull in the aggressive mass attacks, as both sides require time for the purpose of reforming their broken ranks.

The Prussian Guard regiment is among those contingents having the heaviest losses. Three battalions of the guard were thrown against the charge which carried the Italians back into one of their strategic mountain height positions. The guards were swept aside in an impetuous wave of enthusiasm, and only a battalion of them was able to reform in small groups.

Reports show that Italian aviators have brought down fifty-one enemy machines during the fighting of the last thirty days—or nearly two machines daily.

Exploits of Italian Artillery.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 24, (Delayed)—(Associated Press.)—Strong enemy attacks with artillery preparation continued throughout the day along the whole extent of front between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, but the enemy gained no ground, and all his attacks failed.

The fighting, while severe, was not of that whirlwind character of the last two days, and both sides are engaged in reorganizing their positions on the shifting front and taking a momentary respite from the tremendous strain of the last few days.

Another enemy attempt to cross the Piave on pontoons resulted in the wiping out of the pontoons and the men.

Further details of the fierceness of the recent fighting in the north were given to The Associated Press correspondent by an eyewitness returning from the battle line, who also told of many instances of daring by regiments, batteries, and individuals.

The Italian artillery has especially distinguished itself. In the fighting around Meletta d'Avanti a mountain battery was obliged to fall back with the in-

French Capture First and Second German Lines in Sunday Attack Near Verdun.

800 PRISONERS ARE TAKEN

Deep Dugouts Won in the Assault—French Also Successful in Saturday's Fighting.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—In an attack in the Verdun region Sunday the French troops captured first and second German lines of defense, including deep dugouts, and also took 800 Germans prisoner, according to the French official communication issued this evening.

The text of the communication reads:

In the region of the north of the Chemin des Dames and northwest of Rheims there has been marked activity by the two artilleries.

On the right bank of the Meuse we carried out this afternoon some operations of detail to the north of Hill 344 along a front of three and one-half kilometers, between Samogneaux and the region to the south of the Anglemont Farm. Our troops captured the first and second German lines, and also some deep dugouts organized by the enemy on the slopes to the south of the ravine in the Cauriers Wood. Thus far we have counted more than 800 prisoners.

In the Vosges a surprise attack on our small posts in the sector of Sondernach, southwest of Münster, failed.

On the rest of the front there is nothing to report.

The battle was preceded on Saturday by attacks made by the Crown Prince's troops on the French positions at several points on the right bank on the Meuse in the region of Verdun. The statement issued by the French War Office this afternoon says the battles ended in favor of the French, the Germans suffering serious losses in the hand-grenade fighting which developed.

The text of the French statement reads:

Northwest of Rheims two attacks on our advanced posts failed.

On the right bank of the Meuse, after the violent bombardment which was reported yesterday, the Germans hurled partial attacks at several points along this front. North of Hill 344 there was an especially strong struggle, in which hand-grenades were used, and it ended to our advantage. The enemy suffered severe losses without obtaining any result and leaving prisoners in our hands.

Before Beaumont and on the front of the Chaume Wood our fire prevented the enemy from approaching our lines.

The night was calm on the rest of the front.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—The French showed lively activity yesterday on almost the entire French front, particularly in the Champagne, in the Verdun region, and in upper Alsace. The night report from Army Headquarters says:

On the eastern bank of the Meuse French attacks are in progress between Samogneux and Beaumont.

The day official report says:

Army group of the German Crown Prince: The activity of the French continued lively on almost the whole front. Strong reconnoitring detachments pressed forward against our lines. There was an increase in artillery and mine-throwing engagements, especially northeast of Craonne, in several sectors in the Champagne, and on the eastern bank of the Meuse.

As the result of a successful enterprise west of Beaumont our storming troops brought in numerous prisoners.

Army group of Duke Albrecht: East of St. Mihiel and especially in the Sundgau there was intense artillery and mine-throwing fire. In Apremont Wood and near Ammerzweiler strong French thrusts were repulsed.

Germans Send In Guard Troops and Give Battle to British in the Open.

HAIG COMMENDS HIS TROOPS

Issues Order Congratulating Gen. Byng and His Men for "Splendid Results."

Haig Reports the Battle Still On for Bourlon

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Field Marshal Haig's report tonight read:

There has again been severe fighting today west of Cambrai. At midday the enemy strongly attacked the positions we held in the neighborhood of Bourlon and succeeded in pressing back our troops from portions of the village. Our positions in Bourlon Wood and on the high ground are intact.

Fighting also occurred on the Hindenburg support line west of Moeuvres, where we captured prisoners.

The number of prisoners taken since the commencement of our operations on the morning of Nov. 20 has now reched a total of 9,774, including 182 officers.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—There has been much traffic out of Cambrai southeastward during the last few days, indicating the probability that the Germans have forced the civil population to evacuate.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 25.—For two days there has been a great battle for the possession of Bourlon Wood, the high forest which commands all the country to the north and northeast, and for the villages of Inchy and Moeuvres, to the west of it, and for Fontaine Notre Dame and La Folie Wood to the east.

In all this fighting English battalions on the left across the first and second trenches of the great Hindenburg line up by the Louver-Valinchy Road, Yorkshire troops and other English battalions in the centre of the direct attack on the forest of Bourlon and Highlanders on the right working eastward of Bourlon Wood and up to Montaine Notre Dame, which they gained and lost in fierce attacks and counterattacks, have shown the most dauntless determination to make good the triumph of the first day, when they broke the German line.

Some of these men have been fighting now for nearly a week and have had no rest, no sleep except what was snatched in odd half hours lying out in the open beyond the trench lines or in the ruins of villages out of which they had routed the enemy. They have gone on short rations, as they are out in the blue, far from supplies. Since the first surprise on Tuesday morning, when they caught in their net of steel a great mass of dazed and frightened men, they have had to force their way forward or hold positions they had gained against great numbers of counterattacks from German troops hurled up to Cambrai from all available sources and against small garrisons and bodies of storm troops and patrols and snipers whose spirit had been rallied by their officers and who fought with really desperate courage to stop the gap made in their lines.

Fighting on Open Ground.

The break through of Tuesday morning has been followed by a ding-dong struggle along twelve miles or more of open country from Fronville to the east and south of Masnieres. It is a battle unlike anything we have seen since the early days of the war. It is open fighting again, away for the most part from trench systems, except on the left, where some Royal Fusiliers, Londoners they were, were extending their hold on further stretches of the Hindenburg line.

This open fighting is in a great sweep of undulating country where there is grass instead of shell pits and blasted earth, where one may stand in fields such as I walked over all day yesterday and on earlier days of this fighting, watching the battle in progress around the villages and woods, seeing our guns moving forward to new positions and the gun limbers galloping up with new supplies of ammunition, tramping alongside tanks going into action again, passed by patrols of cavalry scouting forward around little hamlets and woods or bringing back groups of newly captured men.

I watched all the progress of the day, with the German barrages suddenly opening up on new attacks of ours and with our batteries bursting out into long volleys of drumfire to repel counter-attacks. There was all the movement and drama of old-fashioned warfare before armies were locked between their trenches and a battlefield was the loneliest place in the world, because between one short rush and another from one trench to another no human being could be seen above ground and all the guns were hidden.

Germans Rush Up Artillery.

Before describing these wonderful scenes, which seem as unreal to me as faked war pictures on the foreign cinematograph, and just as crowded and dazing to my eyes, I must deal with the historic facts of the fighting on Friday and Saturday, working up, as I have said, to the capture of Bourlon Wood. It was essential for all further progress to gain that black forest, which covers 600 acres of high ground to the west of Cambrai.

The difficulty of capturing it was increased by the loss of Fontaine Notre Dame on the eastern side and by the strong defense of fresh German troops around Moeuvres and Inchy on the west. Our cavalry had not been able to make a great sweeping movement, though they had fought many gallant little actions about these fortified villages and rounded up many prisoners.

The enemy had been quick in rushing up guns. The weakness of his artillery on the first day, due partly to the wonderful counterbattery work of our splendid gunners, to the capture of over 100 guns and to the concentration of the enemy's artillery in Flanders, is no longer a great factor in our favor. The German high command has ordered up every available battery from other positions, and behind the German lines the roads must have been choked day and night by guns, and limbers on the march to the country around Cambrai, straining every nerve of horse and man to get to their new sectors in time to remedy their great disaster.

They have come up now, and yesterday I saw some very deadly barrage fire below Inchy and Moeuvres and south of Bourlon Wood as proof of their arrival. "They have been damn quick in getting on the ground," said one of the British gunners, and they spoke with a queer kind of admiration, as good sportsmen, of the rapidity with which German gunners had registered and gotten into action.

So it was not against a weak enemy and no longer with the first great gift of surprise that our men attacked Bourlon Wood yesterday and the day before, carried their battle line forward below Inchy and Moeuvres, and made a new assault on the village of Fontaine Notre Dame, where the Highlanders had fought forward and backward through streets now burning with a fierce red glow, though many houses still gave cover to machine gunners and snipers and German infantry.

Men Inside Tanks Suffered.

When the tanks advanced on Bourlon Wood they were driven and fought by men who had been bruised and shaken and banged inside those narrow forts, who had been drenched by sweat in the great heat, who needed sleep with a drunken craving, who were in continual peril of death, but who goaded themselves with a spiritual spur in order to do their job well and add to the honor of the tanks. So they moved steadily toward the enemy and his guns, inside their queer, beastlike things, which look very sinister as they go forward in the grey light of dawn, as I have seen them.

Little bodies of cavalry were riding on their flanks, and the infantry came behind in open order—those Highlanders and Yorkshiremen and other English and Welsh battalions which had been fighting since Monday night. The tanks and infantry gained and held the sunken road southwest of Bourlon Wood, and a number of tanks were seen advancing steadily in a northwesterly direction from the village of Graincourt.

Another tank was going well 500 yards south of Fontaine Notre Dame and by Anneux there was still another group of tanks in echelon formation, advancing northward to get on the east side of the forest and drive a wedge between that and Fontaine Notre Dame. The enemy's guns answered rockets which went up from the German troops, each light like a wail for help, and laid down a heavy barrage of high explosives and shrapnel south of the forest and all along the line of our attack.

HEIGHTS CHANGE HANDS IN DESPERATE BATTLE

Haig Tells of Bourlon Success and Issues Order Praising His Troops.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—At the end of two days of fighting, as hot as any that has marked General Byng's great struggle for Cambrai, the British remain in possession of part of Bourlon Village and nearly the whole of Bourlon wood, three and a half miles west of Cambrai, including all the high ground in the wood. The village has changed hands at least three times and part of the wood four times.

The British captured the village in the early part of the fighting, but on Friday night the Germans launched a counter-attack in force and recovered possession of it. All day Friday and Saturday the struggle for parts of the wood proceeded with varying fortune, and on Saturday night the British clinched their hold on both the wood and the village with a fierce attack.

Today the struggle was renewed by the Germans, and at noon they succeeded in pressing back the British from portions of the village, but could not budge their British lines in the wood, which Field Marshal Haig reports tonight to be "intact."

There was fighting also today on the Hindenburg support line west of Moeuvres, the advantage resting with the British. Dismounted cavalry has been active in General Byng's operations.

Haig Congratulates Byng's Army.

The following special order of the day was issued by Field Marshal Haig on Sunday:

"The capture of the important Bourlon position yesterday crowns a most successful operation and opens the way to the further exploitation of advantages already gained. In the operations of the third army during the last four days the troops engaged were called on to advance under conditions different from anything ever attempted before. The manner in which they adapted themselves to the new conditions was in all respects admirable, and the results gained by their efforts are of far-reaching importance.

"Although practically all the divisions employed have already been engaged in severe and prolonged fighting this year, all arms and services have met these fresh calls on them in a manner worthy the highest traditions of the British Army.

"In this battle the tanks for the first time have been afforded an opportunity of working in large numbers and of showing their special value under conditions suitable to them. Without them the complete surprise gained would not have been possible, could not even been attempted. Their performances have entirely justified the trust placed in them.

"Infantry, artillery, and aircraft have co-operated with efficiency and complete devotion to duty, in which they never fail. The cavalry has co-operated with the other arms with excellent results. The Royal Engineers, the Signal Services, Transportation Services, Army Service Corps, and the various administrative services concerned each performed most valuable work.

"To General Sir Julian Byng and his staff, to the commanders and staffs under him, and to all arms and services engaged in these operations my thanks and warmest congratulations are due for the manner in which they prepared and carried through the operations and on the splendid results achieved.

"I also express my obligation to all ranks at general headquarters for the success with which they have met the severe strain imposed by the arrangements for these operations, in addition to the sudden movement of troops to Italy, the operations on the Flanders front, and the many other movements and reliefs which had to be carried out simultaneously.

"The operations on the third army front would in all probability have miscarried if the enemy had gained timely warning of our intentions, and a most satisfactory feature in connection with these operations is the complete secrecy maintained. For this my thanks are due to all concerned."

The day report from Field Marshal Haig reads:

Fighting in and about Bourlon Wood continued yesterday afternoon and evening with great stubbornness on both sides, the enemy counterattacking several times.

On Friday night strong hostile counterattacks forced our troops back from Bourlon Village, which we had entered on our first advance, and in the early morning of Saturday a powerful attack delivered by the enemy further to the east pressed us back a short distance on the hill in Bourlon Wood.

Later in the morning a successful counterattack by our troops drove the enemy from the hill, and before midday we had re-established our lines on the northern edge of Bourlon Wood.

Fighting continued during the afternoon and at dusk the enemy again attacked with strong forces from the northeast, forcing our troops back slightly in the northeastern corner of the wood.

Early in the night our troops again attacked and re-entered Bourlon Village, capturing it after a fierce struggle, in which parties of the enemy offered obstinate resistance in strong points in the village.

Bourlon Village and practically the whole of Bourlon Wood, including all the high ground within it, now are in our possession.

In the course of these operations English, Welsh, and Scottish battalions, assisted by dismounted cavalry, displayed the utmost courage and tenacity both in attack and defense.

BERLIN, Nov. 25, (British Admiralty per Wireless Press.)—German guard troops launched a counterattack last night against the British troops which had pushed forward as far as Bourlon village, west of Cambrai, and after desperate bayonet fighting drove them back to their former positions, the German General Staff announced today. Thick waves of British infantry, the statement adds, four times fruitlessly assaulted the village of Inchy, west of Bourlon.

The German Army Headquarters statement reads:

Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders the artillery duel increased in the afternoon between Houthulst Wood and Zandvoorde. An English advance at the Ypres-Menin road failed.

On the battlefield southwest of Cambrai there were violent but locally limited engagements.

The English brought up strong forces in fresh attacks against Inchy. Thick waves of infantry stormed fruitlessly on four occasions. Their losses were especially heavy. Our troops gained several hundred yards of ground by a counterthrust.

After violent firing the enemy attacked in the evening at the village and wood of Bourlon, and under the cover of fog clouds pushed forward as far as the village. In a desperate night battle, guard fusiliers brought up for a counterattack drove the enemy back with the bayonet into his former positions, while Pomeranian Grenadiers, at the edge of the wood, overcame every enemy assault.

After the failure of an early attack on Banteaux there were only minor local attacks in the afternoon.

The supplementary report from General Headquarters this evening says:

In Flanders and southwest of Cambrai there was lively firing activity in several of the sectors.

CHARGES AMERICA FIGHTS FOR POTASH

German Paper Alleges Our 'Real War Aim' Is a Scheme for Agricultural Wealth.

PREDICTS MOVE ON SUNDGAU

Presence of Pershing's Troops Near Alsatian Deposits Is Called Significant.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 25.—The Berlin Vossische Zeitung pretends to have discovered that America's real war aim is the acquisition of Alsace-Lorraine's potash deposits. The paper editorially asserts that while the acquisition of the provinces has been made popular by catchwords the ultimate purpose, "now daily admitted in America," is "a paying peace."

The Vossische Zeitung admits that the iron ore districts of Diedenhofen, with that of Briey-Longwy-Nancy-Calvados, would make France the richest iron country in Europe, but insists that the potash deposits between Mulhausen and Zinheim are the question of the hour. It says that the American authorities claim that their country possesses deposits of potash and saltpetre, but that the deposits are only chlorate of potash, while the Alsatian potash would enrich France agriculturally four times and help her economically in many ways after the war.

It is unnecessary, says the paper, to cite Germany's unwillingness to give up one square yard of the German Lorraine iron ore districts, as these are imperative for Germany, industrially and agriculturally. The Alsace potash deposits, it proceeds to say, represent another economic phase of the situation, and many persons are ignorant of the fact that whereas coal and iron are the basis for industrial development potash is the "third trump" after the war.

Valued at $12,000,000,000.

"Politicians or geologists, not interested in potash," the paper says, "must be ignorant of Alsace's riches, which France valued before the war at sixty milliards of francs."

Some persons have advocated giving France a small portion of the potash district in exchange for other territory, says the Vossische Zeitung, but that would be a gross error. France is already counting upon the advantage of Alsace's potash it says, with America supporting her, and even the English are beginning to see the advantage of the Allies acquiring potash outside of Germany.

The American press now admits, it asserts, that the United States' most important crops, such as cotton, tobacco, sugar beets, and fruit trees, all require potash more than rain, and in 1913 America received 250,000 tons, but since that time practically nothing. In spite of energetic efforts very small quantities have been obtained elsewhere, the article contends, and America is still dependent upon the Central Powers for potash.

The most important part of the whole question, the Vossischs Zeitung says, is that if the embargo on German potash were removed Germany's potash monopoly would not exist and America would obtain a cheaper potash and "our best economic weapon against America would disappear."

[As already cabled, Germany is reckoning on the potash monopoly for obtaining in exchange large quantities of sorely needed raw materials after the war.]

Suspects Pershing's Purpose.

The paper asserts that, while the American troops are now on a "quiet part of the front," it is to be expected that they will soon be moved to Sundgau, on the Rhine-Rhone canal, in order to claim the potash deposits at present in German hands. Since America failed in her enterprise in 1910 [referring to the plans of the American potash syndicate in Germany at that date, which were unsuccesful owing to Germany's policy] it is alleged that Americans are even capitalizing a scheme for enlarging the canal from Mülhausen to Marseilles in order to facilitate the transportation of potash to that port, and that immediately after the conclusion of peace some German potash deposits are to be claimed as natural compensation owing to the fact that the French works have been destroyed by fire. It will be demanded, according to the paper, that Germany deliver potash at cost price in order that France can maintain her place as a competitor in the world market.

"It is evident," remarks the Vossische Zeitung, "that America has grasped the importance of the potash problem better than many of us."

The paper asserts that statements about potash deposits in Tunis, Erythrea, Catalonia, Cuba, Peru, and North America are mostly sheer bluff, whereas in Germany are whole provinces with rich deposits, and that this is one of Germany's assets.

"Nothing must be given away," it says, "and only step by step shall we deliver potash to neutrals and, after the war, to enemies. But neutrals and enemies will need increasing quantities of potash at the conclusion of peace, as the soil becomes poor. Grain crops have almost disappeared, Australia excepted, and cotton crops have greatly decreased. If they refuse us raw materials we will revenge ourselves on the enemy's agriculture, and have as our device 'No potash for enemies.'"

The paper concludes with a warning that to achieve this aim, Germany's potash monopoly must remain intact.

ALLIED FORCES CLOSE TO ITALIAN FRONT

British Correspondent Says They Are a Powerful Factor in Reserve.

ITALIAN HOPES RISING

Germans Believed to Have Withdrawn Some Troops, Possibly for a New Balkan Drive.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Ward Price, British press representative at Italian Headquarters, telegraphing under date of Nov. 23, says:

"Every day it becomes clearer that the crucial point of the present battle on the Italian front is that twelve-mile gap between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, and more especially the eastern corner of the mountainous sector where Monte Tomba stands.

"Around this latter height fierce attacks and counterattacks are going on. The Austro-Germans, however, cannot descend into the plain until they have taken Monte Grappa, of which Monte Tomba is a lower spur. What makes the determined enemy drive downward into the plain so formidable a manoeuvre is the fact that it brings the invaders gradually nearer the heart of the region directly in the rear of the Italian third army on the Piave. In fact, the third army is in a similar position to that in which it found itself on the Carso after the enemy had opened a gap in the Italian line at Caporetto, with this difference, that no effective resistance was put up after the fall of Caporetto to the Austrian advance upon the left rear of the third army. In the present circumstances the Italian fourth army, on the left of the third, is fighting with firm determination, heedless of weariness and heavy losses, to fend off this thrust by which the enemy is trying to roll up our right wing from the flank against the lagoons and swamps of the Venetian coast.

"Some people are asking in Italy, and perhaps in England, too, 'Why don't we hear of English and French troops taking part in this important fighting?' Where are the Allies' reinforcements?' Without a knowledge of staff secrets it is perhaps easier for one on the spot to frame an answer to these questions from facts plain for all to see at present in Northern Italy. In the first place, there was bound to elapse a certain length of time between the decision to send these troops and their arrival in the line as a fighting force. The decision of a council of the Allies needs to be supplemented by a vast number of slowly rolling troop trains before reinforcements can arrive in one theatre of war from another, and the number of those trains is immense. Every single wagon and truck that can possibly be made available is being used. I was reluctantly obliged to go by train the other day, but the weariness of creeping along in a civilian train, hours overdue, was almost compensated by the fact that every mile or so I seemed to meet another train-load of cheering, singing English Tommies, whose shouts of 'Viva Italia!' filled the Italian civilians in my carriage with enthusiasm.

"The fact that these were English troops we met was a good sign, for, naturally, the French, being nearer, arrived first; but even when new troops like these have reached Italy it takes a little while for them to settle themselves before they can be moved up into the battle. Supply services need to be installed, and officers have to be taught the lie of the country. I have met several motor cars full of English officers close up to the present fighting line, reconnoitring the ground, and, even though we do not hear of English and French troops already in action, it is a great element of strength that our reinforcements to the Italian Army do by now constitute a large, compact, and fresh reserve in their rear.

"It would not be too encouraging a position for an enemy General who had at length succeeded in opening a gap in the stubborn front of our Italian allies to find his exhausted troops faced by a mass of French and English divisions of the first quality, seasoned to war, yet refreshed by months of rest and change of scene. It seems likely that a certain proportion of the German troops that took part in the great offensive on the Isonzo months ago have now been withdrawn, and the question naturally arises whether this drive into the Italian peninsula may not be followed by another against the Allied army in the Balkans. Really bad Winter weather does not as a rule begin in Macedonia before the New Year, and the temptation to make an effort to restore Constantine to the throne will be a strong one, now that the Germans seem to dispose of mobile reserves on the very treshold of the Balkan peninsula.

Telegraphing on Nov. 24, Mr. Price says:

"We are at another crisis in the effort to hold up the Austrian invasion, but it is a crisis that seems to be turning in favor of the Italians. Monte Tomba is the point where this struggle reaches its climax, and, although it is touch and go, the strong impression with which I returned from my visit to responsible people on the spot is that we shall hold the enemy here, though this height of sinister name is certain to see terrible fighting within the next few days.

"Monte Tomba has two peaks. The eastern summit has been lost and won, and lost again, and now the enemy is still clinging precariously to a position on each side, bringing up guns and reinforcements, and the week-end will probably see a trial of strength on this bare mountain top that will do much to decide whether the present Italian line can be held without further modification throughout the Winter or not."

NO SEPARATE PEACE, LENINE REPORTS

known in part exposes the "cynicism of imperialistic diplomacy."

Among the documents published today those respecting offers of territory to Greece and negotiations preceding the entry of Rumania into the war, readers of the various White, Blue and Orange books will find nothing novel in the diplomatic methods here revealed, and the crowd, ignorant of geography and incapable of understanding diplomatic style, will simply be bored and bewildered by the multiplicity of documents published in the Bolsheviki press.

The Military Revolutionary Committee has suppressed three Socialist papers and the Moscow branch of the State Bank has been seized by the Bolsheviki, the manager arrested, and the gold deposit confiscated. The head of the bank has just transferred to Moscow 100,000,000 rubles for the payment of the wages of workers in the Moscow factories. The employes in the State and private banks at Moscow have decided to strike unless the Bolsheviki withdraw their emissaries and guard from the State Bank.

The Military Revolutionary Committee here, having received a complaint from the northern front of the critical state of the food supplies, has placarded the town with a proclamation laying the whole blame for the calamity on the Government officials now on strike and threatening them with a penalty proportionate to the "enormity of their crime."

The officials of the Ministry of Finance today issued an emphatic reply, pointing out that since the Bolsheviki raising the Treasury has issued $250,000,000 for food supplies for the army and separate allowances, and that the Ministry of Food Supplies has not stopped work for a day, though it ignores the Bolsheviki agents.

Kerensky Sends Resignation.

Kerensky, who is still in hiding, has resigned.

The Military Revolutionary Committee offered to release two of the imprisoned Ministers, Kartasheff and Bernatsky, but they refused to accept the offer unless all their colleagues were released simultaneously.

The Military Revolutionary Committee agreed to release all if they would sign a declaration that they recognized the new Government, but this the Ministers refused to do.

The elections to the Constituent Assembly begin in Petrograd tomorrow. The Bolsheviki have confiscated the electoral literature of the party of Populist Socialists and torn down the posters of several parties in many parts of the town. The soldiers threaten that if the majority of the Constituent Assembly is not Bolshevik they will disperse it with bayonets. Theurelli, who is now in Petrograd, predicts that there will be strong Bolshevik and Cadet wings in the Constituent Assembly, but that the more moderate Socialist parties will hold the balance. In the absence of any guarantee of liberty at elections there is slight hope that the assembly will really be representative of Russia.

Peasants Called in Conference.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25.—Leon Trotzky, Foreign Minister in the Bolshevik Cabinet, has sent a note to the diplomatic representatives of neutral powers in Petrograd, according to the official news agency, informing them of the measures taken by the Government to obtain an armistice. The note adds:

"The consummation of an immediate peace is demanded in all countries, both belligerent and neutral. The Russian Government counts on the firm support of workmen in all countries in the struggle for peace.

A proclamation, signed "Spiridinov, Chairman of the Assembly," has been addressed to all delegates from the armies at the front and division and district deputies. It says:

"An extraordinary assembly has been opened. Comrades are requested to come immediately to a conference of the all-Russia peasant delegates. One should be sent from each district and each division."

Russia a Prey to All.

Proclamations have been posted, alleging that the Bourgeoise is blocking efforts to provision the army and to provide funds for the support of the Government. They are signed by Lenine and Trotsky. Another proclamation forecasts wholesale arrests and imprisonments at Kronstadt as it instructs soldiers to disband committees opposing the Bolsheviki program and to arrest the members.

The committee on thesalvation of the revolution in a proclamation to the army, declares that the last step of the Bolsheviki is final ruin for Russia. The proclamation says:

"The Allies will consider all Russians traitors. Without resources Russia will be a prey to any one who chooses to pluck her. Abandoned, you will be at the mercy of Germany and will have to beg on her knees for clemency. This is where Lenine and Trotzky are leading."

The only possibility of saving the country, it is pointed out, is for the army to refuse to carry out the armistice proposal and demand that legal measures toward peace which might find support from the Allies and lead to the accomplishment desired, be taken.

The Bolsheviki have taken over the State Bank in Moscow, whose vaults are estimated to contain 700,000,000 rubles.

PETROGRAD, Friday, Nov. 23, (Midnight.)—At a meeting of the Central Executive Committee of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies tonight, the Bolshevik Premier, Lenine, replying to criticism directed against the order that the soldiers open negotiations for an armistice, which order a wounded soldier termed a great blunder on the part of the Council of National Commissioners, explained that the order was issued in the desire to combat the counter-revolutionary tactics of General Dukhonin and other high officers, making it impossible for them to prevent the opening of negotiations.

This, he said, was in keeping with the policy of the democratic Government, that the masses themselves act, since the bureaucrats, civil and military, were distrusted. He pointed out that the soldiers were not empowered to sign a treaty for an armistice, but only to negotiate it.

Lenine declared that Russia did not contemplate a separate peace with Germany; that the belief that an armistice on the Russian front would make it possible for Germany to throw a large force on the French front was groundless, as the Russian Government, before signing a treaty for an armistice, would communicate with the Allies and make certain proposals to "the Imperialistic Governments of France and England, rejection of which would place them in open opposition to the wishes of their own peoples."

The autocratic methods of the Council of National Commissioners, as instanced by the issuance of decrees relating to an armistice without consulting the Central Executive Committee of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, which is the highest governing body in Russia today, have caused dissension in the ranks of the Bolshevik camp. The conflict between the protesting members of the committee, notably the Social Revolutionists and the Council of the National Commissioner, is ripening. The question of the authority of the Council to issue an order to the soldiers to open peace negotiations was heatedly discussed.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The State documents made public by the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, Trotzky, at Petrograd news agency, show that France claimed that she was entitled to the return of Alsace-Lorraine, the iron and coal districts of France, and the wooded regions on the left bank of the Rhine.

There were also to be separated from Germany and freed from all political and economic dependence upon Germany certain territories which were to be formed into free neutral States. These would be occupied by Russian troops until certain guarantees were fulfilled and peace was concluded.

One document refers to the reported conference of financiers in Switzerland last September, in which Great Britain denies having participated, concerning which it is suggested that the German delegates insisted on the cession of the Baltic provinces and the independence of Finland.

A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd under date of Friday, Nov. 23, says that the allied diplomatic representatives had a two hours' conference at the British Embassy on that day and weighed all the bearings of the Maximalist armistice order: Ensign Krylenko, the new Commander in Chief of the army, asked by an interviewer why the German army had failed to take advantage of Russia's troubles, is reported as having replied:

"The German proletariat is hand in hand with us and will not allow official Germany to hamper the fulfillment of a great cause."

The Military Revolutionary Committee has ordered the dissolution of the Committee for the Salvation of the Country and Revolution, the dispatch adds, because the latter committee urged the employes of the State Bank not to deliver funds to the Maximalists.

STOCKHOLM, Sunday, Nov. 24.—Ira Nelson Morris, American Minister to Sweden, today announced that he had received advices from Russia that Michael Rodzianko, formerly President of the Duma, and General Michael Alexieff, ex-Commander in Chief of the Russian armies, had joined General Kaledines, Hetman of the Don Cossacks, and that the Ukrainian Parliament had adopted a resolution against General Kaledines.

GERMAN PRESS CAUTIOUS.

Points Out in Regard to Russian Offer There Is No Real Government.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 25.—The German press is still decidedly cautious regarding the Russian armistice proposal. Probably the fact that the Russian commanding general did not deliver the proposal is one of the reasons for caution, the other being that Germany recognizes, as the Lokal-Anzeiger points out, that no real government has been formed as yet.

Count zu Reventlow echoes the same warning, remarking that no one knows what Lenine is. The Kreuz Zeitung asks whether the Russian commanding general agrees to an armistice, and even the socialist Vorwärts questions the advisability of such a proposition.

The National Liberal Weser Zeitung warns people to be strong and cool, saying that, although Russia is a great and populous country, her strength has been weakened internally and she cannot offer much. "When we know the Government to be strong," it goes on, "we can negotiate with it. * * * The unweakened enemy would, however, attack with renewed fury if peace were made with Russia, feeling that the hour of decision had arrived." The paper continues that, even if this peace were concluded, it would bring Germany no rest. She must increase her force and courage in order to obtain a lasting peace in the west, as England would never follow Russia's example.

Meantime, report has spread that Germany has picked up a Russian wireless message stating that the Russian army has not supported the Maximalist government's proposal of an armistice. This report is unconfirmed and may have been spread by the German Government as a cold douche to the peoples of the Central Powers, especially the Austrian Social-Democrats, who are inclined to look favorably on the truce offer.

BARON STERNBERG RESIGNS.

Secretary Won't Stay in Russian Embassy Under Bolsheviki.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Baron Renaud d'Ungern Sternberg, Second Secretary of the Russian Embassy, announced today that he had resigned yesterday, with the three other officials, who, with the approval of Ambassador Bakhmeteff, left the service of the Russian Government because of the Bolsheviki control of the Foreign Office at Petrograd.

Except for the Ambassador himself, the embassy now is without diplomatic officials. An adequate staff of experts will be retained, however, to carry on the work of the embassy, which Mr. Bakhmeteff purposes to keep open and active in behalf of Russia and Russians in this country until such a time as the United States recognizes a successor to him. The Ambassador informed Secretary Lansing of his plans yesterday in a letter giving formal notice of his defantry. Every officer of the battery had been killed except the Captain, who was badly wounded. While bleeding on the ground he called two gunners, ordered them to set up the wreck of the remaining gun, and directed them to fire from this point. The last seen of him was on the ground behind this piece.

Two other batteries were brought into action yesterday morning. The enemy fire was so fierce that a whole battery was nearly swept away. As the Captain was killed, his place was taken by a Lieutenant. When the last gun was destroyed in a storm of shells the few gunners about him seized their bayonets and joined the infantry as it swept forward in a charge, and were among those who drove back the enemy in one of the fiercest attacks.

In another case an explosion almost buried one of the mountain batteries in debris and killed the Captain. The Austrians tried to occupy the position over this buried battery, but the battery men first drove the enemy back, then dug out their guns and twenty men, and carried them back, so that the guns again are in service today.

At another point all the artillery horses were killed and it was impossible to move two batteries to a new position until the gunners had unlimbered the pieces under fire and had carried the wheels and trunnions on their shoulders to new positions.

Many young Venetians are displaying conspicuous valor, as they feel their city is endangered. One of these Venetian Corporals expressed their general sentiments in these words:

"We saw the plight of the refugees driven from the Friuli region, and we don't intend to have our mothers and sisters go through another experience like that."

There have been many instances of wearing the Italian uniform. When Austrian prisoners are captured wearing the Italian uniform summary action is taken at once, without the formalities of trial.

An Austrian officer was caught yesterday in the uniform of an Italian Lieutenant Colonel. Speaking good Italian, he was mingling among the soldiers and gathering information. Another suspect was seen here in various uniforms—those of an Italian Captain, a soldier, and a Chaplain. He escaped last night, but was captured today in the uniform of a Chaplain.

AIR RAID ON VENICE.

Damage by Austrians Confined Chiefly to Tombs in the Cemetery.

VENICE, Nov. 25, (delayed, Associated Press.)—The sound of the shelling at the mouth of the Piave continues to be heard in Venice, but the first fears of the small part of the population remaining have been considerably relieved as the Italian forces offer steady resistance along the line of the river.

An enemy airplane raid took place yesterday, a number of bombs being dropped. Two exploded in the cemetery, wrecking some of the tombs. Others fell in the water basin in the square or San Marco and the Grand Canal, and one near the railway station, without doing damage. Still others struck the barracks of the carabinieri near Mestre, the land station of Venice, but did little damage.

AIDS WORKERS OF VENICE.

American Red Cross Advances Funds for Refugees from the City.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ITALIAN ARMY IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 24, (Delayed.)—Majors Bicknell and Devine and Captain Kellogg of the American Red Cross were at headquarters today concluding an inquiry in connection with an extensive plan of relief work which the Americans are undertaking for the entire refugee civilian population suddenly swept from Eastern Venetia. This is a vast work, as more than half a million people followed in fering incredible hardships, many of them dying along the roads.

One of the most effective American relief measures is that of taking care of the entire working population of Venice, which has been compelled to leave under the menace of a bombardment. With the American Consul the Red Cross representatives went over the situation in conference with the Civil Council of Venice, and placed at the disposal of the council 265,000 lire ($53,000) to meet immediate requirements.

A large part of the working class of Venice has been engaged in making boots and shoes for the army, and the evacuation has threatened to leave them without work or means of support. The Americans have undertaken, in conjunction with the city authorities, to re-establish all these industries at Rimini, near Ancona, and in the cluster of industrial towns around Rimini. The working population will be transported there, and the boot and shoe industries resumed, thus helping the army as well as the workers. A number of other industries will also be set up.

The American officials have met here Count Ferry, head of the relief work in forwarding refugees to various southern points.

Arrangements have been made for the Americans to take up the work of assisting the families of Italian soldiers killed or wounded. Count Ferry has received 5,000 lire as a preliminary, and this amount will be supplemented as the needs of the refugees are systematized.

The officials also went to Treviso, where they inspected the deserted city, which is along one of the main highways of the fleeing refugees. They will visit Verona, Milan, Genoa, Florence, Bologna, and the central and southern districts where refugees are collected, down to Sicily.

The tour was ordered by Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, head of the American Red Cross in Europe, and reports based on the present survey of all the main centres will develop the full extent of the important work.

Members of the American Red Cross went along the Piave line yesterday visiting the commanding officers and inspecting some of the scenes of the recent heavy fighting. They were most cordially welcomed.

Reports of a possible declaration of war by the United States against Austria arouse the keenest interest and enthusiasm in all ranks and in civilian quarters. It is felt that such action would give new impetus and inspiration good cheer from oversea

There is pluck and good cheer in the current number of British SYSTEM, a business magazine published in London by the proprietors of the well known magazine SYSTEM in this country:

"Three years ago, when this Empire went to war, we wrote, 'British industry today faces a distinct opportunity rather than a catastrophe. Every trader ought to go about his business with the super-vigor that a large hope inspires.' It is because British business men have followed such principles that efficiency has been raised, betterments made in every direction, and industry and commerce are in flourishing condition."

The American owners have watched their British publication since the war began, taking it as a barometer of business conditions across the water whose readings, if minor, were ungarbled. The steady climb of its advertising revenue and circulation assures them, if nothing else did, that all is well commercially with the "tight little isle."

PRISONER PERIL IN RUSSIA.

Swiss Paper Fears Lenine Will Release a Million Teutons.

GENEVA, Nov. 25.—Commenting upon Lord Robert Cecil's declaration against recognition of Lenine's regime in Russia, the Journal de Genève says:

"Lenine never acknowledged that Russia had any duties toward its allies, and they must realize that Lenine rules at Petrograd. His proposal of an armistice with Germany is dangerous, because if he can find even one Russian General to sign this monstrous treason with him the agreement probably would result in the release of 1,000,000 German prisoners against the Allies."

The paper suggests that if Lenine is to be bought the Allies should buy him.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—"Petrograd is being terrorized by the Lenine, Trotzky, and Kameneff band in a manner analogous to that used by the Bonnot automobile bandits, which terrorized Paris some years ago," said M. Marlakoff, the Russian Ambassador to France, in an interview printed today by the Excelsior. The diplomat added:

"Here is my forecast: The Maximalist régime will disappear before the famine day enters Petrograd."

The Ambassador said he did not believe it possible for the Maximalists to hand the German prisoners over to Germany, as the prisoners are scattered over an immense territory far from Petrograd, Moscow, or the battlefront.

FRENCH MAINTAIN AIR SUPERIORITY

Intense German Efforts Fail to Regain the Lead in Airplane Construction.

FOE DEVELOPS NEW TYPES

Has Established 30 New Factories, Largely to Offset Our Entry Into the War.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Nov. 25.—There has not been in the recent fighting on the front in France much sign of the revival in German aviation for which great efforts have certainly been made since the appointment of General von Hoepner as dictator of the air services of the empire a year ago.

Some force must have been drawn way to meet the needs of the Italian offensive, and the losses of machines in France and Belgium have been very heavy. The French Army in the last ten months has brought down 517 German planes, to say nothing of more than a score of observation balloons, and it is believed that 513 more airplanes fell within the enemy lines.

Markedly in advance of the Allies at the beginning of the year, Germany was at the time of the battle of the Somme no less markedly behind them in this arm. General von Bülow admitted it plainly in an alarming report. An effort to recover at least an equality was at once begun, and it was further stimulated by the entry of the United States into the war and the fear of what that would presently mean. Various favors were accorded to aviators, and thousands of vigorous men were attracted into the service. Manufacturers were stirred up, and by the end of last August thirty new airplane and hydroaeroplane factories had been established, while older makers had greatly extended their works.

The chief attention was given to squadrons of chasing planes and bombarding groups. Albatross and other types were standardized, the Gotha works at Erfurt received large orders, especially for their three-seater, double-motor bombarding plane. The best Benz and Mercedes motors were also standardized, and the personnel of the hangars was enlarged, a squadron of six planes having attached to it 100 or even 120 men. Among the other types favored may be mentioned the light and rapid Halberstadt-Rolland, the Fokker triplanes, and also that rapid riser, the 1917 Rumpler, with a Mercedes 200-horse power motor, which is at present the best German scouting plane, and the new Junker machine, with a wholly metallic body, which is intended to accompany an infantry advance. The two-motor bombarding planes can carry 1,000 pounds of bombs, and can rise to a height of three miles in forty minutes.

The service enjoys such advantages as belong to a practical dictatorship, and yet the only direction in which it has decidedly scored is that of promiscuous slaughter in London and in such French towns as Nancy, Dunkirk, and Bar-le-Duc. On the front the French maintain their superiority. In all of the French offensives of this year, particularly at Verdun and on the Aisne, it has been clearly shown, and on several critical occasions the enemy planes have been practically driven from the field.

In a recently published list of "aces," as the French calls pilots who have brought down five or more adversaries, there are forty-eight French names, thirty-seven of the men being alive and eleven dead or missing, against fifty-seven Germans, of whom, however, twenty-nine were in the latter category; so that the French had a considerable superiority in surviving champions.

Favorable as the situation is, it would be a great mistake to underestimate the efforts the German Army and its industrial partners are making. The 100 machines per month destroyed by the French and those similarly disposed of by the British are far from neutralizing the output of the German factories, and superiority in this essential arm of modern battle cannot be pushed too far.

GALE STOPS AIR FIGHTERS.

British Drop Bombs from Machines in the Fighting in France.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The following report on aerial operations was issued tonight:

The weather was bad Saturday, but several aerial reconnoissances were carried out. In the battle area bombs were dropped on the enemy and machine gun fire was opened against his troops. In the afternoon the violence of the gale made it almost impossible for machines to leave the ground. One of our airplanes has not returned.

The following report on the air fighting on Friday was issued:

The enemy's airplanes showed more activity in attacking our bombing and low-flying machines. During the night a short spell of fine weather enabled our machines to continue their bombing of the enemy's railway stations.

In the air fighting six hostile machines were downed. Nine of ours are missing. Two of these were seen to collide over the enemy's lines.

SAY CZAR'S DAUGHTER IS COMING HERE

Thrilling Tale from Strange Sources of the Flight of Tatiana to This City.

Persons connected with the "News Bureau of the Russian Post Office" and with the Russian Civilian Relief, a newly formed organization which has for some of its purposes "the fostering of mutual understanding and a spirit of brotherly love between the Russian and American peoples and the raising of funds to aid in alleviating the sufferings of the masses affected by the war and revolution," announced last night that Tatiana Nikolaievna Romanoff, second daughter of the deposed Czar of Russia, was on her way to New York to dance, tell fairy tales, and talk to the women of America in aid of the society's work. The former Grand Duchess, it was asserted, had escaped from Tobolsk, where the Imperial family is under supervision at present, through a fictitious marriage to the son of one of the Czar's former Chamberlains, and traveling via Manchuria and Japan was now on board a liner shortly to land at a Pacific port.

The original source from which the news appears to have been spread in New York was Mrs. Margaret Barry Carver an American woman who lived some years in Russia. She, according to various persons connected with the organizations above mentioned, is on her way to the Pacific Coast to chaperon the former Grand Duchess upon her arrival. But one of the Directors of the Russian Civilian Relief was told by Mrs. Carver that Miss Romanoff had been in New York three weeks ago and had now gone to visit the family of the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada.

Ivan Narodny, Vice President of the Russian-American Asiatic Corporation, said last night that the news was brought here last Thursday by a Russian officer acting as special courier, but was unable to give any more details. "These are strange times in Russia," he added. The Grand Duchess, it was said, believed that the days of "Lenine, Trotzy & Co." were about over, and was strongly interested in the return of a stable democratic Government in Russia, without regard to the question as to whether or not her father returned to power. These are views similar to those held by the Russian Civilian Relief.

Daniel Frohman, one of several Americans mentioned as connected with the Russian civilian relief, said that all he knew of the affair was what had been told him by Mrs. Carver, who seemed to be "a wide-awake American woman."

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Margaret Barry Carver, accompanied by her husband, Charles A. Carver, said to have been formerly a banker of Petrograd, arrived here this evening on their way to San Francisco, where, it is reported they will meet the former Grand Duchess Tatiana, the second daughter of the deposed Czar of Russia.

Mrs. Carver declared, although declining to give any details, that Miss Romanoff, as she is now called, would soon arrive in the United States. She refused to comment on the report that Miss Romanoff was now in Canada with the Viceroy.

TRAIN WRECKERS KILL TWO.

Engineer, Sticking to Post, Dies—Bars Chained to Rails.

HENRYETTA, Okla., Nov. 25.—Two trainmen were killed, another seriously injured, and three passengers hurt today when the St. Louis & San Francisco express out of St. Louis, traveling at high speed, plunged into obstructions placed on the rails ten miles west of here.

J. S. Robertson of Sapulpa, Okla., engineer of the train, stayed with his engine when he saw the obstructions, steel bars chained to the sides of the rails, and was killed. He put on emergency brakes in time to slow the train considerably so that the crowded passenger coaches held to the rails.

A posse of 100 Sheriffs' deputies and home guardsmen searched the surrounding country until after dark with bloodhounds for men who caused the wreck, but found no trace of them.

On the occasion of the marriage the Emperor appointed Richthofen his "Equerry Airman," and it is said that in consequence of this appointment he will henceforth devote his time entirely to the training of new fighting squadrons.

PLANS MOBILE SHIPYARDS.

Steel Corporation to Start Building Model Plant Immediately.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 25.—Full details of plans for the United States Steel Corporation's great shipyard at Mobile were made public late last night by George Gordon Crawford, President of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, a subsidiary of the Steel Corporation. Mr. Crawford's announcement read:

"It is proposed to begin construction immediately on a shipyard upon the land recently purchased north of Mobile. Ten shipways will be laid down and wharves of suitable capacity for fitting out the ships will be built. A large power plant, boiler shop, plate, and angle shop, machine shop, steel metal shop, joiner shop, forge shop, storehouse, and main office will be constructed.

"Two large villages have been laid out, one for white and the other for colored workmen. Both villages will have paved main streets and sidewalks, storm and sanitary sewers, a pure water supply and street railway and electric light service. About 1,600 houses of attractive appearance will be completed during the next twelve months. The health, safety, comfort, and recreation of the employes and their families will be considered in planning the works and villages."

The Mobile company will be known as the Chickasaw Shipbuilding Company. Judge Gary, James Farrell, and Crawford will be among its Directors, and Mr. Crawford will be its President. J. F. Coleman of New Orleans, formerly resident here, who negotiated the deals for 11,500 acres on which the shipyard will be built, will be the general superintendent.

SINN FEIN PERIL IN IRELAND PASSED

But Unionists' Grumbling Raises Apprehension as to Convention's Success.

TALK OF PROVISIONAL REGIME

Alternate Plans Contemplate an Advisory Council or Government by the Convention.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Under the Defense of the Realm act the publication of exact details regarding the meeting of the Irish Convention is prohibited. The Parliamentary correspondent of The Westminster Gazette, referring to "rumors in the lobby which lately reflected a serious state of affairs," says:

"The situation in Ireland is once more receiving the earnest attention of the Government. The policy of conciliation and firmness has so far been justified, and the danger point of a widespread outbreak by the extreme Sinn Feiners seems to have passed; but unfortunately Unionist opinion in the North appears to have taken serious alarm, and this acts as a check on the hopes that were centred in the convention arriving at an agreed scheme.

"In these circumstances the possibility of tiding over the present crisis by setting up a provisional Government, or rather an advisory council, which, acting in concert with the Chief Secretary, should control the administration of Ireland, is being discussed. I understand that if such a scheme is to be adopted, Belfast would have an advisory council as well as Dublin, the arrangement to be purely temporary.

"The difficulty in all such schemes is that they do not satisfy the bulk of the Irish people. Failing this, it is considered possible that the Government might give control of purely Irish affairs to the convention as at present constituted."

The Dublin correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES intimates that the publication of an official report dealing with the labors of the sub-committee of the convention which was appointed to formulate a scheme of self-government for Ireland is expected soon, and adds:

"Even should it be found that the sub-committee report to the convention indicated that its work had not been completely successful, it would not mean that the convention had failed to effect the purpose for which it was brought into being. In his remarkable speech in the House of Lords, the Lord Lieutenant gave to the convention the character of an institution of inestimable value to Ireland and to the Empire. Its work may be stayed; it may be temporarily stopped, put in abeyance for a hundred and one reasons, the same as any other institution, but it can be set going again when the obstacles and difficulties are cleared away. The convention has created that splendid feeling in the constitutional mind of Ireland that it cannot fail until it is worn out, and surely there is vitality enough in it to keep it going for a very long time.

"The wonder was that such a body could ever be got to sit in one room and breathe the same air. It was only reasonable to think that the extremists were represented, and that the extremist delegates had their instructions and were detrmind to carry them out. That was only reasonable; but it is well known that the great bulk of the delegates represent creeds and classes in Ireland who want this thing settled once and for all, so that they may get on with their business and the country's business. They are not going to give up hope, and it is believed that a scheme approved of by the constituent majority of the convention will ultimately be evolved. That majority will be composed of Nationalists, Southern Unionists, and representatives of labor North and South. The duty of all Irishmen and Englishmen and of the press in Ireland, England, and in America, too, is to help toward the success of the deliberations of that majority and to do nothing that would hamper them and so aggravate the situation as to give heart of hope to the tail of the Sinn Fein movement. For there it does look as if the tail was wagging the dog. Although Cardinal Logue said that if the convention failed, chaos would follow, that does not apply to the present; neither does it apply to the immediate future.

"A very happy utterance made recently was that of T. R. Lamphier, Secretary of the Bank of Ireland, Speaking at the annual meeting of the Institute of Bankers in Ireland, he said that as Irishmen their thoughts were naturally most within their own country; 'and just now,' he continued, 'we are all thinking of the convention now meeting in Trinity College and of the outcome of the convention. No matter what shade of political sympathy we profess, I am sure we are unanimous in expressing the hope that the deliberations of this unique assembly of Irishmen may result in the establishment among us for all generations of the blessings of a righteous Government and a peaceful, happy and prosperous people.'"

LOGUE WARNS IRELAND.

Cardinal Says Present Agitation for a Republic Is Fatal.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Nov. 25.—Cardinal Logue, ordering prayers for peace in the Armagh churches today, said:

"Whether due to the demoralization of the world by war or to a fate hanging over unhappy Ireland, blasting her hopes when they seem to brighten, an agitation in spreading here which is ill-considered and utoplan and cannot fail to entail suffering, disorganization and danger to the end of disaster, defeat, and collapse, and all in pursuit of a dream no sober man can hope to see realised, namely, the establishment of an Irish republic either by an appeal to the potentates of Europe at the peace conference or by hurling an unarmed people against an empire of five millions under arms, a thing which would be ridiculous if it were not so mischevious and fraught with such danger to an ardent, generous, and patriotic people."

NORWAY PUNISHES SPIES.

Two German Marines Get Seven Months' Imprisonment.

CHRISTIANA, Nov. 25.—Two German marines named Orth and Stachel, members of Aron Rautenfels's band of bomb plotters, were sentenced today to seven months' imprisonment for espionage. The State Attorney, finding the sentence too lenient, has appealed to the Supreme Court.

Aron Rautenfels, a German courier, was arrested at Christiania last June in connection with a bomb plot unearthed by the Norwegian police. A quantity of explosives was found in his possession. The German Government later expressed regret to Norway for the acts of the German plotters and dismissed Rautenfels from its service.

Names an Airplane for a Woman.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 30, (Associated Press.)—At least one of the Australia battleplanes being provided for the British air service in this war, chiefly by the rural districts of the Commonwealth, will go into action bearing the name of a woman. Miss Elizabeth Campbell of Inverell Station, (ranch,) New South Wales, recently gave the Defense Department $13,500 for the purchase of a battleplane for the British Government. Arrangements were subsequently made through the Australian High Commissioner in London that the battleplane should bear the inscription, "Elizabeth Campbell of Inverell Station." Miss Campbell was thanked by the Defense Department for her gift.

NO SOLDIERS SENT TO GUARD PIERS

sioner R. A. C. Smith, Chief Inspector James E. Dillon of the Police Department, United States District Attorney Charles F. Lynch of Jersey City, United States District Attorney Melville J. France of Brooklyn, Major Hunter Marston, U. S. A., and a number of other army officers.

The conference was held in the department headquarters on Governors Island and at its conclusion the official tour of inspection of those parts of the waterfront which are included in the new barred areas was made.

Marshal McCarthy received his official instruction from Attorney General Gregory last night, and at 9 o'clock the Marshal announced that those instructions were effective, and that they will be enforced to the letter and immediately. Those instructions as given out by Marshal McCarthy are the same as were published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sunday:

Seventy-two Hours' Grace.

"These instructions," said Marshal McCarthy last night, "are immediately in effect, and any enemy alien employes who are affected will be given just seventy-two hours from tomorrow (Monday) morning to leave the barred districts in which they now reside or do business. Alien enemy employers and other Germans who are in business will receive reasonable time to vacate their present places of business, the time to be given depending entirely on the circumstances in each case. These orders apply to all transatlantic and coastwise shipping. Fishing is excepted, and in this instance I may add there is no fishing in this harbor."

Marshal McCarthy was asked if he could give any information as to when the soldiers would go on duty in the barred zones.

"I can only say that the soldiers will guard what are found to be 'vital points' and the military authorities will probably announce where those vital places are."

It was officially announced last night that about 50 per cent. of the Germans affected by the new enemy alien regulations had already moved into unrestricted zones. The other 50 per cent. will get final orders to move this morning, and a failure to immediately comply with the order will mean internment for the rest of the war.

The boundaries of the new zones, it is expected, will be announced today. Generally speaking, it can be stated that in Manhattan the zone will extend from Forty-fourth Street in the North River to the Battery, and from the Battery to Twenty-fourth Street in the East River. In Brooklyn the zone will run from a point just south of Long Island City to Coney Island. All of Staten Island will be a zone, as well as most of Jersey City, all of Hoboken and Weehawken.

All Big Piers Included.

The New York zone includes all of the great transatlantic piers, as well as every pier at which vessels displacing 500 tons or more, dock. The 100-yard zone limit which extends a block back from the entrances to the piers, includes some of the finest office buildings, among them the West Street and Whitehall Buildings, in both of which a number of enemy aliens are employed or have offices.

The question of enforcing the 100-yard limit, which the President has designated as the outermost boundary of waterfront zones, may have been settled at yesterday's conference on Governors Island, but if it was no details were made public last night. Whether or not soldiers will be employed to enforce the regulations in the 100-yard limit zone is not known. It is believed, however, that, in the event any soldiers are assigned to such duty, they will guard only certain parts of the zones which are in front of or border the more important transatlantic piers.

It was announced last night that enemy aliens are no longer permitted to travel on street cars in West and South Streets, and other streets within the 100-yard limit of the waterfront. Germans may still travel on cars which run to ferries, but they must not alight from those cars when in barred areas except at ferry terminals.

That the ferries eventually will be barred to Germans was indicated yesterday. It was said that a new regulation may be promulgated which will prohibit Germans from commuting between suburban places and New York.

The barring of Germans from steamers also probably means that none will be permitted to live at Jersey coast resorts next Summer. Neither will they be permitted to travel on Sound steamers which pass all of the important fortifications guarding the Long Island Sound approach to New York.

Placards warning enemy aliens to keep out of barred zones will be posted on all piers and in all crosstown streets leading to barred sections of the waterfront today or tomorrow.

HOYLE'S VIEWS PUZZLE OFFICIALS AT CAPITAL

Washington Unable to Understand Army Commander's Attitude as to Guarding Zones.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Department of Justice officials connected with the administration of the regulations for protecting property from enemy aliens, were surprised tonight when they were told that General Hoyle, commanding the military Department of the East, with headquarters at Governors Island, had said that it would not be necessary to make any considerable change in the arrangements for guarding the restricted zone around New York's North River and East River waterfront.

The intimation of General Hoyle that soldiers would not be placed on guard duty at piers, although eventually they might be assigned to some piers, "here and there," increased the surprise at the Department of Justice, where it was said to be the understanding that the regulations issued by the department last night to carry out President Wilson's new proclamation increasing the restriction of enemy aliens were to be enforced by the army.

It was said by Department of Justice officials that the regulations had been drawn with the full understanding of the War Department, which had promised to co-operate and furnish the necessary troops. These officials were at a loss to explain why the War Department had failed to act, as there had been no revision of the program announced last night so far as Washington knew which contemplated the use of United States regulars wearing the blue uniform, commonly worn on ceremonial occasions, before this Government entered the war, to guard all piers in the restricted area of the New York harbor front.

No information was obtainable from War Department officials. Colonel Jesse Carter, Chief of the War Department Division of Militia Affairs, who has been entrusted with the enforcement of the regulations against enemy aliens, was in New York, it was said at the department. Secretary Baker could not be reached.

Nothing became known tonight to indicate that any change had been made in the arrangements effected between the War Department and the Department of Justice. One suggestion was that there was a misunderstanding as to what was expected from the War Department, and no orders were issued to General Hoyle to enforce the regulations. It was suggested also that a change in the plan might have been agreed on at a conference scheduled to take place in New York today between representatives of the Department of Justice and the Army. Colonel Carter is supposed to have gone to New York to attend this conference.

CHICAGO TO MOVE GERMANS.

No Enemy Alien Will Be Left Near Any Waterfront.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Ousting of Germans from barred zones under President Wilson's recent proclamation will begin in Chicago tomorrow under the direction of United States Marshal John J. Bradley.

Male enemy aliens over the age of 14 will be forced to move immediately from within 100 yards of all docks, wharves, and warehouses near the Calumet River and the Chicago River and its branches. Unless orders from Washington direct him to the contrary Marshal Bradley will force every German man living within 100 yards of the lake front from South Chicago to Evanston to move.

"How many Germans the President's order will affect here we do not know," said Marshal Bradley tonight. "The Government census of 1910 showed that there were approximately 23,000 in Chicago. Of these I think about 12,000 would be classified under the term 'male aliens over the age of 14 years.' It is probable that only a small number of this 12,000 live within the barred zones."

DEPUTIES PROPOSE IMPEACHING MALVY

Want Plot Charges Against Former Minister Investigated to Calm French Agitation.

DIVISION IN THE COMMITTEE

Deputy Renaudel Leaves Meeting When Suggestion That Clemenceau Be Heard Is Rejected.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The Special Committee of Thirty-three of the Chamber of Deputies charged with investigation of the accusations of having had relations with the enemy, made against Louis J. Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, issued its report yesterday.

It rejected the proposition to send M. Malvy's demand that he be tried for treason directly to the Government; declared his demand inadmissible by the Chamber without fresh legislation, and requested M. Malvy to supply documents and other evidence supporting his demand to hear MM. Clemenceau and Daudet and various other propositions. The committee noted that in the interest of public peace light should be thrown on the accusations against M. Malvy.

"Inasmuch as M. Malvy demanded its appointment, this special committee decides to propose to the Chamber that M. Malvy be impeached," the report concluded.

Twenty-six members of the committee were present when the vote was taken. Thirteen favored the report, four were against it, and eight abstained from voting, as did the President of the committee.

The vote indicates the difficulty of the committee's task. If it decided to send M. Malvy before the Senate as a high court without stating on what grounds, the Senate might refuse to hear the case. If it made a preliminary examination its decision might be taken as prejudging the case.

Deputy Renaudel and six others left the meeting when the committee, by a majority of three, rejected Renaudel's proposal that Premier Clemenceau be heard. Rensudel said later that this decision was the result of the Deputies fear of assuming responsibilities.

"The Chamber is Pontius Pilate multiplied by 500," he asserted.

Captain Bouchardon, the examining Magistrate for the court-martial of Bolo Pacha on the charge of espionage, yesterday examined a singer whom Bolo is said to have married twenty years ago at Buenos Aires. The Paris newspapers say Bolo admitted this marriage, but added:

"Argentina is so far off, it was so long ago, and is of so little importance anyway!"

The singer refused to be interviewed, beyond saying that she was instituting divorce proceedings.

RAISE $5,000 FOR POLES.

Relief Fund Enhanced from Proceeds of Concert.

At a concert for the Polish Victims War Relief Fund, held yesterday in Jersey City, $5,000 was realized. Ignace J. Paderewski, the pianist, in an address warned the audience not to put any trust in the "vacant promises" of Germany and Russia regarding Polish freedom.

"The Polish people in America are doing, and should continue to do, all in their power to help America in this war," asserted Paderewski. "Some of our countrymen are now fighting shoulder to shoulder with the American soldiers in the trenches. Be loyal to the United States and support President Wilson, and help him to gain the wonderful ends for which he directed the United States to enter the war.

"Our hope is in the United States. To the help of America we must look for the national freedom of Poland, for which we have long striven. That patriot General Thadeus Kosciusko would have us follow his steps, in which he gave such great service to his own and to this country. And the help of America for Poland will be like the return made to France for the great service of the immortal Lafayette."

Former Governor Fielder also spoke. Those taking part in the concert were Sigmund Stajowski, Miss Eva Didur of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Leon Szuic.

PREVENT BORDEN SPEAKING.

Rowdies Break Up Canadian Meeting—Man with Revolver Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

KITCHENER, Ontario, Nov. 24.—For the first time in the history of the Dominion a Prime Minister of Canada was prevented from addressing the people by an organized effort on the part of a small section of disaffected and disloyal members of the community, who tried to break up a meeting at the skating rink here tonight.

A leader of a gang of rowdies, who was arrested while forcing a way into the rink, where 4,000 persons had gathered to hear Premier Borden speak on behalf of W. C. Welchel, candidate for Parliament, was found to have a loaded revolver in his possession and also a bottle of whisky. He was intoxicated. The man, who is of Polish descent, has a bad reputation, and, according to Chief of Police O'Neill, was discharged as incorrigible from the army, in which he had enlisted.

His suspicious actions led to his seizure as he was leading a band of Hooligans up the staircase to a balcony immediately behind and above the platform from which the Premier was to speak.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—Sir Robert Borden tonight gave out the following statement:

"There was a deliberate and unsuccessful attempt to break up the meeting at Kitchener on Saturday evening. From what has since transpired it is apparent that the arrangements for this purpose were organized several days in advance of the meeting. The disturbance which prevented Mr. Mowat and myself from speaking was the work of three or four hundred roughs and hoodlums, and cannot in any wise be attributed to the respectable people of Kitchener. In twenty-one years of public life this is the only occasion upon which I have been prevented from speaking to a meeting that I sought to address."

SPECIAL MEDAL TO SAILORS.

Daniels Plans Reward for Americans in U-Boat Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A special medal probably will be provided for award to men of the United States naval service who distinguish themselves in the warfare against submarines. Secretary Daniels, it was learned today, has taken preliminary steps to this end.

The action of the department is prompted by the fact that under the law no member of America's armed forces can accept decorations from foreign Governments in recognition of gallant conduct. Several instances where the British naval authorities desired to award American destroyer officers and men the Distinguished Service Order and medals of the British Government were made public yesterday by Secretary Daniels.

SEIZED AS A DYNAMITER.

Rock Driller Charged with Placing Explosive in a Factory.

Detectives Pollignani and Gilbert of the Bomb Squad yesterday arrested Dominick De Scola, 25 years old, a rock driller, living at 763 Third Avenue, on suspicion of having placed eight and one-half sticks of dynamite in the factory of the Queens Petticoat Company, 121 West Twenty-fifth Street, last Tuesday night. The dynamite was discovered in the factory in time to prevent an explosion.

The detectives say they traced the dynamite to a contracting firm at Forty-first Street and Park Avenue where De Scola was formerly employed. De Scola was discharged by the firm on Thursday. The detectives say they found in his locker there one and one-half sticks of dynamite whose serial numbers precede those on the dynamite found in the factory.

Since last Thursday the detectives have been watching De Scola's home, but he was absent until yesterday morning. He said that he had been away from the city since Thursday.

SCHOOLS MAY DROP GERMAN

Board of Education Committee Will Consider the Matter This Week.

The question of dropping the study of German in the public elementary and intermediate schools will come up for discussion on Wednesday afternoon before the Committee on the Course of Study, at a meeting to be held before the regular meeting of the Board of Education. If the committee decides to take action, recommendation will be made to the board.

To eliminate the study of German would leave fifty-two teachers of German without employment. The Board of Education expends $65,000 annually for teaching German in the lower grade schools. In these schools French, Spanish, and Italian are also taught. The language course in the lower grade schools is elective, while in the high schools students are obliged to study some foreign language. Professor Franklin H. Giddings is Chairman of the Committee on Course of Study.

Wreath Placed on General's Grave by the American Mission.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Colonel Edward M. House, General Tasker H. Bliss, Admiral Benson, and the other members of the American mission today visited the Picpus Cemetery and placed a floral wreath on the tomb of Lafayette. The wreath bore the inscription "From the American war mission, in grateful remembrance." There were no speeches.

Colonel House had another long conference today with M. Clémenceau, the French Premier. Other members of the mission met and compared notes on the work thus far accomplished, and spent the remainder of the day in informal conferences.

Fire Empties Film Theatre.

About five hundred men, women and children were forced to leave the favorite moving picture theatre at 533 Eighth Avenue, yesterday afternoon, when fire was discovered in the flooring, caused by an overheated furnace in the basement. When the fire was discovered the light's were turned on and in less than two minutes the theatre was emptied. The firemen were forced to chop part of the flooring away to get at the blaze which was extinguished in a short time with an estimated loss of $500.

How a well-known financier provided for two children's education

ONE of this country's prominent bankers has placed funds in trust with this Company to provide for educating through preparatory school and college the two small children of one of his relatives.

The mention of this man's name would bring a smile at the thought of his anticipating the day when he might not be able to provide amply for these children's education. But the same wisdom that has directed his successful career has determined that making a trust with this Company as trustee is the surest way to provide for the children's future.

If you wish to assure a steady income for some person or object over a period of years, come in and let our Trust Department officers explain how simply and easily it can be arranged.

PLATTSBURG YIELDS 62 MORE OFFICERS

Supplementary List of Commissions Given in the Ordnance Reserve Corps.

20 DISAPPOINTED ONES

In the Commissioned List, But Discharged for Disability on an Old Order from Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 25.—At the four places in camp and in the city where newspapers are sold training camp students stood in long lines tonight at 6 o'clock awaiting their turn to buy New York and Boston newspapers in order to learn what rank they had received. In the city the line at the two news stores was a block long, and many were disappointed because the supply of newspapers soon gave out, the dealers having failed to increase their orders. Because of the lack of papers containing the list, the commander had one or two pasted on a bulletin board.

There is great rejoicing among the lucky ones, and they constitute nearly the entire force, the unlucky being so small in number that they were not in evidence. Colonel Wolf said tonight that while the printed list contained 2,333 names it was safe to say that by noon tomorrow the list will be an even 2,500, and that the lists of those failing to get commissions will not run over 200 and possibly less. The names of sixty-two new officers were given out today, these men being detailed to the Ordnance Officers' Reserve Corps and placed on the inactive list. The commander said that he did not believe that they would remain inactive very long, not over two months at the most.

The first of the numbered commissions announced yesterday concerned three men who are regraded into the infantry. They are Major William Kirby, New Haven, Conn.; Captain Frank H. Sawtelle, Malden, Mass., and Captain Julius O. Adler, of THE NEW YORK TIMES. All three were cavalry officers, having been commissioned in the first camp of this year, to the commissions as stated and now become infantry officers of the same rank. Major Kirby is the present adjutant of the New England Regiment and Captains Sawtelle and Adler are instructors in the Fourth and Thirteenth Companies respectively.

Austin M. Malone of 129 West Fifty-sixth Street, New York City, a member of the Twelfth Training Company, through some error in compiling the list of commissions at headquarters, was left out. He should have been among the First Lieutenants, having been commissioned to that rank in the aviation section, Signal Officers' Reserve Corps, with the post of Adjutant, to be attached to the staff of the Adjutant General at Washington. He will be on leave of absence until Dec. 11.

An unfortunate situation effecting twenty young men commissioned yesterday, and whose names were printed in the list this morning, has arisen through orders arriving here this morning from the Adjutant General's office at Washington directing their discharge because of physical disability. The men are victims of a delayed perusal of a medical report from the camp hospital. The action is final and their discharges were ordered made out to date from tomorrow. Of the twenty fifteen are of the New York division, and are as follows:

Dorsey, James, 37 Madison Av.
Broderick, Charles, 841 Broadway.
Doyle, James A., 1,500 Townsend Av.
Torrey, Owen C., 37 Wall St.
Webster, Samuel C., 700 West End Av.
Handy, Joseph, Stapleton, S. I.
Gabriel, Gilbert, 254 West 76th St.
Lewis, James A., 522 West 123d St.
Hilder, Herbert A., 233 West 70th St.
Ackerman, Edmund D., 44 Pinehurst Av.
Carpenter, Edward, 108 East 50th St.
Stiles, Harold, New Rochelle.
Vanderventer, August, 61 Broadway.
Henderson, Isham, 32 Nassau St.
Stowell, Edward E., 829 Park Av.
Carter, Howard C., Hartford, Conn.
Prouty, Claud R., Watertown, Mass.
Hay, David S., Bridgeport, Conn.
Middlemass, Arthur, New Britain, Conn.
Ingoldsby, James J., Salem, Mass.

Orders were issued today calling for the assembling of all commissioned men for 11 o'clock tomorrow morning at the camp theatre, where Colonel Wolf will talk on conduct becoming officers, and at the end of his remarks the company commanders will give the men their commissions. The camp will break at noon, and the men will receive $100 each as their pay for the month of November. The first special train will leave the camp at 1 o'clock.

One of the most unusual military Masonic events in the history of the order in this country took place at the camp today and yesterday. In recognition of having received commissions in the army, 337 Master Masons were honored by receiving all the degrees in Scottish Rite Masonry, from the fourth to the thirty-second inclusive, without expense. William Homan, Active Deputy for the State, came from New York City to grant a special dispensation to Albany Sovereign Consistory, to Delta Chapter, Rose Croix; to Delta Council, Princes of Jerusalem, and to Delta Lodge of Perfection, all of Troy, to enable these bodies to confer these degrees simultaneously upon this entire class.

FORT NIAGARA, N. Y., Nov. 25.—William B. Wilson, Jr., son of the Secretary of Labor, is among the 1,000 men to be commissioned at the closing of the second reserve officers' training camp here tomorrow. Wilson enlisted in the regular army field artillery, at the outbreak of the war. He was detached from his command to attend the training camp, and has won a First Lieutenant's commission in the infantry.

Another to be commissioned First Lieutenant tomorrow is Frank Mount Pleasant, famous football player of the Carlisle Indian School team a few years ago.

WAR SAVINGS STAMPS ON SALE NEXT WEEK

Certificates Will Be for $4.12 and Will Yield $5 in Five Years.

THRIFT CAMPAIGN PLANNED

Government Aims to Convert Small Savings of the Nation Into Helping Struggle for Victory.

War savings certificates will be placed on sale a week from today. Authorized agents all over the country designated by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will offer for sale these war savings certificates for $4.12 each. They will be redeemed in five years for $5, which is equal to 4 per cent. interest compounded quarterly. The certificates will be on sale at branch Post Offices, railroad stations, department stores, telegraph offices, banks, chain stores, and various institutions.

The minimum investment in thrift stamps and war savings stamps will be twenty-five cents. When sufficient stamps have been purchased they may be redeemed for war savings certificates.

The sale of the stamps and certificates will inaugurate a nation-wide campaign that in its way will be even greater than the Liberty bond campaigns. The plan is to convert the small savings of the people into help in winning the war. Conventions will be held this week by County Chairmen who are in charge of the campaign, in many States. The New York State County Chairmen will meet in Syracuse today, and Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, who is Chairman of the War Savings Committee, will make an address. The New Jersey County Chairmen will meet in Newark on Wednesday under the direction of Dwight Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co. The conventions will choose publicity managers and will make detailed plans for the campaigns in each of the States.

The greatest single factor in the campaign for the sale of the war savings certificates will be the Post Office. Franked cards will be distributed to parents, householders, and wage earners stating that war certificates will be delivered to them if they will fill in the cards and drop them into any letter box. Mail carriers will deliver the certificates to those who apply for them.

The public will be impressed with the fact that it will be an opportunity to buy a security that cannot go down in value. At any time, on ten days' notice, the Government will redeem the certificates at a reasonable rate of interest. The 4 per cent. compound interest will be paid if certificates are held five years.

The certificates are printed in the style of the Government bonds and carry savings tickets somewhat larger than ordinary bond coupons, each bearing a design of the Liberty torch.

It is believed that the war savings certificates will mean the passing of the old-fashioned penny bank. Because of the passage of the War Revenue act placing taxes on many commodities the demand for small coins has increased. Government officials believe that a handful of small coins hidden away in a small bank can be of no use, but where the money is put into certificates and stamps it will not only aid the Government, but will also compensate the owner.

COMMENDS NEW YORK GUARD

Gen. Hoyle Appreciates Their Efficiency in Patrolling Public Works.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—Adjt. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill tonight made public this letter from the General commanding the Eastern Department of the army:

Headquarters Eastern Department,
Governors Island, New York City,
Nov. 5, 1917.

Brigadier General Charles H. Sherrill,
Adjutant General, State of New York,
Albany, N. Y.

My Dear General Sherrill—I write to express to you my high appreciation of the very valuable and patriotic services of the New York Guard, which, under your orders, is now guarding faithfully and with great efficiency the aqueduct, the canals, and the important railroad bridges in this State.

With officers and men of the character, quality, and patriotic spirit of your new guard we are justified in expecting the high standard of performance of duty which obtains among them, but it is due them to be told that the important and onerous duties which they are now performing so cheerfully are valued and appreciated by all patriotic Americans who know the facts.

With sentiments of warm regard for you and for the gallant officers and men of the New York Guard, I am, General,
Very sincerely yours,
ELI D. HOYLE,
Brigadier General,
U. S. A., Commanding.

In announcing that Governor Whitman has directed him to transmit this letter to all commanding officers of the New York Guard, General Sherrill says the Governor "takes the opportunity of expressing the great pride which he and the people of the Empire State take in the patriotism and efficiency displayed by the officers and enlisted men of the New York Guard."

27TH UNDER CRITICS' EYES.

British Observers Find Spartanburg Men Lax in Trench Duty.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 25.—The reports of the Allied officer-observers on the occupancy of trenches by several units of the 27th Division, were turned in today to Brigadier-General Phillips. While the reports were very carefully censored, it was stated that the foreign experts found much ground for improvement in the way the former guardsmen manned the earthworks.

They were particularly emphatic in stating that great vigilance must be exacted of sentries. In proof of the lax watch maintained, several of the British umpires said they penetrated the trenches and calmly watched the work going forward to deceive them. The failure of some of the soldiers to keep absolute silence and not to show lights also was criticised. In general, however, the reports commented upon the excellence shown by men who never before tried trench guard.

With Thanksgiving Day near at hand, active preparations are being made to celebrate the day in camp. Hundreds of birds have been ordered and a Spartanburg baking company last night offered the division mess sergeants the use of its ovens for three days preceding the holiday. Sports and a fine entertainment have been provided by the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations charged with the welfare of the troops.

JERSEY TROOPS END HIKE.

Cheered in Anniston on Return from a 60-Mile March.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNISTON, Ala., Nov. 25.—The six thousand soldiers of the Fifty-seventh Brigade, Blue and Gray Division, commanded by General C. W. Barber of New Jersey, who have been on a five-day hike to Talladega, seat of an adjoining county thirty miles south of here, have returned to Camp McClellan in fine fettle. They reached the city this morning about 10 o'clock, and were cheered by the big crowds of citizens that lined Noble Street, the principal thoroughfare.

Although the men had just received their new overcoats and been supplied with Winter blankets, the sudden drop in the temperature made the trip pretty hard on some of them, among them Colonel John D. Frazer, whose regiment was commanded on the return hike by Colonel George M. Buttle.

Colonel Frazer is suffering with a severe cold, and is said to be threatened with pneumonia. He made the return trip in an ambulance.

In these war days, when time is the big factor—how quickly can you get reports and correspondence that have been filed away?

With the L. B. Automatic Index, quickly means instantly. Because the L. B. "Automatic" is designed for speed. And accuracy, too—for you can't have speed without it.

Most of the trouble a man has with his file is that it will not un-file. That is due to mistakes in filing. The L. B. "Automatic" is a check against mistakes.

This new method has all the advantages of alphabetic and numeric filing—and several more. It is the quickest possible method for indexing and finding names. It represents one of many L. B. features developed out of long experience with all manner of filing problems.

The Business of War

War is a new industry to the United States, but with great crops garnered, an increasing gold reserve, a sound banking position, no over-extension in trade and no speculation, we are justified in the most optimistic beliefs that we can with American adaptability make it a success.

We do not speak lightly, but industrial or business terms will give us better understanding of the conditions with which we have to cope, particularly as the problem is one of labor, material and capital. War, although not constructive, has offsetting benefits, sometimes morally, in instances politically, and certainly economically with regard to productive efficiency.

The fall in security prices does not necessarily represent decreased dividends nor adverse trade conditions. The investor who bought high grade bonds a few years ago or Liberty Bonds to-day, receives the same yield thereon that he originally bargained for, but the purchasing power of the dollar has decreased.

If you are contemplating larger and broader banking facilities to meet these conditions you may approach the Harriman National Bank with confidence that it fully understands your needs, and if your statement, responsibility and business warrant, is prepared to serve them.

WANT WAR SCHOOLS TO TRAIN OFFICERS

Camps Association Submits Plan for a Continuous Supply of Drilled Men.

SENDS APPEAL TO BAKER

Also Suggests That Reserve Officers Be Sent to France for a Time and Returned as Instructors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A comprehensive plan for the training of reserve officers and their more systematic employment in the war has been submitted to the Secretary of War by the Training Camps Association.

In addition to the establishment of a school or schools for the training of officers to continue without interruption instead of for a few months only, as in the present training camps, the association recommends that a certain number of reserve officers be sent to France for actual experience with troops in the field and then brought back to America to take their places as instructors with troops that are being prepared for war service.

The association also notes an objection to the understood purpose of the War Department to abandon all training camps for officers and to obtain a supply of officers in future solely from the ranks with their training for commissioned grades given at the headquarters of the several military divisions.

Inquiry at the War Department did not bring any sympathetic response to the proposals of the Training Camps Association, in spite of the fact that they are indorsed by many regular officers who have had experience at the Officers' Training Camps. Colonel Paul A. Wolf, who commanded the two Plattsburg camps, is said to have made recommendations to the War Department somewhat similar to those advanced by the association. There has been a feeling in interested quarters that the War Department has no definite policy with regard to the additional training of reserve officers, or, what is regarded as more important, a systematic program for their assignment to duty.

Drew Sharp Protest.

A recent announcement of the department was to the effect that many of the reserve officers to be graduated this week from the second series of training camps would be placed on the inactive list, which meant that they would be left without employment or pay until the department felt that it needed their services. This aroused a storm of protest, in which many officers of the army, including those of the General Staff, showed sympathy. It was contended that, in addition to doing a grave injustice to men who had given up remunerative employment to serve their country, these officers would grow stale in military knowledge during their period of inactivity and that the Government would find them less efficient when they were called to the colors. Following the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES of a Washington dispatch calling attention to the situation the War Department's order was modified, and assurance was given that some 6,000 of the graduates of the second series of training camps would be assigned to the regular army, while others would be employed in the line of the national army and in the staff.

This and other indications of the failure of the department to adopt a consistent plan for the employment of the reserve officers has caused much dissatisfaction. Shortly after the officers trained in the first series of training camps were commissioned and reported to national army cantonments about 200 from each cantonment were sent to National Guard divisions, where they had a rather undefined status which existed until recently.

It was alleged that Major Gen. O'Ryan, commander of the National Guard division at Spartanburg, S. C., was not even notified that 200 reserve officers had been assigned to that division, instructed as to how they were to be employed, or what their status was with troops of the National Guard. Recently the War Department directed that reserve officers could enter National Guard commands on their own application, but if commissioned in the guard they would lose their commissions in the reserve which they had won at the training camps. It was also ordered by the War Department if the reserve officers attached to National Guard units did not enter the guard they would not be considered for promotion until all surplus guard officers had been taken care of. As most of the National Guard regiments under the new army organization are composed of two or more guard regiments of the former organization, there is a large number of surplus officers who under the War Department's policy must be provided for as vacancies occur. Through this system reserve officers attached to National Guard units were obliged to join the guard or lose their chances of promotion.

Apparently the proposal of the Training Camps Association that reserve officers be sent to France for training under actual war conditions and then returned to the United States for the purpose of training the national army does not appeal to the War Department. It was said there that reserve officers were being sent to France as General Pershing required them, and that already about 2,000 had been assigned to the American expeditionary force in Europe at General Pershing's request. It was explained, however, that these officers would remain in France. There is no intention to bring them back to the United States so that they may give the benefit of their observation and experience in the war area to the troops now being trained in this country.

Camp Association's Proposal.

The letter of the Training Camps Association to the Secretary of War reads as follows:

November 21.

The Honorable, the Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

Sir: Supplementing our memorandum to you dated Oct. 25, urging the admission of civilian volunteers to future officers' training camps, and our conference with you on Nov. 14, we beg to submit the following suggestions:

We believe that a continuous plan for the training of officers, throughout the war should now be adopted, based on the experience of training officers in the first and second series of camps. For this purpose there should be established one or more continuous schools or colleges for the training of officers, such schools to continue uninterruptedly instead of as at present in camps held for a period of a few months only. To such schools there should be admitted applicants from civil life, selected with the greatest care, on the same basis of selection and with the same qualifications as required for the second series of officers' camps as well as selected men from the troops in service, and each candidate should be required to continue his course of training for such period as his individual qualifications may require. On the graduation of the candidate he should be given such commission as he may be qualified for without other restriction.

Under such a system, one man could be commissioned after three months of training, while another of less previous training or less aptitude may be required to continue his training for a much longer period. It would be important to keep in mind the need of mature officers for the higher grades, as well as a plentiful supply of Lieutenants.

These schools should be conducted by officers and reserve officers selected because of their demonstrated ability as teachers, and the faculty of officers should be refreshed from time to time by officers returning from the front, so that eventually all of the instruction could be given by officers who have seen active service in the war zone. This is of the utmost importance in order that the instruction may be thoroughly up to date and be given by men who have had practical experience and are not wholly book taught.

There has been developed during the second series of camps a considerable number of reserve officers who have shown eminent ability to teach, and these officers, as well as others, after being sent in relays from time to time to the war zone for practical experience, should be returned to serve as teachers.

We have read with concern an article in one of the New York morning papers to today, stating that "the War Department has decided to abandon all officers' training camps as they now exist and to obtain officers solely from the ranks trained at the several divisional headquarters."

We sincerely hope that this article is without foundation. As we have stated before, we thoroughly approve of the promotion of qualified men from the ranks, but this source of supply will be entirely insufficient to supply the great need of officers for the huge army which we must place in the field in order to win this war. The article refers to "the democratization of the national army." There is and can be no such issue. The army will, of course, be a democratic army, but this would not exclude eligible civilians, especially those beyond draft age. The only question that can be considered is the need of the army. There can be no question of class. There must be a continuous and large flow of qualified officers, and these must come both from the ranks and from civil life. The plan under which officers so far have been obtained from the first and second series of camps should not be abandoned for the purpose of an experiment, but should be made into a continuous officers' school. Moreover, this training should not be at divisional headquarters, but at separate and distinct officers' camps.

We submit the above suggestions again in the spirit of co-operation and the desire to bring to your attention the convictions of the large body of patriotic citizens whom we represent.

Very respectfully,
HENRY S. DRINKER,
PEIRCE ANDERSON,
LANGDON P. MARVIN,
Committee; by Langdon P. Marvin, Secretary.

MARKET FOR LABOR SHIFTS.

Employment Increase Largest in Men's Ready-Made Clothing.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—While the war is enormously increasing the number of employes in some industries, in others decided decreases already are beginning to be shown. Figures made public tonight on an investigation of seven industries by the Department of Labor in September disclose more employes in seven and fewer in six.

Car building and repairing lost 14.8 per cent; boots and shoes, 8 per cent., and cotton manufacturing, cotton finishing, silk making, and cigar manufacturing showed smaller decreases.

The largest increase was 10.6 per cent. in the manufacture of men's ready-made clothing, due to the uniforming of the new armies. Increases also were found in the making of hosiery and underwear, woolen, iron and steel, automobiles, leather, and paper.

Each of the industries paid out more in wages in September of this year than in September, 1916, the greatest increase being 28.6 in iron and steel mills.

FEAR LONG ORDEAL FOR MRS. DE SAULLES

The Accused Woman's Counsel Hopes Reserve Force Will Sustain Her as a Witness Today.

BOY WILL NOT BE CALLED

Slain Man's Father and Mother to Controvert Testimony of Ill-Treatment of Their Daughter-in-Law.

Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, who, in her trial for the murder of her divorced husband, goes on the witness stand today to tell a story lasting several hours, is in poor condition to stand such an ordeal, her physicians said yesterday, and there is some fear that she may break down and be unable to complete her testimony.

Henry A. Uterhart, her chief counsel, said that he considered it absolutely essential for his client to go through with the ordeal and he expected the courage and reserve force she had shown through the trial would sustain her in telling her story.

Mr. Uterhart said that his client would have much to say, in addition to the incidents which he told in his opening address to the jury of her treatment by De Saulles, and that she would be on the witness stand a full day. District Attorney Weeks said yesterday that he would cross-examine her rigorously as to every detail and attempt as far as possible to prove that her story lacked truth.

"I intend to do my full duty in this case, the same as in any other," the District Attorney said.

Free Rein for Mrs. De Saulles.

There are no restrictions on the testimony which Mrs. De Saulles may give regarding things she saw or heard, which had an effect on her mental state. The District Attorney is precluded by law from attempting to disprove the truth of statements alleged to have affected her. He can, however, attempt to show that no such statements were made. For instance, gossip that was brought to the young woman concerning her husband cannot be proved to be false by the District Attorney. The principle of this was illustrated in the Thaw case, where it was held to be unessential whether the story told by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw to her husband was true, as its effect on his mind would be the same in either case.

Some of the revelations regarding De Saulles are alleged to have been made to the young woman by their child, who repeatedly told his mother stories of his father and other women, according to the opening statement for the defense. The boy, who is nearly 5 years old, could be put on the stand for the purpose either of corroborating or denying the fact that he told his mother these things, but the child will not be permitter to take the stand or to appear in court at all, Justice Manning, who is presiding over the trial, can use his own judgment in permitting children under 7 years old to testify, and in this case he had determined against having the child's story go to the jury.

Fearing that even his appearance in court might prejudice the case of the State or the Government, Justice Manning told Almuth C. Vandiver, lawyer for the relatives of De Saulles, who have the custody of John Longer De Saulles, Jr.:

"That boy must not be permitted to appear in court under any circumstances."

To Call Slain Man's Parents.

The prosecution now plans to call Major Arthur De Saulles and Mrs. Arthur De Saulles, the aged father and mother of the slain man, to the witness stand in rebuttal. The defense has alleged that one of the many circumstances which accumulated to overthrow the reason of the young woman was coldness and ill-treatment from her mother-in-law and father-in-law, when De Saulles left her with them in South Bethlehem, Penn., before and after the birth of their child. They will be called to deny that they were otherwise than kind to the young woman.

District Attorney Weeks has been very busy with physicians since the opening statement for the defense, which revealed for the first time the specific ailments from which the defendant was said to be suffering. The assertions that the young woman was suffering from a dangerous disease of the thyroid glands, affecting the reason, and that she had an unhealed fracture of the skull due to two old accidents, were both surprises for the prosecution. Mr. Weeks has been assured, however, by medical men that the so-called "hypothyroid" condition does not support the insanity theory. The State's alienists will assert that the manner and acts of the defendant before and immediately after the killing prove beyond doubt that she was not only completely sane, but was in an unusully calm and lucid frame of mind.

While District Attorney Weeks has asserted that he would do his full duty by the State in the prosecution of the case, the family of De Saulles has been equally active in seeking to obtain a conviction. Deacon Murphy, formerly of the Homicide Bureau of the New York County District Attorney's office, has been giving every possible assistance to the prosecution in and out of court. In addition to suggesting the form of questions to elicit the strongest possible testimony, Deacon Murphy has given advice about expert testimony.

It was he who brought as an expert witness Captain William Jones of the Police Department, who explained the type of the revolver and showed how it had to be fired with two motions, the pulling of the trigger and the gripping of the safety clutch on the back of the handle. This is considered important testimony by the State, as showing that the young woman had a clear perception of the mechanical details of the killing. The two motions of the hand had to be repeated for the firing of each of the five shots, Captain Jones testified.

Mrs. De Saulles was visited at her room in the Mineola Jail yesterday by her mother, her sister and brother and Otto Salm, a Hungarian, who has been for many years a friend of the family. The trial will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock.

WAR CLERKS ARE WANTED.

Shortage of Help in Washington Departments Becomes Acute.

Shortage of clerical help in the War Department has now become so acute that the wives of officials and army officers have taken up the problem. They are not actually working typewriters or taking stenographic notes, but are considering the housing and entertainment problem in Washington with a view of insuring safe and comfortable conditions of living as well as recreation, especially for young girl stenographers, who hitherto have hesitated to answer the Government's call to service.

Washington still looks to New York as the greatest recruiting field for high grade stenographers and typists, both men and women. This city's slowness in responding to the call, it was said yesterday, is literally hindering the organization of General Pershing's army.

"This office is crippled and our expeditionary forces cannot get all the information they require, because we simply have not got the help to turn out the work," First Lieutenant Robert S. Fowler, in the Adjutant General's office, wrote to the Recruiting Committee of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense. Since the first call ten days ago the need has increased 400 per cent.

The Recruiting Committee, co-operating with the Civil Service Department of the United States Custom House, is doing everything to facilitate the quick examination and acceptance of applicants. The pay at the start is $1,000 to $1,200 a year, with quick increases for efficiency. The brief examination to be taken any week day in the United States Custom House consists of dictation exercises at 80 to 100 words a minute and two exercises on the typewriter. Applicants must be at least eighteen years old and citizens of the United States or of our Allies. The Mayor's Committee has been assured that living and housing conditions are the same in Washington as in New York. The Recruiting Committee of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, in the Hall of Records, Chambers and Centre Streets, will furnish all information to applicants.

The New York Evening High School for Women at 40 Irving Place is organizing classes for special training in the war service. Classes are trained in statistical methods, which includes tallying, tabulating, compiling, preparation of copy for the printer, and proofreading, stenography, home nursing, domestic science, and other matters of vital interest in war time. Applicants for these special war service classes may register on any of the four evenings of the week from 7:30 to 9:30 at the school.

A call has been issued for 90 stenographers in the sun dials section of the Ordnance Department in Washington. Details of the requirements for these positions may be obtained at the Stenographic Recruiting Bureau, 320 Broadway.

RESUME LA FOLLETTE CASE.

Bryan and State Department Witnesses Testify This Week.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Witnesses from the State Department are to be called at the resumption tomorrow of the hearing by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections on the charge of disloyalty against Senator La Follette of Wisconsin based on his St. Paul speech last Summer. Senator Pomerene, Chairman of the committee, has conferred with Secretary Lansing as to State Department records bearing on the sinking of the Lusitania, which Senator La Follette has brought into the case by declaring that William J. Bryan told him he had advised President Wilson that the Lusitania torpedoing was justifiable as the ship carried munitions.

Secretary Lansing, it was said tonight, offered to have witnesses go on the stand to testify regarding the Lusitania. One feature of the evidence, it is reported, will be a repudiation of the allegation that Secretary Bryan gave any such advice to the Executive. Mr. Bryan himself has denied it, and will be called as a witness this week, probably Wednesday.

The Senate committee expects to complete all the evidence in the La Follette case this week so as to have its report ready for Congress when it reconvenes next Monday. The committee has about a dozen witnesses to hear.

Senator La Follette, who has been here nearly the whole time since adjournment in October, has devoted himself to preparing an exhaustive defense to be based on the principle of free speech.

MARBURG ON GERMAN AIMS.

Declares the British Fleet Blocked World Domination.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Theodore Marburg, former United States Minister to Belgium, in addressing the students of Vassar College here tonight pointed out that economic causes were not behind the great war, and showed by elimination where Germany's ambition for world domination existed.

"Germany's commerce passed to and from the outer world in great volume through Antwerp and Holland quite as freely as if the ports and railroads were her own," said Mr. Marburg, "and if there was any country which already had her place in the sun, and which was enjoying the common freedom of the seas, it was Germany. Her splendid merchant fleet sailed unmolested, and her flag was found in every port.

"As for Germany's naval ambition, the great war has shown that Germany could guard herself amply against invasion and aggression by remaining simply what Bismarck desired of her, namely, a strong military power in the centre of Europe without great sea power. When faced with these facts and others, Germany replies that what she objected to was not that England had interfered with her sea borne commerce, but that with her superior fleet, she might do so. This reason is on a parallel with her second and belated excuse for invading Belgium, that unless she entered it France would have done so.

"Reduced to its final terms, the complaint of Germany is that the existence of the English fleet has interfered with German ambitions, and we must thank God this last charge is true."

MOTHERS BACK OUR ARMY.

It's a Woman's War, Man-Made in Germany, Dr. Shaw Says.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 25.—Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Chairman of the Woman's Committee of the National Council of Defense, at a mass meeting of Maryland mothers today termed the war "a woman's war, man-made in Germany." She declared the greatest proof of patriotism in women was the fact that they gave their sons for war.

"We must send our boys away with a smile on our faces," she said. "The time for tears must be after they are gone. Let our children know that they live in the land where men are willing to die, and where women are willing to give all for their country. All the world is calling to the womanhood and the motherhood of America."

Dr. Shaw urged a "smokeless day" for men at home, and that they send the tobacco so saved to the men in the field.

A message to America's men in the service was drafted, and will be sent to the various units Christmas. It is:

"The women of America are with you in spirit and in service. You are our standard-bearers and our hope. We love you, believe in you, and pray for you this Christmas morn."

FIRE AT NAVY YARD HERE.

Storehouse Blaze Keeps Apparatus Busy Twenty Minutes.

Considerable excitement was caused among persons living in the vicinity of the Navy Yard in Brooklyn last night by a fire which did some damage to a one-story brick building used as a storehouse for odds and ends just inside the wall in Flushing Avenue. The blaze was discovered shortly before 8 o'clock by Policeman George Hayes, who notified a marine on sentry duty in the yard. The Navy Yard fire department was summoned, but after a few minutes this appeared to be insufficient, so an alarm was turned in from the box at the Sands Street gate. This brought three engines and other apparatus, together with the fireboats New Yorker and William J. Gaynor.

The blaze was extinguished after about twenty minutes, during which time the flames and smoke were visible to many people living in the vicinity of the plant. Officials of the navy yard refused information as to the fire, except that it was slight.

WANT "WAR ANANIAS" LIST.

Patriotic Societies Propose Posting of Rumor Mongers' Names.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Formation of "war ananias clubs" of men and women who circulate false rumors to hamper successful prosecution of the war is suggested to the American public in a statement issued tonight by the National Committee of Patriotic Societies.

The society proposes that the names of persons found responsible for such stories be posted publicly.

The models: Stiff and soft cuff negligees and pleated models, but the majority are made with soft cuffs. Sizes 13½ to 17½.

The fabrics: Lorraine Fine Count Madras; Gayley and Lord's Silk Stripings; Wright and Graham's Scotch Madras; D. & J. Anderson's Imported Madras; Fine Fibre Silks.

FRENCH TO GATHER IN HERO LAND TODAY

Their Government's Exhibit, Late in Arriving, Will Be Shown for First Time.

GRAND OPERA STARS TO SING

French and American Songs Will Also Be Given by Fighting Men of Both Nations.

This is French Day at Hero Land. The official French Government exhibits, which are promised to be among the most interesting of the show, did not arrive in time to be shown at the opening of the great war charities spectacle on Saturday, but the management announced last night that they are now in place, ready for the throngs expected at Grand Central Palace today.

French Day is designed by the numerous charitable and relief organizations taking part in the sixteen days' affair to be one of the most important of the various national celebrations.

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and Arthur Voegtlin, entertainment producer, acting in conjunction with the French societies participating, announce the following program for this afternoon:

Dancing in the great hall and singing of American military songs in French by Mlle. Semiramis of the French Opera Company. In the motion picture theatre British Government war films will be shown, while from 4 to 6 o'clock will be shown the latest war films taken by the French Government, which have been loaned to Hero Land through the Marquis de Polignac for this day only. From 4 to 6 in the afternoon the Winter Garden management will present for the benefit of the Authors' League Fund, excerpts from the current Winter Garden show, headed by Ed Wynn, James J. Corbett, Frank Tinney, and other stars of the show.

The evening program is an elaborate one. In the Great Hall, "The Marseillaise" will be sung by the French dramatic soprano, Mme. Seygard-Lane, and a tableau will be formed of American and French sailors, bearing the colors of the two countries.

Mme. Seygard-Lane will sing a number of the compositions of Christian Sinding. Her appearance has been arranged by the French Society, Gen de Lettres, which was organized to help the writers and authors who have been placed in need due to the war.

There will be solo dancing by the Japanese artist, Mme. Komako-Kimura. In the Little Theatre from 9 to 12 o'clock, for the benefit of the Authors League fund, Pauline Frederick will appear in person in a studio presentation of the film "Ashes of Embers," and Leonora Ulrich and William Mack will appear in a scene from "Tiger Rose," personally directed by David Belasco.

Bessie McCoy Davis is to head the afternoon and evening performance of the Stage Women's War Relief booth.

The program for the afternoon performance will be Mme. Andrée Bartlette, pianist; Miss Lorraine Wyman in Petites Chansons, and Bessie McCoy Davis. In addition Mr. Ziegfeld will present two "Miss 1917" acts every afternoon and evening of this week. In the evening the program will include Miss Laura Hope Crews, Florence Nash, Sidney Thompson, Mme. Andrée Bartlette, and a Harlequinade.

John Moffat, Executive Chairman of the Management Committee, yesterday expressed himself as greatly gratified at the initial success of the affair, and thanked Governor Whitman for his "forcible expression of confidence not only in the manner in which the funds are being safeguarded, but with the manner in which these funds are to be disbursed." He added:

"New York is quick to discern, quick to understand, and quick to appreciate the fact that 'Hero Land' represents the unselfish and untiring effort of thousands of our most prominent men and women, whose sole thought and sole object is to make the spectacle such a success, both from the viewpoint of receipts for charity and from the viewpoint of a patriotic demonstration of united sentiment, as to leave no question as to where New York stands."

A brilliant feature will be the Thanksgiving Eve ball to follow the pageant "On the Road to Victory," devised and staged by Miss Margaret Stewart Crawford. This triumphal march depicts the allied nations, led by redeemed Belgium and followed by Serbia, Montenegro, Rumania, France, Russia, the British Empire, Italy, Japan, Brazil, Siam, and as the guerdon of victory, the United States will be represented by symbolic figures on floats.

GIVES HOUSE FOR BAZAAR.

Adolph Lewisohn Moves to Cut Costs of Temple Emanu-El Fair.

As a means of reducing the overhead expense Adolph Lewisohn has donated his home, 881 Fifth Avenue, to house the bazaar which will be given under the auspices of Temple Emanu-El on Dec. 12 and 13. Mr. Lewisohn's purpose is that a maximum of the money raised at the bazaar shall go to the relief of Jewish war sufferers and for welfare work among American soldiers and sailors.

In view of the adverse criticism which has been directed at bazaars, every precaution is being taken by those in charge of this bazaar to guard against waste and unnecessary expense. All the workers have volunteered their services and no salaries or commissions will be paid.

The bazaar will be open for only two days, and a patriotic dramatic entertainment will be given each evening. A feature will be the attention it will pay to food conservation. No refreshments will be served which conflict with Mr. Hoover's regulations, and a booth will be devoted to an exhibition of economical methods of cooking. Several important persons are expected to speak at the opening of the bazaar.

Among the patrons and patronesses are Adolph Lewisohn, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff, Louis Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph S. Ochs and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim.

APPOINTS WAR FUND HEAD.

Secretary Baker Names W. H. Barnum for Advisory Committee.

"I know the American people will join with President Wilson and with the Navy and War Departments in striving to build an army vigorous and sound physically, mentally and morally—an army which shall bring home no other scars than those won in honorable warfare." This message was sent by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker in appointing William Henry Barnum of 111 Broadway Chairman of the City Advisory Committee of the War Camp Community Fund yesterday.

Additional impetus was given to the campaign by the presence of John N. Willys, Chairman of the National Committee, John F. Schindler, Chairman of the Executive Committee; Charles H. Sabin, Treasurer of the National Committee, and Ernest Stauffen, Jr., Treasurer of the City Advisory Committee, are expected to confer with Barnum shortly on ways and means of bringing the campaign for $4,000,000 to a successful conclusion. New York City's quota of this is $1,000,000.

City Gives Hotel for War Work.

The St. George Hotel, New Brighton, S. I., taken over by the city as part of the County House site, has been turned over to the Richmond County Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Navy Branch of the Y. M. C. A., and other allied activities, and will be known as the War Service Building. There will be a formal opening on Saturday afternoon next from 3 until 10 o'clock.

SOLDIERS SEIZED ON TRAIN.

Police Turn Two Men Over to Military Authorities.

Two young men were arrested last night at Jamaica and later turned over to the military authorities at Camp Mills when the police learned that the prisoners had not received permission to leave Camp Upton, where they had been sent recently. The men, who gave their names as John Callas and Henry Ellinger, said they lived in Manhattan and had been sent with the drafted men to Upton. They were on a Long Island Railroad train when they first attracted attention. They both claimed they were entitled to the reduced fare allowed soldiers, although Callas was not in uniform. When they refused to pay any more the conductor telegraphed ahead to Jamaica, where the two men were turned over to the police.

At the station house Callas became so worked up that he fell in a fit and a doctor from St. Mary's Hospital was summoned. The army officials at Camp Upton were called by telephone and the police claim to have received assurances that the men had left camp without permission. Callas would not say where he got the civilian clothes, which were noticeably too large for him.

Passers to Help War Fund.

On Thanksgiving afternoon, at Alhambra Hall, the San Salvador Council, K. of C., five will face the Italian Catholic Club five in a special basketball match, the proceeds of which will go to the Council's war charities fund.

ANDREW CARNEGIE IS 82.

Many Congratulatory Messages Mark Birthday of Philanthropist.

Andrew Carnegie was 82 years old yesterday. He spent the day quietly at his home at 2 East Ninety-first Street, leaving the house only to take a short automobile ride with Mrs. Carnegie through the Park in the afternoon.

It was not desired to make a formal celebration of the day, and only a few close relatives and intimate friends called late in the afternoon to present their congratulations. A large number of congratulatory letters and telegrams were received, one of those most valued by Mr. Carnegie being from Charles M. Schwab.

SERVICE FOR ALCEDO DEAD.

Tribute to Torpedo's Victims at Naval Reserve Armory.

An official memorial service for the dead of the U. S. S. Alcedo, the converted yacht, which was torpedoed on Nov. 5, was held yesterday morning in the Naval Reserve Armory at the foot of Fifty-second Street, Brooklyn. The service was held at the suggestion of Rear Admiral N. C. Usher, Commander of the Third Naval District. Chaplan Thomas Montgomery Mark of the Naval Reserve conducted the ceremonies.

In addition to Chaplain Mark, Rear Admiral Usher and Commodore Robert P. Forshew, commanding the New York Naval Reserve, were present. Commodore Forshew read the names of the sailors who were lost, and said a few words in praise of the gallantry of the dead seamen.

CRAZED ACTOR A SUICIDE.

Wrongly Believed He Was Pursued by Secret Service Men.

Hallucinations that he was being pursued by Secret Service men and detectives of the Police Department because they suspected that he was a German spy yesterday caused Joseph La Franie, 28 years old, an actor, to commit suicide by inhaling illuminating gas at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Gertrude Simpson of 34 Downing Street, Brooklyn. The young man was found in his room on the second floor of the house with his head covered with towels and blankets and the gas turned on. La Franie lived with his parents at Newburg, N. Y. He was registered in the selective draft, and while awaiting a call to go to camp went to Brooklyn on a visit. A letter addressed to his relatives said:

"I have been followed day after day by Secret Service men and police detectives, and I am in deadly fear of arrest as they think that I am a German spy. Yesterday and today were something terrible, and I can stand it no longer. Good-bye and God bless you all for all that you have done for me. It is no use while these fellows are after me."

Coroner Ernest C. Wagner said that the young man's fear of arrest was due to dementia.

SCRIBNER'S FOR CHRISTMAS
(December)

The purpose of this advertisement is to turn the pages of the Christmas Scribner's with you — to give you a quick idea of the holiday surprises prepared for you by the house of Scribner.

Great names mean great things in Scribner's. And when you have read "Flanders and Jerusalem," by John in this December issue, you will say that this distinguished British author's picture of what Jerusalem has given and now gives to the world, typifies the final conception of what it means to fight, to be wounded, and still to go on living.

No doubt the name of Henry

suggests just now those words, famous as a summary of the stand of Holland when he fought for peace as American Minister to The Hague. But in this December issue Dr. Van Dyke is known as the nightman of fallen trees and the wet and brings to you a poem of rare charm and beauty: "Frost-Time of Flowers in Holland." From another American author of distinction comes a message of peculiar interest just now, in "The French — as Seen by an American" strips off the apparent inconsistencies of French character and reveals the national traits that are inspiring the admiration of Americans who really know the people of France to-day. In a different way, William Kay Wallace's "The True Italy" in this same number promotes a closer understanding of another ally — the nation that has produced Dante and Petrarch, Leonardo and Titian, Galileo and Columbus.

EDITH WHARTON

MEREDITH NICHOLSON

has written a story within a story — a tale of a novelist who changed his name and buried himself in new surroundings — of his daughter — and of a new novel which startled the literary world — and the amazing truth about it — known to only two men — and a girl. "The Heart of Life" is but one of the stories in this number. Louis Dodge, who wrote "Bonnie May," contributes one — "Wilder's Ride" — and Temple Bailey has written a new sort of Christmas story in "The Red Candle." Then there are Maxwell Struthers Burt's "Le Panache" and L. Allen Harker's "The Misfit" and Harriet Welles's "The Admiral's Birthday." Remember these and then remember that will contain a notable series by Meredith Nicholson on the part that the Middle West plays in American life to-day — and to-morrow; fiction by Galsworthy, Van Dyke, Louis Dodge, Mary R. S. Andrews, Katharine Fullerton Gerould, Mary Synon, James B. Connolly, and many others. Edith Wharton, now in Morocco with a French Government party, will describe her unique experiences.

WINSTON CHURCHILL

is now writing a series about the war's changes in England's political and social institutions. These are but a very few of the great number of distinguished people who will contribute to next year's Scribner's — the best-balanced magazine in America.

MANN TO RELINQUISH ACTIVE LEADERSHIP

Still Suffers Ill-Health, Hence Gillett and Lenroot Will Direct Republicans.

CONGRESS TO OPEN DEC. 3

Revenue, Loan, and Other War Legislation Expected to Monopolize Long, Busy Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — Congress will reassemble for the long session on Monday, Dec. 3, a week from to-morrow. It is believed that little other than war legislation will be attempted. Two special circumstances, however, will be shaped to allow of women suffrage amendment, and the prohibition forces are scheming for the greatest booby to succeed to get behind the prohibition amendment.

For the first time in many years the Republicans in the House will be without the leadership of James R. Mann. He was forced to leave Washington the last session because of illness, and although he has talked on the telephone from his home in Chicago with his colleagues, he has not been able to resume his duties. Mr. Mann's health is improving, but it is not believed that he will be able to return to Washington before the middle of January, and it is probable that he will not be able to be present at the opening of the session.

Upon the coming week Congressional leaders plan to confer with President Wilson concerning the session's program. Among those leaders already here are Senator Clark, Senator Martin of Virginia and Chairman of Democratic Congressional Committee Hull, Democratic and Republican Senate leaders, Senator Lodge, Senator Penrose, Senator Smoot, Senator Curtis, Senator Gronna, Senator Kenyon, Senator Capper, and Senator Gower of Kansas, Democratic and Republican whips.

Deserving Mother Asks Children.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 25. — After her children came home from Sunday School, Mrs. Mary Wisniewski, 40 years old, of Haddonfield, near here, locked herself in her home and slashed her throat with a razor and will die, it was said to-night. Her husband, a coal and ice dealer, and their children discovered Mrs. Wisniewski lying on the floor. When neighbors discovered Mrs. Wisniewski's condition in a hospital here Mrs. Wisniewski's husband left her a note, says the police report, and this made her despondent.

War on Germany's Allies.

Whether war will be declared to exist against Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria has not been determined. It may be found that the subjects of those nations in this country can be declared alien enemies without an outright declaration of war, in which event they could be dealt with as Germans are.

Many members of Congress are expecting the President's message address for Dec. 4 with the question whether war with Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria, Switzerland is involved such action is generally assumed now here.

Besides this coming week Congressional leaders plan to confer with President Wilson concerning the session's program. Among those leaders already here are Senator Clark, Senator Martin of Virginia and Chairman of New Democratic Congressional Committee Hull, Democratic and Republican Senate leaders, Senator Lodge, Senator Penrose, Senator Smoot, Senator Curtis, Senator Gronna, Senator Kenyon, Senator Capper, and Senator Gower of Kansas, Democratic and Republican whips.

Those men, one a manipulator and the other a progressive, are looked upon to represent both factions of the party and so to fit harmoniously to the changed political conditions which will be held after this session adjourns. Mr. Kahn probably will allow it to be known that these men and ranking Republicans on committees are to be recognized as controlling the policies of the party. Mr. Kahn of California will be in sole charge of legislation for his party originating with the Military Affairs Committee, and Mr. Butler of Pennsylvania will deal with naval legislation. No move will be made to elect a successor to Mr. Mann.

Several measures which relate to the war or to conditions which are supposed to follow it and which failed to pass at the last session are expected to come forward for discussion in the early days of the new session. One of those bills provides for fixing the prices of iron ore and iron and steel products. It is now before the Committee on Interstate Commerce and has encountered great opposition in the Senate.

Pickens' Civil Rights Bill.

A determined effort will be made to pass the Civil Rights bill, which failed in the closing period of the late session. This measure, intended as a 'stay' law for the protection of persons serving in the armed forces of the United States, passed the House, but did not reach the floor of the Senate. This sort of legislation has been enacted by ten States.

The Judge Advocate of the Army cooperated in drafting the bill before Congress. As to suits in the courts, this bill gives much discretion to Judges. It delays eviction of dependents of soldiers and sailors for non-payment of rent, forbids forfeiture on account of non-payment of installments due, prevents sales of property for non-payment of taxes, and prevents prejudice through foreclosure of mortgages.

Another measure permits combinations of American firms for foreign trade. This bill has the approval of the Administration. It is especially sought by small concerns, which are not able to enter foreign trade because of the expense involved. Germany and England permit such combinations. In this country the Sherman anti-trust law prohibits them. The present measure received a decisive vote in the House last session, and reached the head of the Senate calendar. When the Senate reconvenes, it will be the Senate's unfinished business.

Additional war revenues will be required, and another revenue bill will appear. Authority will be given for floating another loan, perhaps in February. How much borrowing will be done before the end of this fiscal year, next June, is a matter of speculation. The war costs have been greater than estimated, and two or three loans may be negotiated. One of the first steps that Congress will take probably will be the authorization of another loan.

Legislation probably will be asked to permit the railroads to pool their interests during the war. The roads, with the sanction of the Government, already have decided to do this. The President probably will ask Congress to legalize the expedient.

WAR BOARD SPURS RAILROAD EFFORTS

Issues Fourteen Instructions to Increase Capacity of Their Equipment.

FAVORS LONGER SCHEDULES

More Economy in Fuel, Common Use of Terminals, and Shortest Routes Advocated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — Vigorous action was announced today by the Railroads War Board to spur the railroads to redoubled efforts to increase their efficiency in order to meet the extraordinary demands for transportation this Winter. Fourteen specific instructions as to additional methods for increasing the capacity of their equipment and facilities were issued through the board's chairman, Fairfax Harrison.

While repeating and emphasizing the suggestions previously made, under which approximately 10 per cent more traffic was handled during the second quarter of 1917 than during the corresponding period of 1916, the board directs attention to the extraordinary additional amount of transportation that the carriers will be called upon to supply, and the new instructions go much further than any that have previously been issued.

Wherever possible railroads are directed to "arrange for common use of terminals and facilities to the ever diminishing extent necessary." They are also told, "wherever transportation can be conserved, to avoid the use of unreasonably circuitous routes, carefully avoiding, however, overloading direct routes."

Another important instruction is: "Longhaul passenger and fast freight trains scheduled during the Winter to promote punctuality, and avoid abandonment of trains that inevitably follow failure special trains to make their schedules."

Still further instructions are "to encourage the use of motor trucks and cooperation with trolley lines for handling short-haul freight," and to "enlist the services of water transportation lines in all reasonable and practical ways."

To avoid congestion at seaports and regional gateways the board advises the prompt use of embargoes, which, it says, "should be established immediately on signs of trouble, without waiting, as has frequently been done, until congestion has actually occurred; an ounce of prevention is worth not one but many pounds of cure."

Government Orders Emphasized.

The other instructions are as follows:

"Study thoroughly all priority and other governmental orders issued to promote movement of traffic and use of equipment, comply cheerfully and promptly therewith, and adopt the same attitude toward the orders of the commission on car service.

"Redouble efforts to:

(a) Increase the loads per car of bulk grain and other commodities, much of which still moves in light loads.

(b) Expedite car movements through yards and terminals.

(c) Check up and enforce demurrage rules rigidly.

(d) Check up and eliminate excess haul of commodities.

"Unload company material much more promptly.

"Curtail reconsignment privileges in every possible way.

"Increase loading by L. C. L. merchandise cars by extensioning 'sailing day,' a practice used with great success by some of our constituents.

"Increased fuel economy by closer inspection of firing practice and by extending the use of superheated steam, feed water heaters, &c.

"Review switching service at terminals and prescribe special movements so as to cut out all unnecessary detention of cars.

"Start a systematic, vigorous campaign to prevent unnecessary loss and pilferage. A study of the operations of which on one large system convinces us will result not only in a large money saving, but in saving twelve to eighteen hours' time on cars, and the consequent service to war regions, handling of bookkeeping account and billing at each respective terminal."

In explanation of the necessity for even greater efforts toward increased efficiency Mr. Harrison says:

"We are approaching the winter with apprehension of possible congestion on our railroads, notwithstanding all that has been accomplished to the limits of operation with the co-operation of Government agencies, shippers, and the general public in increasing their efficiency of operation. Our records show that in the second quarter of last year locomotives handled 8,811 cars each and each freight car 15.5 per cent more revenue ton miles than in the corresponding period in 1916, notwithstanding the addition of 4,865 locomotives and 381,000 freight cars to the equipment of the latter year.

"While the committee gratefully accords credit for this showing to the cooperative efforts of the carriers and the public, it considers it necessary to call attention to the extraordinary additional amount of transportation that the carriers will be called on to supply this Winter through the operation of conditions that have developed since our entry into war, the pressure from which is constantly and rapidly increasing in intensity.

"The commandeering of ships engaged in Atlantic and Pacific coastwise trade and of seagoing tugs plying between Newport News and New England ports throws on the railroads the burden of transporting much of the New England coal and cotton supply that formerly moved by water.

Transportation and Fuel.

"Many more troops, in addition to 1,200,000 already moved, will have to be transported and at least 2,500 carloads of supplies for their use must be handled daily this Winter. Proper response to these demands, and to the almost unlimited calls for fuel from all parts of our country, will require unremitting effort.

"It is evident, therefore, that, however heartily the public has already responded to our requests for cooperation, additional and most strenuous endeavors must be made, both by us and by them, to overcome the stress of Winter weather, overworked plants, and depletion of forces through calls to the flag and resignations to accept employment in shipyards and munitions factories.

"The railroads generally are very shorthanded, some of our constituents reporting a net shortage of 10% per cent in the number and a much larger percentage of loss in the efficiency of the forces because of the presence of inexperienced men. We recognize that every one is doing his best to bring conditions to help but cannot say that we feel in any degree encouraged. Should action to prevent us from doing the public as good service as we desire, we and every railway executive is ready to accept what we believe and to request the public to continue to exercise the patience and tolerance that has been shown."

Music — a war-time necessity

A famous general once said that the only enemies he ever feared entered the battle with a song on their lips.

Patriotism is three parts emotion and music is the language of the emotions.

Courage is born of the heart and music speaks straight to the heart.

In times that try men's souls, every force which keeps the nation's spirit bright is a great and positive asset. Every means of combating trial with happiness must be carefully conserved and fostered.

A nation at war requires food for its soul as well as for its body. The morale of the fighting forces must be maintained. The mental and moral resources of the people must be preserved at their full vigor. Recreational and cultural activities must provide the needed relaxation, revive the drooping spirits, soften the sting of sorrow, instil new ardors of bravery and determination. The sound of laughter must be heard in the land.

Instinctively men turn to music for entertainment and inspiration. Music speaks a tongue that all can understand, that nothing else can speak. It reaches down to the hidden springs of feeling, replenishes and freshens them. To the mysterious power of music, the pulse responds and hopes run high. Under its healing influence, gloom and despair lose their evil grip.

Imagine, if you can, a nation going into war without the thrill of music! Imagine, if you can, a nation battling through the dark days of a prolonged struggle without the heartening comfort of music!

The Victrola is literally the nation's chief source of music. More Americans — and Americans in the making — have learned "The Star Spangled Banner" from the Victrola than from any other one source. The Victrola is in millions of homes. It is in camp, on shipboard, in the trenches, the hospitals, the schools, and the churches. It is the principal source of cheerfulness and entertainment to the soldiers and sailors of Uncle Sam. "Back home" among the folks behind the army — the farmers, the men and women in the fields and the factories, in city and in country, the Victrola is one of the greatest — if not the greatest — means of diversion.

It is the mission of the artist to create beauty and pleasure. It is the mission of the Victrola to carry them directly to the people, to plant them in their homes and thus to contribute to their mental and spiritual well-being.

The tremendous popularity and use of the Victrola and Victor Records indicate how strongly established they are in the affections of the people, how completely they are fulfilling a national need.

The Victrola performs no mean service to the nation.

ALL BRITISH LABOR ON FULL WAR BASIS

Merchants' Association Here Issues Report on Industrial Conditions in England.

REGULATE PROFIT AND WAGE

Strikes Practically Eliminated by Measures Which Insure Good Living and Working Conditions.

The methods adopted by the British Government to provide satisfactory working agreements between organized labor and munition manufacturers and to prevent the disarrangement of industry which was threatened by the practice of bidding workingmen from one plant or trade to another, is discussed in a study of the industrial and labor history of Great Britain during the war by the Merchants' Association.

The report, issued yesterday, takes up in detail the steps taken by the British Government to deal with the waste and loss of efficiency caused when a booming industry began to strip the working force of other industries which were not experiencing such flush times. The British Government was especially strict in preventing one manufacturer from hiring away the employes of another man in the same line. On this subject the report says:

"The shifting of labor from establishment to establishment, from work of great importance to work of less importance, from war work to civil work, has been checked by a system of licenses.

"No non-essential industry which uses materials essential for war purposes or employs labor which could be used in the manufacture of munitions now exists in England. Therefore, there is little risk of labor, which is engaged in the manufacture of munitions, leaving for civil work.

"It was soon found in England that some manufacturers had taken on orders that could not be filled without a large increase in their labor force. Accordingly, such manufacturers had set about getting the necessary workmen in the most uneconomic way possible; that is, they tried to get labor from other plants. A system of labor auctioneering and enticement was found to be going on all over the country. This situation was ended by two regulations under the Defense of the Realm act, which, stated in effect that:

"(1) No employer in the engineering industry (machine shops and other metal working plants) should offer an enticement or endeavor to entice away an employe from any other employer in that industry. Should he do this, he was liable to a heavy penalty.

"(2) The Ministry of Munitions was empowered to regulate and restrict the employment of labor in any factory. If an employer offers an enticement to other labor, or if he is found using the labor he has in an uneconomic way (holding labor for future contracts or using a skilled man on a machine which a less skilled man could operate) an embargo is laid on that firm, and it is not permitted to engage any labor of any sort except under license from the Ministry of Munitions. In this way a plant can be watched and the man power in that plant can be economized as much as possible."

Labor Works in Harmony.

Conferences between the Government and representatives of organized labor in the Spring of 1915 reached a series of agreements which were later embodied in the Munitions of War act and became the solution of the labor problem in Britain. The report says:

"This act is legislation by agreement between government, capital, and labor. It covers practically everything that could be manufactured for war purposes. There was not a single clause in it that had not been the subject of discussion and agreement between those three interests. The following were the principal features of the agreement:

"(1) The Minister of Munitions received power to control factories engaged principally on the manufacture of munitions. The control of these factories amounted to a right of the Minister of Munitions to take the plant over altogether from the owners. That right has been rarely exercised, and exercised only when the management failed to comply with the requirements of Government. Such cases have been exceptional, probably only two or three in number. As part of his powers in regard to these factories (and this actually became law) the Minister of Munitions has definite authority to limit the profits of such plants. The profits were limited to an increase of one-fifth over an average of the profits of the two years preceding the war.

"(2) The trade unions agreed that, in view of the fact that a definite limitation had been put on profits, the wages of the employes should be fixed at the rates which existed at that time. There was to be no fluctuation upward or downward, except by consent of the Minister of Munitions. It was agreed that neither capital nor labor should make a profit out of the nation's needs. The Government, having fixed wages, appreciated that it became its duty to see that the labor so dealt with should not suffer from the increased cost of living. It set up a Committee on Production. One of the duties of this committee consisted in hearing evidence as to the increased cost of living three times every year.

"Evidence is brought before it by trade union officials, or any one concerned, and the committee has all the Government statistics in regard to the increased cost of the necessities of life. Assuming that the living costs have gone up, the committee then makes, (in the nature of a war bonus,) a national award to all employes on war work, payable by the employer, but to be recovered from the Government.

Strikes and Lockouts Illegal.

"(3) Strikes and lockouts became illegal and arbitration became compulsory. It was agreed that any trade disputes in war industries should be submitted compulsorily to arbitration, which the Government should arrange. A strike or lockout in peace times was looked upon as more or less a domestic matter. The Government very rarely interfered, and only when it became a widespread inconvenience. However, the Government took the view that its duties in peace time and war time were very different. It took the view that it could not tolerate interruption of supplies resulting from differences between employers and employes. It took the view that its duty was to interfere between employers and employes to prevent interruption of supplies vital to the success of the armies. The Government viewed this matter with such gravity that power was granted by this act to imprison for life any one who incited to strikes or interfered with the operation of the agreement. It has never become necessary to enforce this penalty. Public opinion has generally enforced this act very effectively.

"(4) The trade unions agreed to waive all their practices and customs which tended to restrict either employment or output, such as the employment of only union labor and the use of only skilled persons on skilled jobs; and they promised to do their utmost to see that the agreement was carried through. They agreed also that any person, man or woman, would be allowed to do any kind of work. In return for these important concessions the Government pledged itself to restore pre-war conditions in shops after the war. The trade unions, their leaders, and the rank and file have abided very loyally by that agreement and act."

The Industrial Bureau stated that it would be misleading to say that no labor troubles had occurred since this act was adopted but that there had been only three strikes which might be regarded as serious, and that none of these had lasted for more than a week. Moreover, not a strike has occurred since this time for higher wages, and no strike has occurred in which the labor union officials have not stood by the Government.

AMERICANS
HOW ARE WE BUILDING?

THE National Day of Judgment has come upon us "as a thief in the night." For one hundred and forty-two years we have been at work in such a field and with such material as no people has ever had before since the beginning of time. And now the hour has struck for an accounting. The great Audit has been ordered and our books are being scanned. As we have sown so shall we also reap.

For the victory in this titanic war is to rest with that people which has founded its house upon a rock. We are in a struggle not primarily of men, guns, ships, or money, but of moral fibre, and the peoples whose institutions stand the acid test—they and they only—can survive.

If we have truly builded on the foundation that "all men are born free and equal"; if we have been fair in business, just in law, honest in politics; if all men have really had an equal chance here, we are safe. If even with an imperfect record, we have more nearly approached these ideals than any other nation, no power on earth can stand against us—for we are learning at last what so long we have wilfully ignored, that moral, not physical force rules this universe.

And will our record stand the proof? To doubt it would be treason—though we have abundant evidence that we have sown some seeds of bitter fruit. But in this crucial hour we dare not rest our case. If there are errors to repair we must repair them; faults to make good, we must make them good. So long as the decision is pending we have ceaseless work to do.

Fellow American business men—what power there is to sink or to save at this late hour is largely vested in us. We influence more laws, more institutions, and more individual lives than any other element of our population. If our influence today is felt unitedly for national and personal righteousness it may be the determining factor in saving democracy.

There is only one measure of business success today and that is service. And if we are broad enough to put the spirit of service first we shall find better business along with higher usefulness.

With everything we hold dear at stake this is no time for self-consciousness. Believing as we do that our national safety depends on the spirit of our people, we have thought it money not only well spent but well invested to publish this message to the business men of New York and to plead with all who feel its import to speak likewise, as the spirit moves them, for the betterment of public spirit, private morals, and business conditions generally, while our country's very existence is hanging on the uplift of all three.

This is the first of a series of three or more business messages which will be published by this company at weekly intervals, each dealing with a subject of vital importance to the economic stability of our country in the present time of stress & danger

ACTOR AND MANAGER CELEBRATE PEACE

Noted Players and Producers Dine Together, Delighted Over Their New Agreement.

SEE END OF OLD TROUBLES

Francis Wilson Says Even Actors Would Be Willing Now to Discuss Cut in Salaries.

The recent ratification of the standard theatrical contract by the United Managers' Protective Association and the Actors' Equity Association last night brought together nearly 500 members of those two bodies at a dinner of celebration at the Hotel Astor. The occasion wrote theatrical history, marking the first time that the actor and the manager have formally and officially smoked the pipe of peace. The ratification of the contract, which became effective on Nov. 1, was the culmination of negotiations which extended almost from the time of the organization of the Actors' Association, five years ago. The association now has 3,300 members.

The balance of power was retained last night by having Marc Klaw, President of the Managers' Association, act as Chairman, and Francis Wilson, head of the Actors' Association, officiate as toastmaster. Other speakers were Daniel Frohman, Janet Beecher, William H. Crane, James K. Hackett, Alf Hayman, Howard Kyle, Henry Miller, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, E. H. Sothern, Lucille Watson, Hugh Ward, and Oliver Morosco. David Belasco, who had been expected to speak, was called out of town and was represented by letter.

The gathering took for its keynote the declaration of Mr. Klaw that "we are all arteries of the same body, supplying life and blood to the same profession," and both managers and actors expressed their delight at the successful working out of their problems. Francis Wilson declared that the relation previously existing between manager and actor had been "nothing, if not barbaric," and commented with satisfaction upon the conditions and the possible reduction of changed prospect. Referring to present actors' salaries, a move which has been discussed by the managers, Mr. Wilson gave it as his opinion that the actor, should necessity demand it, would be quite willing to meet with the managers to effect a rearrangement upon a proper and equitable basis.

In the course of their addresses a number of speakers took occasion to refer to the newspapers in uncomplimentary vein.

"I would like to call attention to one thing," declared Mr. Klaw, "and that is the propensity of the newspapers to belittle things in the theatrical business. They place jingoism ahead of justice, and would rather be read than be believed. I recently read an editorial which referred to the 'audible wail' which had gone up from the managers because of the current depression, but, although the acoustics are very good in my vicinity, I have not heard any wail. And I think that the managers can stand the gaff as well as the newspapers."

Francis Wilson, referring to newspaper accounts of objections raised by the managers to the war tax, characterized them as "slander," and another reference to the newspapers was made later in the evening by Alf Hayman, head of the Charles Frohman Company. Mr. Hayman, after telling of Charles Frohman's request to him to "keep the banner flying" in the event that anything happened to him, declared that he had endeavored to do so.

"Some day when I meet C. F.," he continued, "I can look him squarely in the eye and tell him that I did my best. And that will be my reward for the slurs cast upon me by some of New York's newspapers.

"With the present impossible war tax, with inflated salaries, and with a greatly increased cost of production, matters in the theatrical business have reached a serious state. In Europe the newspapers are doing their best to get the people into the theatres, but in America they are doing their best to keep them out."

Hugh Ward, the Australian manager, proposed an affiliation of the American Actors' Equity Association and the Australian actors, who also have an organization. Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson suggested that the American, English, and Australian associations join hands in the taking of steps to take care of actors who are disabled in the war.

NEW MUSIC HALL AT YALE.

Building Erected in Memory of Albert A. Sprague Is Dedicated.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 25.—The Albert Arnold Sprague Memorial Hall, given to Yale as a home for the Music Department of the university, by Mrs. Albert Arnold Sprague and her daughter, Mrs. Frederic Shurtleff Coolidge, was dedicated today.

The building is a beautiful structure in Colonial style, containing lecture, recitation, and sound-proof practice rooms; a musical library, and a concert auditorium holding about 800 persons. It has cost more than $200,000, without furnishings. The Yale Department of Music, since it was organized in 1894, has never had an appropriate or permanent home, but has been housed in various buildings insufficiently adapted to its purposes.

The new building was given by Mrs. Sprague and Mrs. Coolidge in memory of Albert Arnold Sprague of the class of 1859. Not until after Mrs. Sprague's death were the plans finally approved, and when it was found that the amount given by her was not sufficient, the remainder was made up by her daughter, Mrs. Coolidge.

The exercises in the concert hall of the new building were opened at 12:20 o'clock with prayer by the Rev. William Adams Brown of New York. Dr. James Haskell Hewitt delivered a memorial address on Mr. Sprague. The architect, Charles Allerton Coolidge, of Coolidge & Shattuck, delivered the keys of the building to President Hadley, who made a brief address accepting the memorial building on behalf of the university.

There was then an address by Horatio Parker, Professor of Music at Yale, tracing the development and the present status of music in America. He admitted the debt that American music owed to Europe, but said that the development of music here was America's own.

At 4 o'clock there was a dedication concert in the concert room of the hall by the Berkshire Street Quartet, founded and maintained by Mrs. Frederic Shurtleff Coolidge. In place of the second violin, Hermann Felber, Jr., who has been drafted in the army, Edouard Dethier of New York played. The program consisted of Schubert's posthumous quartet in D minor, Beethoven's string trio Op. 9, No. 3, and Debussy's string quartet in G minor.

Mrs. Coolidge took as her guests from New York, in a special car, a large number of musicians and music lovers.

Century Theatre Lease Extended.

Following the announcement made several days ago that the Century Theatre would be kept open both Winter and Summer hereafter, it was stated yesterday by Charles B. Dillingham and Florenz Ziegfeld that they had signed a new lease with the Directors of the New Theatre Company, giving them possession of the theatre for an additional three years. It is purposed to introduce during the season a succession of musical comedy stars, each of whom will remain at the theatre about a month.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Norworth and Shannon, producers of "Odds and Ends of 1917," are preparing a second revue as the opening attraction of the new Norworth Theatre, in Forty-eighth Street. It will be entitled "Nick-Nacks of Now."

The date of the reopening of the Cocoanut Grove with "A Night in Spain" has been changed from Dec. 3 to Dec. 6. Raymond Hitchcock will be an added attraction.

A morning matinee, instead of an afternoon performance, will be given at the Palace Theatre in aid of the Red Cross on Dec. 7, National Red Cross Day. It will begin at 10:30 o'clock.

South American capitalists are planning to construct a replica of the New York Hippodrome in Buenos Aires, and in this event the Hippodrome spectacles will be transported annually to that city for Summer runs.

THREE SUNDAY CONCERTS.

Gogorza, the Philharmonic, and Percy Grainger Are Heard.

Emilio de Gogorza, the baritone, than whom no artist appeals to a more discriminating public, made one of his rare appearances in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, singing with fine intelligence, sincerity of expression, and sureness of effect old French airs from Glück's "Iphigenie en Aulide," Monsigny's "Le Deserteur," and Gretry's "Anacreon," as well as modern songs of Duparc, Moussorgsky, Rachmaninoff, and Cuvillier. He gave an American negro composer J. Rosamond Johnson's "I Told My Love to the Roses," and also in English text Sir Edward Elgar's "Pleading" and Edwin Lemare's "The Bells of Rheims," the latter with a distinct war echo in the pianoforte accompaniment, done by Helen Winslow. Mr. de Gogorza, who inclosed in his programs a patriotic appeal for funds to build a great concert hall at Camp Upton, L. I., concluded yesterday with three gay songs given in the Spanish tongue, Alonso's "Hermosa Gitana," Ercilio's "Chanson Basque," and a "Postilion Song" by the late Enrico Granados.

The Philharmonic Society, under Josef Stransky, gave at its matinée in Carnegie Hall yesterday an orchestral program, including Tschaikowsky's symphony No. 4 and his "Theme and Variations," which the composer had led in person here at the hall's dedication in 1891, and which, on the present occasion, furnished the best playing of the day. Between the two Russian numbers there were three Wagner excerpts, the "Forest Sounds" from "Siegfried," the "Wotan's Farewell" from "Die Walkuere," which won a rising recall, and the third act prelude to "Meistersinger." Wagner himself approved concert versions of his works where their performance as opera was impossible, as is now the case in New York. The lack of scene and action is still felt, but for the present the music will be heard in no other way.

Percy Grainger, in khaki as an enlisted American army musician, but with hair grown a trifle longer since his recent furlough for concerts for the Red Cross, was warmly greeted by the Metropolitan's popular Sunday night crowd last evening, an audience that filled standing space and galleries, though leaving some empty seats on the ground floor. The former Australian pianist played a concerto of Greig, Op. 16, and his own arrangements of the "Irish Tune" and a "Flower Waltz" from Tschaikowsky. Claudia Muzio sang an air from "Madam Butterfly," and songs in French by Foudrain and Massenet. Thomas Chalmers, the American baritone, pleased the house with Tosti's "Mattinata" and a song by Morris Class, in addition to the prologue to "Pagliacci."

ARMY AND NAVY BENEFITS.

Broadway Stars at the Hippodrome and Manhattan Opera House.

Soldiers and sailors in uniform helped fill two of New York's biggest theatres last night at war benefit rallies. One was at the Hippodrome, under the auspices of the National Emergency Relief Society; the other in the Manhattan Opera House by the Minute Men of America.

Stars from practically every show on Broadway appeared. At the Hippodrome, where Jack Norworth of "Odds and Ends of 1917" acted as master of ceremonies, one of the most interesting features was Captain A. H. Boyce and his company of "Tigers" from Governors Island. Captain Boyce explained that his men were men in the draft who were drilling to perfect themselves in rudiments of military service before they were called to camp. He then put the "Tigers" through the manual of arms and various squad evolutions, to the delight of the soldiers and civilians in the audience.

At the Manhattan one of the best-received pieces was an act by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, "How Movies Are Made." After the act Mr. Drew explained in a speech that his son had been in France with the American troops since the first of May. His wife's brother, he declared, expected to sail inside of two weeks. He said that it was the regret of his life that age prevented him from enlisting.

The money realized at the Hippodrome was in the neighborhood of $6,000. It will be used to erect a clubhouse where soldiers and sailors in the city, either on leave or on the way to the front, may stay amid homelike surroundings.

OUR THREE-BILLION-DOLLAR BANK.

The following table shows the dimensions to which our Federal Reserve banking system has grown, and without which this billion-dollar country could not so easily float its multi-billion loans:

RESOURCES.
Total gold reserve	$1,584,328,000
Legal tenders, silver, &c.	52,525,000
Bills discounted and bought in market	681,719,000
Investments	243,179,000
Total resources (including minor items)	3,012,406,000
LIABILITIES.
Capital	$66,691,000
Gross deposits (Including Government deposits $1,213,887,000, and due to members' reserve account $1,480,498,000, &c., less deductions.)	1,960,747,000
Federal Reserve notes in circulation	972,565,000
Federal Reserve Bank notes	8,000,000
Total liabilities (including minor items)	3,012,406,000

The gold held is half of the liabilities. The capital is small, but is enough to secure operations whose solidity is indicated by the character of the assets. The smallness of the lock-up is indicated by the fact that the investments—long term, short term, and city warrants included—are less than the commercial bills. The degree of liquidity indicated would be appreciated if it could be contrasted with the like entries for even commercial banks in the old days, and even now with Wall Street institutions which adhere to their preference for collateral loans, despite the repeated demonstrations that they are least available under conditions of greatest necessity. It will be fortunate when our entire banking system is made over to some likeness with our Federal system in this respect. It is not the fault of the Federal Reserve Bank that the bills discounted are less than they might be. That is attributable rather to the member banks, and to their difficulties in inducing their customers to substitute acceptances and the discount market for the system of open accounts.

On the liabilities side the note issues are shamed by comparison with the like issues by other banks of its class throughout the world. The character of the notes is even more remarkable. They are mostly gold certificates, to use the familiar phrase, rather than bank notes. The great majority are issued dollar for dollar on the currency principle, rather than on the basis of the banking principle, allowing an issue larger than the assets which secure them. The gold reserve against note issues is over 65 per cent., and even against deposits is 62 per cent. If there is in the world a bank open to the reproach of being superfluously strong, our Federal Reserve system is it.

The failure to use fully the resources available to us is only partly indicated by the above statement of facts. It includes nothing about the equal resources of gold which lie outside all banks, being in general circulation, as well as outside the Federal Bank. On the first of this month there was over three billions of gold in the country, and it is constantly increasing. The increase of gold coin in October was $228,000,000, or more than double the increase of note issues. The total money of the country now is $5,768,711,565, an increase in a year of just about a round billion.

These figures would be more agreeable reading at another time, when money was more wanted than goods, for example. Gold is an embarrassment now in several nations, not a few having erected barriers against it by reducing their offers for it. The anomaly of the situation is increased by the fact that the nation which has the greatest stock ever accumulated in the world's history is erecting barriers against its export. The saying that during war laws are silent is shown to have a complement in the fact that during war economic laws fail to control finance. We are the only nation indisputably and entirely on a gold basis. We cannot get goods for gold. We must sell goods for paper. This is an absolute must, not the ordinary compulsion of profits in trade. We must do business on the terms of the rest of the world, so far as we can do it at all, or suffer defeat worse than bankruptcy. No financier ever dreamed of such facts until they occurred. It is indeed a new era, in which old arguments are open to reconsideration.

SCOTCHING A SNAKE.

Everybody knows what the war aims of the nations attacked by Germany are. The demand that we should restate them every few hours is not caused by any doubt about them or any desire to know what they are. It springs from the hope that in some such restatement some one of the Allies may say something which will cause discord with some other one, and thus help Germany to drive a wedge among them. In the case of the United States this demand, which proceeds solely from persons under German influence and from persons not intelligent enough to recognize German influence when they see it, comes with a peculiar impudence; for the President has stated our war aims at least twice within eight months. Its insincerity is shown by its instant renewal, after each of these utterances of his, as if he had not spoken.

Lately, however, the sinister influences back of this form of propaganda have taken a new and ingenious tack. Without exactly dropping their impertinent demand that the President go on restating our war aims until in some unguarded moment he drops some expression that will give offense to some of the Allies, it now emphasizes a new and equally hypocritical pretense. This is that while the President has stated our war aims often enough, the Allies have not stated theirs with equal frequency; and therefore the President is called upon to pester France, England, and Italy for repetitions of their pronouncements on the subject.

The President has ignored this singularly contemptible form of German propaganda. Its character calls for that mode of treatment. But now Colonel HOUSE, on the eve of the war conferences in Paris, announces through The Associated Press that "war aims will not be discussed," and that the American mission is there "solely for the purpose of furthering "the prosecution of the war and the "co-ordination of resources." It may be conjectured that in Europe the authors of the propaganda have gone so far as to spread the rumor that the President had sent the mission there for the purpose of forcing a new statement of war aims. Whether this is so or not, the House statement is a complete and effective way of suggesting that, so far from being made the catspaw of this form of German propaganda, the President is not even paying the slightest attention to it.

WILL RUSSIA BREAK UP?

Speculations on the fate of Russia have usually assumed as a basis the continued existence of the country we now know by that name, with its present geographical bounds. It is quite possible, however, that that vast empire will disappear, resolving itself into its constituent elements. The declarations of independence by Finland, Ukraine, and other factors in the empire—the latest such declaration, that of the Caucasus, was reported only yesterday—may be symptoms. Russia is an enormous bundle of nations, which hitherto have been tied together by the string of Czardom. The string has been cut. The bundle may fall apart.

The tendency of the French Revolution was centripetal, the tendency of the Russian revolution may be centrifugal. So far as it may be said to have developed any tendency whatever, it seems to be in the direction of disunion rather than union. This applies not only to such declarations of independence as we have mentioned, which may be things to reckon with and may be only madnesses of the moment, but to such an event as the Cossacks under General KALEDINES taking over the management of the Don region and administering it without regard to the kaleidoscope of Governments at Petrograd. The Cossacks have shown indifference and even unwillingness to fight for the overthrow of the Bolshevik rule in the capital, but seem to have determined that they will charge themselves with the orderly government of that part of the country in which they are most interested.

Russia is such an enormous country that in the past, when her entrance into the ranks of free nations was forecast, it has frequently been assumed that that great size and weight would make her preponderant in influence. But she is not homogeneous. In that vast extent of territory were gathered together nations as foreign to each other in thought and life as the people, say, of Persia are from those of Sweden. A country that includes the Mohammedans of the Caucasus and the half-tamed tribes of Central Asia, Finns, Poles, Lithuanians, Ukrainians, and Cossacks is likely to be separatist without a common bond. There was a common bond; it is gone.

The empire still holds together, despite such uneasy movings as those in the Caucasus, Finland, and Ukraine, but it may be that habit has much to do with it. Habit would not control forever, in the face of the strong impulses toward separation which the revolution has set at work. There always seemed something unnatural about the size of Russia in a world of so much smaller countries. As long as she was backward, her size was neutralized by her inefficiency. Her backwardness was fostered by her form of government. Imagine such a colossus suddenly freed and enlightened and made efficient by democracy, and who could calculate her power? And so men used to argue, believing that history would repeat itself, and that the French Revolution, duplicated in Russia, was what was sure to come out of an overthrow of Czarism. History sometimes repeats itself, but has not a habit of doing it. If we must have a historical instance, perhaps we should go back to the fall of the Roman Empire. Those who overturned the Government at Rome by no means expected or desired that the empire should cease to be, and made honest and bewildered efforts to prevent that outcome, but when the tie that had held together so many incongruous nationalities was cut, they fell apart, and nothing could prevent it.

Hitherto, in all the pointless gambolings and cavortings of enfranchised Russia, men have looked for the signs of that necessary rise of a welding, coalescing principle which we should certainly see by this time in any other nation so placed. But it does not rise; on the contrary, all the movements to that end seem to die away. Perhaps it is because they are artificial and against the underground spirit of the land. Every attempt to summon a Constituent Assembly, even though the date and place and conditions were fixed by legal authority, has simply died out; it has not been antagonized or thwarted, it has perished of inanition. It may be that the soul of Russia is not interested in it; or rather the many souls of the different Russias.

Leaders arise, but none of them can command the support of Russia. It may be, as most of us have assumed, that this was because the individuals were incompetent, but it may be that there is no Russia to support them, or that there are too many Russias. When KORNILOFF led his men against Petrograd, emissaries from the city explained to his Mohammedan soldiers, those upon whom he most relied, what was the object of his invasion, and they then refused to support him. At the time this was cited merely as an amusing instance of the volatile and frivolous nature of his support. It may be that the Mohammedans knew what they were about, that they acted upon a selfish consideration of their own interests, and decided that Petrograd, whether Bolshevik, Kerenskyized, or Korniloffized, was nothing to them. At any rate, no leader and no party since that time has had any Mohammedans in his or its support.

It may be that the historian, looking back at the wake of the ship, will disregard the zigzag dashes and serpentine undulations which engross the attention of us who are close to it, and will see it as a straight line; and that he will describe the March revolution as the initiation of the creation of new nationalities which for many centuries had been gathered together under the illogical rule of the Czar.

THE RIGHT MAN MUST BE FOUND.

When Rear Admiral W. L. CAPPS was detailed as General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, he was suffering, as he says in his letter of resignation, from physical disability. It was only a question of time when he would break down under the burden imposed upon him. He has given of his best, at the risk of total disability. In accepting the Admiral's resignation, President WILSON writes: "It will be a very great loss to the "Emergency Fleet Corporation that "you must withdraw, and it particu-"larly distresses me to know that the "cause is your impaired health."

There will be general regret that so competent an officer as Admiral CAPPS is lost to the gigantic undertaking of constructing 1,000,000 tons of shipping by March 1 and 6,000,000 tons by the end of next year; and it must be said, too, that changes at the top, that is to say, in positions that call for executive experience as well as for creative talent, are to be deplored. The Emergency Fleet Corporation will not go ahead under full steam to carry out the shipbuilding program until it gets a manager who can be enlisted for the war because his capacity and strength are adequate to the tremendous demands upon them. He must have enthusiasm and vision as well as technical skill and adaptiveness to new conditions as they arise. Besides, he must be a human dynamo for work, and be able to inspire others to work to their physical limit for the success of the great shipbuilding project upon which so much depends.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of getting the right man for General Manager. If he is the wrong man, it will be idle to talk of 6,000,000 tonnage in 1918. The example of this executive head should reach right down through the mobilized rank and file to the mechanic in the yard, whose name must be legion if success on paper is to become success in the reality. An official of the Fleet Corporation sounds a note by no means confident when he says that the program for next year will probably be carried out "if the people of the "country wake up to the fact that the "nation is engaged in a death strug-"gle and get behind the drive." They will get behind it if the men at the top put their backs, as well as their brains, into the job and stick to it with genuine American spirit and grit. Then there will be the three shifts in the yards required if ships are to slide into the water according to schedule. Materials will be found, transportation supplied. But there must be enthusiasm as well as energy—at the top, there will then be plenty down below.

Chairman HURLEY has asked for a naval engineer or constructor in the post of General Manager. This recommendation should not be disregarded, unless an Atlas can be found outside the service. Another crisis has come in the affairs of the vast enterprise, the success of which we have often been told would win the war. Let no mistake be made.

THE FOES OF FREEDOM.

The Lowell, Mass., branch of the United Irish League has sent to Irish leaders in Ireland a manifesto that the misguided Sinn Feiners there and in this country need to study. How anybody can be so wrongheaded as to see in Germany a force for freedom anywhere passes understanding. "As "for any promises of independence "for Ireland coming from Germany, "with all our souls we denounce them "as hypocritical and insincere," say the Lowell United Irishmen, "but "equally to be spurned if they were "sincere." Ireland would be "un-"worthy of freedom if she lined up "with the modern ATTILA. Germany "is trying to make a catspaw of "Ireland, and unfortunately some "Irishmen are helping her horde of "paid agents in that direction."

The enthusiasts and the dupes in Ireland who are hurrahing for the Kaiser and shouting that "England's enemies are our friends," the "patriots" who hiss "The Star-Spangled Banner" and assault our sailors, the few American-Irish tools or gulls of Germany, the men who in the name of Ireland are doing their foolish best to injure the United States and freedom everywhere, need to ponder these words of truth and soberness from Massachusetts.

BASEBALL FOR THE BRITISH SAILOR.

According to a dispatch from "the base of the British Grand Fleet," where 100,000 men are on and off duty, baseball, American baseball, has been proposed as a solution of the problem of recreation. Naval officers tell us that the problem of amusing their men turns the hair gray. Jack ashore finds time heavy on his hands. His soul pines for violent physical action, even if he has to pick a quarrel on slight provocation. Skylarking and practical jokes soon pall. He wants a spectacle of arms flying and some sort of combativeness, or he is unhappy.

Cricket doesn't appeal to the British tar. It is too slow; besides, it is the sport of the "hupper classes." Boxing and wrestling he holds in high esteem, but proficiency in these exercises is uncommon and hard to acquire. But no American ever thought the day would come when British sailors would have a craving for baseball. However, they are under the spell of their American comrades now. They see baseball in a new light. It is worth while, after all. It is full of the spirit of combat; the excitement of it is contagious, and baseball without fair play, which the British Jacky loves, is impossible. So he is talking about baseball at "the base of the Grand Fleet."

There is a call for American instructors, and they will surely be forthcoming. We never expect to see John Bull in sailor's togs attain to the magical deftness that makes the spectacle of an American championship game such a hilarious delight. Indeed, one British officer at the "base" doubts whether his men will ever learn how to handle the ball and "line them out." He says, from his own observation, that it takes years of training to pick up a "hot grounder" with subconscious certainty, and that "solving" a professional pitcher's curves cannot be learned by a novice out of his teens. There is truth in that. The artists in baseball began their careers in a back lot at the tender age of 8. But British sailors are youngsters as a rule, that is, most of them. Therefore, baseball is within their reach as a recreation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Propulsion from the Subconscious. A safe prophecy was that of Mrs. LILLIAN S. GRIFFIN, President of the Woman's Law Club, when she told the members of that organization that not until the men of New York lived on one side of the city and the women on the other would it be time for a like separation of voters into two parties divided by the sex line. As that is the same thing as saying never, of course Mrs. GRIFFIN was right, in spite of the misguided and pathetic efforts now making by what seems to be a majority of the more eminent woman suffragists.

It is not impossible that they will succeed in creating—for a brief existence and to the delight of all their enemies—something that they will call the Woman's Party; it is even probable that not a few male politicians will be moved by a delusive belief in the power of these leaders to make with them various deals and dickers of the sort so pleasing to their kind. On Election Day, however, the dealers and dickerers inevitably will discover that the "vote" for which they bargained was not delivered.

Why the suffrage leaders do not see that they are wasting their time in endeavoring to form a division equally impossible and undesirable is not obvious, but it is not inexplicable. It is not from lack of intelligence or of good intentions. Denial of either would be absurd in the case of Dr. SHAW, Mrs. CATT, Mrs. WHITEHOUSE, and a dozen others. Beyond almost any reasonable question they are inspired or compelled to make this lamentable mistake—to take action at odds equally with human physiology and with human psychology—by a realization that, when the women voters distribute themselves according to individual preference among the various political parties into which men have separated, the present leaders will find their occupation gone, and their pleasant prominence lost, to be regained, if at all, only by the display of qualities entirely different from those by which they achieved their present leadership.

It is no straining of charity to assume that in most instances, perhaps in all, this realization is entirely subconscious, and that, so far as they know, they are quite unselfish. They are not the first fighters for a "cause," and will not be the last, to struggle as vehemently, as vainly, against the obscurity to which its victory threatens to consign them.

Not Much of Originality in Evidence. As long ago as the Battle of the Somme, when the Germans first saw the so-called tanks in action, one of their staff reports described them as "monstrous engines," and said that "the enemy in the latest fighting has employed new engines of war as cruel as they are effective."

It was a piece of characteristic German inconsistency to call "monstrous" and "cruel" a military implement of admitted efficiency, but these epithets only illustrate again the now familiar fact that German sensibilities are even more easily and deeply shocked than those of other peoples when the argument of "military necessity" is used—against Germans. Presumably they have regarded tanks as nothing less than fiendish, now that at Cambrai their utility in the hands of the British has been shown to be, when conditions favor, even greater than that of heavy artillery.

It is the gentler word "new," however, as applied by the Germans to the tank, that is most interesting, for Germans are expected to be accurate, when self-interest does not require inaccuracy, and it is at least questionable whether this or any other weapon used on either side in the present war can strictly be credited with novelty.

The submarine and both types of flying machines—those heavier than air and those lighter—had been known for years before the great conflict began. As for the tank, though nothing just like it had hitherto been seen, all its essential features had been long familiar, including its caterpillar traction, its armor, and its guns. As a whole, it is an adaptation of old ideas to new uses, rather than an invention, and, except for the fact that it is a weapon of offense rather than of defense, one would wonder that it did not make its first appearance on the east, instead of the west, side of No Man's Land.

For the Germans, while very far from notable as inventors, do have a well-earned reputation for taking the discoveries of other peoples, improving them, and putting them to practical and profitable employment. That is all that can be said for the Zeppelin, of which the Germans were formerly so proud, and it was not German skill that made the submarine such a terrible weapon in their hands, but simply the fact that there were many ships at sea for the German submarines to sink and almost none that the submarines of the Allies had any motive even for attacking.

Paid High, but Not Too Much. Though the now notorious Army and Navy Bazaar diverted to private pockets more than $70,000 given and spent by the public under the laboriously and deceptively inculcated belief that all or most of it was to be used in making our soldiers and sailors safer and more comfortable, it is on the whole a cause for satisfaction that a malversation of funds so glaring should have occurred.

Had the promoters of that vicious enterprise been more moderate in their greed—had they been content to appropriate, say, only half the proceeds, instead of practically the whole—probably they would have escaped notice and the exploitation of generosity and patriotism would have been as safe in a long future as it has been in a long past. So, though the cost of directing public attention to an ancient evil was high, it can be viewed without much regret, or even with none at all, because of the indirect, but highly important, returns in the form of certainty that, for a while at least, the now enlightened populace will demand full information as to the disposition to be made of money thus collected.

It makes little difference whether we get or do not get some new laws on the subject, and nobody need mind that the laws proposed are to make an absurd discrimination between the bazaars and entertainments of religious and fraternal organizations and others. In every case there will be the same effective demand for a full explanation beforehand and for a rigid accounting afterward, and neither the unscrupulous nor the incompetent will be able the one to steal and the other to waste the huge sums hitherto so well within easy reach of both.

Taking Things as They Come.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of stories circulated relative to the treatment of our boys at the training camps, I am inclosing copy of part of a letter received on the 19th inst. from a member of this company of the Fire Department who left for Yaphank on Oct. 11. It is a pleasure to read his letter, when one thinks of the grumbling of those who ought to be more satisfied. His letter says:

It is great down here. We have the best of times. We do very little drilling. Two or three hours a day is about as much as we do, and as far as the food is concerned, it is splendid under the conditions. You couldn't expect better. The camp is also grand. Every night we walk for two or three hours. There are three cops and myself in the same barracks. Of course there are several more fellows, but we make the barracks look like a home to us.

The rest of the letter is filled with good reading of personal matters to the officers and members of this company, and it is from a man who can take things as they come.

For an Old Friend.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I passed my eighty-sixth birthday the 13th of last month. I have been a reader of THE TIMES from the first, when published by its first editor, H. J. Raymond, corner of Ann and Nassau Streets, next-door neighbor to The Sun, Moses Y. Beach, and The Herald, James G. Bennett. And now as your paper has become a power I would like to have you print a little motto. It is this:

Good, better, best;
Never let it rest
Till your good is better
And your better is best.

You may ask why I make the request. 'Tis this: It may stimulate some of our soldiers to exert themselves to better service.

A SLAV TO THE RUSSIANS.

He Asks if They Are Willing to Betray Their Oppressed Brethren.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At the beginning of the great European war the oppressed Slavic nations of southern and central Europe, the Slavs still in the grip of the Central Empires, were promised by Grand Duke Nicholas, in the name of the Czar and the then Russian people, freedom, and were told that the Russians were coming to them (the Austro-Hungarian Slavs) as liberators, not as enemies.

The Austro-Hungarian Slavs believed and became voluntarily prisoners of war and turned their arms against their oppressors, the Germans and Magyars.

These heroes know very well what is waiting for them if they should again fall into the hands of the Germans. To surrender was equivalent to death. Therefore no surrender was possible. Fight to the finish had to be their motto.

In hundreds of thousands they went over to the Russians and helped them to win victory after victory over the Huns. Twice were the Hun armies smashed back to their borders by Grand Duke Nicholas and a third time by the great Brusiloff with the help of soldiers of oppressed Slav nations from Austria and Hungary. They have suffered just as much as any Russian soldier and more.

For decades they have looked upon the Russians as upon their strong and great brethren. They loved them and they offered them everything in the present great war.

They have offered the Russians not only their knowledge in military affairs, their training, their skill in trades; they have offered them all they had, and they hava offered them their lives and the welfare and in many cases the lives of those beloved ones whom they had to leave without protection in Austria-Hungary.

Nobody can imagine the grief of these poor fellows on the battlefields, when the Russians, their great brethren, after all they had done for them, left them alone; left them like cowards and traitors to the common cause of the Slavs and the Allies.

Where are the promises given in the name of the Russian people?

What shall a true Slav think of the Russians?

We Slavs of smaller nations have a right to ask: Where is holy Russia? Is there nobody except the few miserable pro-German anarchists and radical Socialists, who have nothing in common with the Slavs, to enforce order and protect those who have bled in this greatest of the world's dramas?

Where are the priests of holy Russia? Where are the other true and faithful Russians?

Have the true Russians lost the sense of justice? Have they no courage? Is there no possibility to regain authority over those miserable traitors, anarchists and pro-Germans?

Is there nothing left but the stomach? Is there no idealism, no sense of justice?

Why were the Russians able to resist heroically, to fight in a disciplined army under the iron hand of a Czar, whose mind was poisoned by Germany and whose heart had no feeling for the people, and why, I ask, are the Russians not able or not willing to fight and die now, when men of their own blood tried to give them liberty?

And again: Why do they obey the orders of the non-Russian anarchists and pro-German radical Socialists and go and kill and murder their own people?

As a Slav I claim the right to speak in this manner to the great Russian nation.

All the Slavs all over the world, all the Allies, and America in the foremost place, have helped you. America has given you what it could. Supplies, food, money, the best organizers. Is there nobody who is able to tell this to the Russian people? Is everybody afraid to tell the Russians the naked truth; what the world thinks of them in the present crisis?

Books for the Men in France.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every month adds tens of thousands to the number of books which lie idle after being read.

It is in the power of every one to give pleasure to some of our boys at the front in France by mailing books they have finished reading, addressed to

"C. D. A., Chapter IV., Book Fund, 156 Boulevard Haussmann, Paris, France."

The slight expense involved is nothing compared to the great pleasure and comfort given by such thoughtfulness.

If the name and address of the sender is written on the front page of the book mailed its receipt will be acknowledged by us, and no doubt this will be followed by a note of appreciation from some grateful American boy at the front who has been helped to while away lonely hours "somewhere in France," far away from his home and family.

A Foolish Chain Letter.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Here is a letter received today which tells its own foolish tale:

RED CROSS CHAIN.

"The Lord, Jesus, we implore Thee to give victory to the Allies."

Please copy this and send it to some person each day for nine days, beginning the day you receive this. Please do not break the chain, as it was sent from Russia and Scotland to ninety around the world.

It was said that all those who passed it by met with misfortune and all those who sent it would be free from calamity. On the ninth day you will hear of some great joy.

Do not forget the day for the next nine days.

To most persons who receive this, fear overcomes their better sense, and they waste eighteen perfectly good cents and nine sheets of paper which cost still more, in sending out the nine letters.

If each one sent these added cents to the Red Cross wouldn't it be far better?

TO A NEW POLITICAL PARTY.

"If the whole fate of my country hung on one man, and the rest could save the country, but was opposed to the Federal Amendment, I should vote for him."

I am not with you—and I never was!
Yet can I grieve for you, who held your cause
Above a greater, in grave days that urged
All lesser issues should in one be merged.
Your country, girding her for war amain
(Such war as comes not on this earth again!)—
Oh, well! I ask you, in our Mother's name,
Was it the time to press your special claim?
When she must bend her to her mighty task,
A whole-heart service it was hers to ask.
The daughters of another Mother, great, like ours,
Like claim forbearing, gave of all their powers,
And, from self-interest cleanly breaking loose,
Turned their wild maenad zeal to ordered use;
Now, with a vindicated right, they may demand
Their prize when Peace again shall bless their land.
You've won what you desired—nor did forbear;
How trust our Mother's weal shall be your care?

JAPAN'S PART IN THE WAR.

Will Her Full Strength Be Thrown Into the Conflict, and Can It Be Brought to Bear Against Germany?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the midst of the bewilderment and confusion resulting from the Russian and Italian situations the American public is overlooking one significant factor in the war situation which can be contemplated with confidence and satisfaction. I refer to the part that Japan is destined to play in this war.

As a result of the recent Lansing-Ishii agreement Japan practically has been given a free hand in China. She has taken a long step toward the realization of her major foreign policy, namely, the consolidation of all the peoples of the Orient under her own hegemony. This being so, her chief aim now will be to make her position in the Orient secure for all time. There can be no doubt that the elimination of Russia as a factor in this war and the threatened absorption of that country by Germany are more disconcerting to Japan than any events that have transpired during the progress of the war.

Japan has now come to the point where the way divides. She is face to face with the crucial question as to whether she prefers to live in a world dominated by the Teutons or in a world in which the principles of Anglo-Saxon civilization prevail. She sees clearly that the situation is critical and that perhaps her full weight is required at once to determine the issue of the war. I have the conviction that Japan will have no difficulty in determining what course to pursue. She is under the lead of a group of the wisest and most astute statesmen in the world. They can be relied upon to determine what Japan's permanent interests are and how best they can be promoted and protected.

Japan's situation is similar to that which confronted our nation eight months ago. The question which then confronted us was whether we would enter the war and sustain England and France or remain out and prepare to meet a Prussianized Europe with England and France down. It was clearly to our interests to sustain France and England rather than run the risk of seeing them brought down. Japan now faces the alternative of sustaining the Allies with her full force or running the risk of having Russia, the buffer State between her and Germany, broken down. It is clear that with Germany triumphant and Russia down, Japan's position in the Far East would be seriously menaced. On the other hand, should Russia be sustained and Germany defeated, her position would be practically secure for all time.

The Japanese people admire and imitate many of the German traits, but they now recognize that Germany under the leadership of the Prussians has overplayed the part and has become a menace to the world. In making her decision she will be guided by the all-impelling principle of self-interest. Nothing less than the law of necessity demands that she now throw her full force, including her man power, into this war on the side of the Allies. This she can be relied upon to do.

Of course, the great obstacle in the way of effective action at this time is the matter of transportation, but under the spur of necessity this can be overcome. There are several routes by which she can reach the battle fronts. One is over the Trans-Siberian Railway through Russia. The difficulty about adopting this course is that Winter is now on, the Trans-Siberian Railway is in bad condition, and it is quite probably that the Russians would resent Japan's entering their country at this time. Under normal conditions this of course is the route that Japan would naturally take. Failing in this, however, she can reach the theatre of war either through the Suez Canal or through the Panama Canal. The obstacle to overcome in the adoption of either of these routes is the lack of sufficient transports to convey and maintain a force that will be effective. This, however, can be overcome gradually with the aid of the Allies.

Japan has the advantage of having a large experienced army already mobilized ready for service and a large reserve in waiting. In view of the character of the Japanese people and of the training which many of her veterans have already had, her armies placed upon any front would immediately be an effective fighting force.

This situation is one of prime importance and should at once receive the attention of the Entente Alliance so that all may act in concert in sustaining and rendering effective any policy which Japan may adopt.

SCHIERBRAND'S AUSTRIA.

It Is Not the One the Prisoner of War Finds.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Professor Wolff von Schierbrand, Ph. D., LL. D., wrote a wonderful book, "Austria-Hungary a Polyglot Empire." The title of this book ought to be "Austria-Hungary—the Wonderland," as Professor von Schierbrand's book is a eulogy of Austria-Hungary. On page 128 of his book the Herr Professor writes concerning Hungary:

The sweeping victory thus achieved in spreading the use of a language, intrinsically among the most difficult to learn in the universe and one which sixty years ago had not even the beginnings of a literature, is among the most astounding things recorded for the nineteenth century.

It is well known that the oppression of Rumanians, Italians, and Slavs by the Hungarian authorities and landowners overshadows in its cruelty the policies of the former Russian Government, and its results, a superficial Magyarization of other nationalities inhabiting Hungary, are truly insignificant.

Further, we learn from the Herr Professor that military prisoners in Austria are very fortunate indeed, especially the Russians, Serbians, and Italians; they are catered to in an extremely attentive way, provided with plenty of food cooked in the way of their respective countries; they are treated with the utmost courtesy and respect, even while repairing roads on the Italian front or working in ammunition factories.

If we are to believe the author, all these prisoners are better off in Austria than they were at home and should peace be declared it will be difficult to drive them out of Austria. Furthermore, you can easily notice that the Herr Professor was an honored guest and he saw what his guides wanted him to see.

My brother has spent a year and a half in Austria as a prisoner of war; he has been in three different camps and finally allowed to return as totally unfit; his story was quite different from the professor's. I would advise Mr. von Schierbrand to go to Austria and spend a few months in the camps as a prisoner of war and only then to write a book on the subject.

Suffrage Help to Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The expressions of suffragist wrath over Mrs. Wadsworth's telling charge of pro-German and Socialist influences back of the suffrage movement are characteristic, in their personalities as well as their display of the lack of any sense of honor. Especially so is Mrs. J. L. Laidlaw's solicitation for her country's (or her sex's, which looms greater in suffragists' eyes) honor, as she bemoans the danger to both, when THE TIMES headline, "Suffrage Victory Laid to Germans," "shall be repeated in the Russian press by German propagandists."

Such an outburst from this source is really touching, when one recalls the attitude of the Washington suffragists on the occasion of the visit of the Russian Mission to the White House on June 20 last. The public memory may be short-lived, but few have forgotten the legend inscribed on suffrage banners on that occasion:

To the Russian Mission: President Wilson and Envoy Root are deceiving Russia. They say, "We are a democracy. Help us to win the war, so that democracies may survive." We, the women of America, tell you that America is not a democracy. * * * Help us make this nation really free. Tell our Government it must liberate people before it can claim free Russia as an ally.

And one wonders if, possibly, this incident might not have drawn the attention of some of the now repudiated "German propagandists" to the suffragists, who seemed such excellent tools for their purpose. Even in the crowd drawn to the spot by these women there were cries of "You are helping Germany!"

True Lincoln Likenesses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to have an opportunity of approving the stand THE NEW YORK TIMES has taken on the Barnard statue of Lincoln. Putting up such a monstrosity in a foreign city or putting it up anywhere would offend every American who happened to see it, and foreigners would get a very poor impression of a great man. Seeing Mr. Lincoln often, I feel qualified to judge of the merits of the pictures I have seen of the Barnard statue. One of the best pictures of the martyr President is the photograph of him reading the Scriptures to his son, Tad.

RUSSIAN DON QUIXOTES.

They Are Trying to Act According to Revolutionary Romances.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The whole world has been stunned by the mad acts of the Russian Bolsheviki. It is really incomprehensive how sane persons can allow themselves, at a time when Russia is threatened with disintegration by inner disorganization, and its whole existence threatened by the terrible enemy, to increase the anarchy by abolishing every shadow of law and order. How can love for peace be reconciled with aimless spilling of innocent blood of women and children, and, above all, fraternizing with the invader of their country and at the same time giving over to lynch rule all true patriots?

It is no wonder that the general opinion of the American public is that those who started this cataclysm must be agents of the German Government. Such an opinion seems to be true at the first glance. The fact, however, is that the personages who have emerged to the front are not selfish traitors, but simply Don Quixotes, weak-minded individuals, who came to the front through the cheerless Russian reality. The apathy of the Russian public might be explained by the fact that every one in Russia is convinced that the rule of the mad Bolsheviki cannot last longer than Jonas's gourd. The acquiescence of Russia in such absurd adventures, however, shows that Russia is in a state of collapse, and this fact makes all the comical incidents of this plot a fateful tragedy.

The trouble with Don Quixote of La Mancha was that the excessive reading of romances of knighthood had turned his poor head, and all his actions were dictated by his desire to imitate the valorous actions of the knights. The trouble with our "heroes" is that they had read too many books on revolutions, and their poor heads were turned by this reading. They have decided to make an experiment according to the requirements of the books.

Lenine and Trotsky are not new figures to those who are familiar with the Russian revolutionary movement of the last fifteen years. The former was known by his hobby of a dictatorship of proletarians, the latter by his fixed ideas that every one who is not a true proletarian must necessarily be against the revolution. The revolution was for both of them an abstract idea, which did not come to improve conditions, but to verify theories.

When the first overthrow came both of them were greatly disappointed. How was it possible that a revolution should be accomplished by burghers without any bloodshed? How was it possible that all classes of people should be joyful over the outcome? Such facts are against the theory of class struggle, and against every theory which they know of. They have, therefore, availed themselves of the fertile ground which the Russian disorganization has prepared for them, and have made up their minds to make an experiment with a real revolution, according to prescribed rules.

These great theorists, however, know that the Russian economical conditions do not warrant the introduction of socialism. They are very well aware that the Russian masses are not prepared yet to live a communistic life. They also know that their acts will bring out a bloody counter revolution, which will do away with all liberties won, but they are not worried over such an outcome as long as their pet theories prevail.

In fact, they are prepared for eventualities, and in case they succeed in escaping the wrath of the masses we shall surely have them as guests on the capitalistic shores of the United States. Their lectures on the topic "Why the second Russian revolution has failed" will draw large audiences, and, gaining a comfortable livelihood, they will prepare themselves for the third Russian revolution. But who knows whether there will be a large independent Russian Empire left?

America Awake.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When our first soldiers landed in France our unscrupulous enemy was struck with consternation as he realized that he was up against a nation that has never been conquered. We started this war with about 100,000 soldiers, we now have 1,000,000, and can have as many more as we want. When our allies cry, "America, where art thou?" we can truly answer, "Coming all the time."

LECTURES DE LUXE FOR WOMEN VOTERS

City Party Is Going to Teach the Business of Citizenship for $5 a Course.

HOPE TO REACH 400,000

Engage a Columbia Professor and Say Instruction Will Be of Value to the District Leaders.

The first comprehensive plan for educating women voters, a task to which many suffrage and civic organizations have dedicated themselves since Nov. 6, has been announced by the Woman Suffrage Party of New York City. Although it stands with the State party, with which it is affiliated, in making the passage of the Federal suffrage amendment one of the prime motives of its continued existence, the city party under the leadership of Mary Garret Hay, is prepared to devote a large amount of money and a great deal of effort to the education of women voters.

The first course, to be called "The Business of Citizenship," has been arranged by the Committee on Education recently appointed by the party. Howard Lee McBain, Eaton Professor of Municipal Science and Administration of Columbia University, has been engaged by the committee to give a course of six or more one-hour lectures. Professor McBain will explain the organization of the city, State and national governments, political procedure, the functions and policies of the political parties, the direct and indirect relationship of the voter to the various city departments, her relation to the army and navy, and from what viewpoints labor, prohibition, free speech, and similar problems may be regarded.

"The course, which is open to all women," an announcement issued last night said, "will be of especial interest and benefit to the Assembly district leaders and other women who will, after its completion, go forth as teachers and founders of citizens' schools in their own districts."

Afternoon and evening classes begin on Dec. 13. The price for the afternoon class of six lectures, the announcement says, will be $5, and for the evening course of six lectures, $3.

Mrs. Adolphe Borie, President of the Bryn Mawr Club, Chairman of the Committee on Education for Citizenship, in discussing the plan, said:

"This course arranged by my committee will serve as a springboard for the first political teaching of women throughout the city. It opens the great education campaign planned by the city suffragists. We hope that besides the women who want merely to learn for themselves, hundreds will come who will go forth and teach others. A solemn obligation rests on the shoulders of the women who know to teach the women who do not know. My committee will co-operate throughout the city with other groups of people who are starting classes, so that the plans will not overlap and energy be wasted by two bodies performing the same tasks.

"With over 400,000 women to be reached, there is plenty of work to be done. We promise our students practical rather than academic instruction and by means of charts and pictures we shall present facts in a graphic way. We hope to prepare women so well for their new duties that when they vote they will be an intelligent addition to the electorate."

New members have been added to the committee, so that the following are serving as workers: Mrs. Adolphe Borie, Chairman; Mrs. John Blair, Secretary; Miss Katherine D. Blake, Mrs. Herbert Croly, Miss Marie Bowen Chapin, Mrs. F. Cranford, Miss Jennie M. Davis, Miss Mary Dreier, Miss Lina Gano, Miss Louise Grant, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, Mrs. A. G. Harvey, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Mrs. V. Everit Macy, Miss Alice Perkins, Miss Virginia Potter, Mrs. F. Louis Slade, Mrs. V. Simkovitch, and Miss Lillian Wald.

Many members of the Protestant Episcopal Suffrage Association attended a Thanksgiving service yesterday afternoon at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, at which the Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie said he had heard many persons say they would favor equal suffrage if only educated women, or well-bred women, or "women who are ladies" could vote.

"But we have got to have the vote of the vicious," he said. "The more vicious they are, the more we have got to make them vote."

Dr. Guthrie then asserted that women and men would vote for ideals better than themselves, citing the instance of San Francisco's political upheaval following the earthquake, when, he said, it was the slum districts which carried the reform cause. Dr. Guthrie said that men's fears that the vote might make women more mannish was scientifically groundless. He assured his hearers that manly men and womanly women were those who transmitted their tendencies to the race, while nature eliminated effeminate men and mannish women, thus making it needless for society to fear them.

SUFFRAGE MAJORITY 88,840.

Republican Chairman Glynn Computes New York Returns.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—Returns filed by up-State County Chairmen with George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and newspaper returns for the counties of Greater New York, show a majority on the suffrage amendment of 88,840, according to an announcement made tonight by Mr. Glynn.

The total vote for suffrage, as compiled by the head of the Republican organization, was 673,389, and the vote against was 584,549. The total vote in 1915 was 1,301,680, and in 1917 1,257,938, but Mr. Glynn believes that when the soldier vote has been counted the vote this year will be larger than two years ago.

The affirmative side at the last election gained in fifty-nine counties, and lost in but three—Chemung reversing itself from the affirmative to the negative side, Schenectady giving a smaller pro majority, and St. Lawrence slightly increasing its negative majority.

Returns from the same party sources gave Merton E. Lewis, the Republican candidate for Attorney General, a net plurality of more than 150,000. The up-State plurality without the soldier vote is more than 235,000, as against 206,000 for the Republican candidate for Attorney General in 1916. It is believed that the soldier vote will increase Mr. Lewis's plurality up State by more than 15,000.

WOMEN ARE TO SERVE IN W. H. TAFT'S LEAGUE

Three Who Favor Prosecuting the War Will Be Admitted to Its Executive Committee.

After a session which started at the Yale Club Saturday night and lasted till early yesterday morning the League to Enforce Peace, of which ex-President William Howard Taft is President, decided to admit three women to its Executive Committee. In departing from the makeup of its governing board which it has maintained since its organization two years ago the league announced that its purpose was to obtain the advice and help of prominent women in its campaign to strengthen the determination against a premature peace, especially in States where women may vote. The Secretary was directed to present for election to membership at the committee's next meeting the names of three women of national prominence.

The women are to be used to strengthen the league's own vigorous campaign in behalf of successful, unrelenting prosecution of the war, and they will be made as far as possible an instrument to combat the pacifist tendencies of Socialist and other radical women whose votes are expected to be cast in favor of such an immediate peace platform as that on which Morris Hillquit recently polled a large vote for the Mayoralty.

The meeting considered means of working for the election of Congressmen who favor full support of the nation's war program, taking the ground that the establishment of its projected league of nations to maintain the future safety of the world is dependent upon the defeat of German militarism. It is anticipated that only women who concur in that view of the present prime qualification of a candidate for Congress will be put on the Executive Committee of the league.

During the last quarter State organizations, with branches in every county, have been established in Nebraska and Iowa, and provisional organizations have been effected in New Jersey, Florida, and Montana; while more than one hundred new county branches have been established in States where internal organization was incomplete. It was reported that the league now is organized in every State except New Hampshire, Minnesota, North Dakota, and Wyoming.

The Speakers' Bureau reported that during the last Summer the proposals of the league had been presented in 3,578 Chautauqua circuit towns before audiences estimated in the aggregate at nearly 4,000,000, and that 300 lyceum circuit speakers would bring the league's war message to 12,000,000 persons this Winter. Among those who attended the meeting were Professor John Bates Clark, Charles S. Davison, Hamilton Holt, Darwin P. Kingsley, William L. Saunders, William H. Short, William F. Slocum, William H. Wadhams, Alton B. Parker, Charles S. Ward, Harold Howland, Talcott Williams, Herbert S. Houston, William J. Schieffelin, of New York; Louis J. Alber of Cleveland; Edward A. Filene and Glenn Frank of Boston; A. Lawrence Lowell, President of Harvard; Charles Dean Kimball of Providence, R. I.; Rufus B. von Kleinsmid of Tucson, Ariz.; William P. O'Neal of Orlando, Fla.; Arthur E. Morgan of Dayton, Ohio; Philip H. Gadsden of Charleston, S. C., and Theodore Marburg of Baltimore.

AUTO KILLS TEACHER.

Soldiers Capture Driver of Car and He Is Held for Homicide.

Miss Florence Fraser, a teacher in the Morris High School, Bronx, and daughter of Detective John W. Fraser of the Second Branch Bureau, was hit by an auto last night at 166th Street and Brook Avenue, suffering injuries which caused her death a few minutes later in the office of Dr. Arthur J. O'Leary, 578 East 168th Street.

The owner of the car that caused her death did not stop when the woman dropped to the pavement, and two soldiers from Camp Upton, who were following in an automobile, pursued him and compelled him to return. He described himself as Louis F. Fass, 1,353 Clinton Avenue, Bronx, and said he had not stopped because he was unaware of the accident. He was held by Coroner Healy in $2,500 bail on a charge of homicide.

Arthur Brown of 1,064 Forest Avenue, Bronx, son of Police Captain Jacob Brown, told the police that he was accompanying Miss Fraser to her home and that the car was speeding. Miss Fraser was 21 years old. She lived with her parents at 1,187 Clinton Avenue, Bronx.

SUFFRAGE LEADERS PLAN BIG CAMPAIGN

National Association to Meet in Washington and Bring Pressure on Congressmen.

1,000 DELEGATES EXPECTED

Confidence Expressed That Federal Suffrage Amendment Will Be Adopted by Congress This Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The vanguard of leaders of the National American Woman Suffrage Association has arrived in Washington for the campaign to be opened immediately in favor of the enactment by Congress at this session of the Federal suffrage amendment. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the association, will take personal charge of the campaign. She and other leaders of the association assert that, with the new leverage of women's votes in New York and the approaching election of forty-three members of Congress from that State, the National Suffrage Association is confident of "putting through real business" early in the coming session.

Announcement is made at the headquarters of the association that the suffrage program includes the rallying of suffrage workers in Washington by Dec. 1 for the opening of Congress. Women from every State will come, representing comprehensive organizations in the Congressional districts "back home" and the political force of the women voters in the West and in New York. These women, with delegations of suffragists, will have visited their respective Representatives at their homes since Congress adjourned in October, and will bring reports of the members' attitude toward the Federal amendment.

During the second week of December will come the annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association in Washington, representing a membership of 2,000,000 women throughout the country. It has been called in Washington in order to impress upon Congress still further the determined purpose of the National Suffrage Association to secure the passage of the Federal amendment at once. Probably 1,000 delegates will be in attendance. Preparations for the work before Congress are under way at national suffrage headquarters under direction of Mrs. Maude Wood Park, Congressional Chairman.

URGES WISCONSIN ELECTION

La Follette Opposes Governor's Plan to Appoint Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 25.—That the United States Senator to succeed the late Paul O. Husting should be elected by the people and that the Governor should not be given the power to make the appointment is the position taken by Senator Robert M. La Follette in an editorial in his magazine. He suggests an election in April, so that the expense of a special election may be saved.

The editorial commends the services of Senator Husting and says that his loss is "deep and abiding."

"The Constitution permits the Legislature to provide for filling vacancies by temporary appointment," says La Follette in his editorial; "but the Progressive Legislature of 1913, recognizing the importance of keeping the power of selection of their representatives in their own hands, refused to grant any power of appointment to the Governor. Every one will understand that the appointee of the Governor will have great prestige in the succeeding election to succeed himself. Special interests in the Congress are well taken care of, and the people should have an opportunity to elect their representative to succeed Senator Husting, who was a progressive Democrat.

"The Governor has announced his present intention of calling a special session of the Legislature to secure legislation permitting him to make an appointment, basing his reasons therefor on the ground that he does not wish at this time to give an excuse for pacifists and anti-war propagandists to fill our State with their literature and their advocates, and as a further reason that a special election would cost the people a large sum of money. His first reason is entirely in keeping with his attempts to prevent the exercise of free speech in the State, and is mere camouflage. His second objection may be overcome by calling a special election at the time of the general April election.

"If the election be held in April partisan politics may be obviated and the people given an opportunity to consider the selection wholly on the basis of merit. There is no difference in Congress about supporting the war until honorable peace may be obtained, but the great problem before Congress and which so vitally affects the people's interests is the one of taxation. On this question the people should have an opportunity to be heard.

"All progressive citizens, irrespective of party, should join in an effort to defeat the scheme for an appointment to fill the vacancy."

EXPECTS STATE TO GO DRY.

Brumbaugh Predicts Pennsylvania Will Oust "King Alcohol."

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 25.—Prediction that Pennsylvania in "the near future" would join the list of prohibition States was made by Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh in a Thanksgiving address at the Second Presbyterian Church here today.

"I thank God that King Alcohol is on the retreat," the Governor said. "Isn't it significant that at a time of world-wide test, when a man is called upon to do a man's part, it is recognized he cannot do it unless King Alcohol is first banished? There are now twenty-eight 'White States' in America, and the outlook is better now than it has ever been for Pennsylvania to become one of the 'White States' in the very near future.

"I am thankful," he added, "that when the call to service came, Pennsylvania met it mightily. Far more things have been asked of our Commonwealth in this crisis than you know about. Pennsylvania at every turn, at every request, at every opportunity, has yielded unstinting co-operation to our Government. I thank God for these things."

Citing the world war as proof that "Christ's religion is a religion of action," the Governor declared:

"We are in the world war at this Thanksgiving time. I firmly believe we are fighting the battle of Christ Jesus when fighting America's fight in this war. We are carrying the cross side by side with the Stars and Stripes, and we are marching to a worthy victory."

GIFTS FOR ALL SOLDIERS.

Red Cross Ships 100 Tons of Christmas Packets Abroad.

The Red Cross announced last night the shipment of 100 tons of Red Cross Christmas packets to Red Cross representatives in Europe for distribution among American soldiers and sailors overseas. A similar quantity for shipment abroad has been assembled at an Atlantic port. These shipments, it is estimated, contain about 200,000 Christmas packets.

Announcement was made by the Red Cross Supply Service that the packets needed to complete the full overseas allotment have been provided, and that no one in the expeditionary force need want for a Christmas gift from the Red Cross. Christmas packets for cantonments and camps in the jurisdiction of the Atlantic division are pouring into the divisional warehouse from chapters in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. This warehouse already has received and shipped about 27,000 packets, many of which were included in the shipment to the American camps in France.

The National Headquarters of the Red Cross has allotted 1,750,000 packets to the various divisions which in turn designated the number each chapter is to make. Chapters in the Atlantic division have been allotted 300,000. The Red Cross packages contain useful gifts, including pocket knives, puzzles, tobacco, hard candies, writing pads, pencils, mouth organs, &c. Each package contains from four to six articles.

At the Christmas headquarters of the New York County Chapter, at 455 Madison Avenue, volunteer workers have made about 28,000 packets. In the west side branch about 5,000 have been completed. The Brooklyn Chapter has completed its allotment of 14,000, and the work continues.

As fast as the Christmas packages are completed they are forwarded to the Red Cross warehouses at cantonments, where they will be distributed to the soldiers, probably on Christmas Eve.

Besides supplying a Christmas package to every soldier the Red Cross plans to erect a Christmas tree at every cantonment and army post, and to provide entertainment for the men, including motion pictures and choral singing.

DINNERS FOR SOLDIERS.

Thanksgiving Invitations Include All Without Homes Here.

Many more organizations and individuals announced their preparations yesterday for special Thanksgiving dinners for the soldiers and sailors. So numerous are the invitations that it is expected every enlisted man without home or relatives here will receive one. In thousands of homes throughout the city from which sons have gone "over there" the stranger-soldier guest will be welcomed in place of the absent boys.

The Executive Committee of the Young Men's Democratic League at Broadway and Thirty-seventh Street have completed arrangements whereby 163 families will entertain 347 soldiers and sailors. Officers at the camps and other military stations have received requests from thousands of families to send one to five soldiers to their homes for the Thanksgiving spread.

Frank H. Maynard of 400 Park Avenue will have 250 soldiers and sailors as his guests at a turkey dinner in the Waldorf. One-half of the men have been invited from Camp Upton at Yaphank, and the others are to come from the warships. "Oscar" has placed the grill room of the Waldorf at their disposal. There will be a vaudeville entertainment, and several hundred young women of society have volunteered as dancing partners.

The Catholic Club will have 200 sailors from the Brooklyn Navy Yard at dinner at 120 Central Park South. Adolph Lorber will provide dinner for 1,200 "sunset boys" of the Second Rainbow Division at Camp Mills, Hempstead, L. I., most of whom are from the Far West. Mr. Lorber will send autos to the camp for his guests.

FEUD CLUE IN BOMB INQUIRY.

Milwaukee Police Suspect Priest's Enemies Caused Tragedy.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 25.—Twenty-four hours of vigorous investigation has failed to disclose a particle of information as to the identity of the person who was responsible for the explosion of a bomb which killed eleven persons in Police Headquarters here last night. Twenty-five Italians are under arrest, including Giuseppe Mazuinni, who carried the bomb from the basement of the Italian Evangelical Church to the police station. But no action has been taken by the police as the result of the questioning which the prisoners underwent today.

The fact that the bomb had been placed in the basement of the church and timed, apparently, to explode when the church could be presumed to be crowded, and that considerable enmity existed between the Rev. August Guiliano, pastor of the church, and some unknown persons, has caused the police to look to that quarter for a key to the mystery.

Captain of Detectives Sullivan declared today that he believed the bomb was "planted" by persons who desire to break up the religious work which the Rev. Mr. Guiliano is conducting among the Italians. As a reason for that belief he points out that "since the Bay View riot, several Sundays ago, when a religious meeting conducted by the priest was broken up and several detectives were killed, members of Guiliano's congregation have been alienated from him, mostly by violence."

The trial of eleven men who were said to be connected with the Bay View riot is set for Wednesday. The priest and others of his congregation are to appear as witnesses.

The casualties which resulted from the explosion remained at eleven dead and two injured, no other bodies having been found when the demolished room in Police Headquarters was searched thoroughly.

Bomb experts believe that the dripping of a fluid through a glass tube connected with the bomb efefcted a time control as perfect as that of the mechanism of a clock. Federal, State, and county officials, as well as detectives from Chicago, are investigating the tragedy.

ACCUSE WARD BAKING CO.

Federal Trade Commission Charges Unfair Methods of Competition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Announcement was made today by the Federal Trade Commission that, following a preliminary investigation, it had issued a formal complaint against the Ward Baking Company of New York, charging unfair methods of competition in violation of Section 5 of the Trade Commission act.

The complaint charges the Ward Company with "daily giving gratis to each purchaser of its bread a quantity of bread equal to the amount bought and paid for by such purchaser, * * *" with "intent to stifle and suppress competition in the manufacture and sale of bread."

The charges will be heard by the commission on Jan. 21. The Ward Company receives the usual thirty days in which to reply to the complaint.

STARTS FOR MEANS'S TRIAL.

Capt. Jones Takes Skin Showing Effect of Powder from Cartridge.

Captain William Jones of the New York Police Department, former amateur champion revolver shot and a leading authority on firearms and bullet wounds, left this city yesterday for Concord, N. C., where he is to be an expert witness for the prosecution at the trial of Gaston Bullock Means for the alleged murder of Mrs. Maude A. King, which begins today.

Captain Jones took evidence of a type which is new in criminal trials. This consisted of samples of skin taken from human bodies, which had been used to discover how many inches away a revolver barrel must be held before it ceases to lodge grains of powder in cuticle.

Several physicians who examined the wound in the back of the skull which killed Mrs. King, testified that no powder grains were found imbedded in the skin around the wound. The purpose of this testimony was to show that the revolver must have been held some distance from the head and that she could not possibly have held the revolver in this position herself.

At the examination before the Justice of the Peace in Concord, Dr. Burmeister, the Coroner's physician of Chicago, showed pieces of blotting paper with which he had experimented to discover when a revolver ceased to drive powder grains into it. Even at twelve inches distance some powder grains were found imbedded in the paper. Captain Jones experimented with pieces of human skin. He found that when the muzzle of a revolver indentical with that which killed Mrs. King was held six and eight inches from bits of skin, powder grains were forced deep into the tissues.

Captain Jones may be called on to testify to the position in which the revolver must have been held when the shot was fired. When J. P. Morgan was shot by Muenter or Holt, the police officer was summoned to the Morgan home at Glen Cove to examine the wound, and he reported that the revolver barrel must have lain almost flat on the abdomen when it was fired. This was found to be entirely correct. The wound was inflicted when Mr. Morgan had closed in on the assassin and was grappling with him on the floor.

CONCORD, N. C., Nov. 25.—Defense and prosecution are ready to start the trial here tomorrow of Gaston B. Means, charged with the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King, a wealthy widow of New York, who was shot to death near here last August.

Little chance was seen tonight of selecting a jury before Tuesday or Wednesday, and attorneys generally thought the thirty-six jurymen automatically called with the issuance of the order for a special term of Cabarrus County Court to try the case would be exhausted before twelve acceptable men were found. In that case, court probably would adjourn while a special venire of 150 men was summoned.

The defense has retained all the principal attorneys in Concord, leaving the State without a local attorney to aid in choosing jurors. This had led to reports that the State will seek trial in another court. Change of venue was denied once by Judge E. B. Cline, who will preside at the trial.

Solicitor Clements, the prosecuting official, held a long conference today with John T. Dooling, Assistant District Attorney of New York, who arrived early today. L. C. Cline, a Statesville attorney, formerly of Concord, came here today, having been retained to aid the prosecution.

Means's wife and child spent the day in jail with him. Neither he nor his counsel would discuss his plans.

MOVIE THEATRE FOR CAMP.

Benefit Nets $13,000 for Entertainment of Men at Upton.

A moving-picture theatre to be owned and managed by the soldiers at Camp Upton, where popular prices will prevail, was assured last night when a benefit performance at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre netted $13,000, more than is actually needed to build the theatre. Lieutenant Everett A. Butterfield of the 307th Infantry and Private Henry H. Harris, adopted son of Lew Fields, and a member of the same command, organized the benefit.

Augustus Thomas in an address said the efforts to aid the soldiers was a unanimous expression of their appreciation of what the men in khaki are doing for their country. A number of actors and actresses appeared at the benefit. Patriotic tableaux portraying Washington, Lafayette, Lincoln, Grant, Joffre, Colonel Roosevelt, and "Our President" was presented by Joseph Kilgour, Henry Mortimer, Ralph Ince, William Mack, Frederick Hamilton, William Gray, and Walter Catlet.

The benefit was under the auspices of the 307th Regiment, and 100 members of the regiment gave a drill on the stage. Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commander of the division, was present. President Wilson has autographed one of the souvenir programs, which is to be sold by Harry Brown. Raymond Hitchcock and E. Ray Goetz donated the theatre, and Lew Fields arranged the benefit.

FOR CO-OPERATIVE THEATRE

Producer Thinks Players Should Share Hazard with Managers.

Theatrical productions on the co-operative plan are suggested by L. Lawrence Weber, of the producing firm of Weber & Anderson, as the only means of solution of the problems now faced by the theatre as a result of the continued falling off in patronage. Mr. Weber points out that no immediate betterment of conditions need be looked for, and contends that it is unfair for actors and all other theatrical employes to be drawing full salaries when the managers are losing money. Unless this plan is adopted, declares Mr. Weber, a reduction in the salaries of actors is inevitable.

"The time is here for the artists to share the hazards of the business," Mr. Weber said. "I believe a universal adoption of the co-operative plan will not only enable the theatre to weather the war-time condition, but will bring the artist and the manager closer together, as each will then be able to see more clearly the viewpoint of the other, and thus to remedy the many evils that now exist in the conduct of the amusement business."

'LORD AND LADY ALGY' AGAIN

Production Will Mark Reappearance of Maxine Elliott.

Plans for an all-star revival of R. C. Carton's comedy, "Lord and Lady Algy," with a cast which will include Maxine Elliott, William Faversham, Irene Fenwick, and Maclyn Arbuckle, were made known yesterday by Mr. Faversham. With the exception of a few recent appearances in the Red Cross pageant, the production will mark Miss Elliott's first appearance in a New York production in many years. Among the others in the company will be Lumsden Hare, Florine Arnold, George Fitzgerald, and Vivian Rushmore. There will be a cast of about fifty.

"Lord and Lady Algy" was first produced in London in 1898, and subsequently toured this country. Mr. Faversham's revival will be offered at one of the local Shubert theatres about Christmas time, and the New York engagement will be limited to four weeks. The costumes are being designed by Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin.

JEWISH WOMEN CARED FOR.

Shelter for Homeless and Friendless Is Dedicated.

The first shelter for homeless and friendless Jewish women discharged or paroled from penal and correctional institutions of New York City and State which has been founded through the efforts of the New York Section of the Council of Jewish Women was dedicated yesterday. The shelter will be known as "418 East Fiftieth Street," which is the address of the building. Among the speakers at the dedication ceremonies was Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, who praised the council for their untiring efforts which resulted in the establishment of the shelter. Deaconess Young, who is head of a home for friendless women, situated at 17 Beekman Place, in the neighborhood, told the council of the difficulties to be overcome if the shelter was to be successful. She promised to do everything she could to aid the newcomers.

Mrs. William D. Sporborg, President of the council, told of the work of raising funds for the shelter, and said that although the home was founded for women of the Jewish faith, yet no unfortunate woman of any race, creed, or color would be refused aid and shelter if she needed it. The shelter was founded by members of the Council, including Mrs. Sporborg and Miss Sara X. Schottenfels, the Corresponding Secretary. One contribution of $12,000 was raised from an estate which was left to charity, and from which the gift was received on the recommendation of the Bureau of Philanthropic Research and Katharine B. Davis, Commissioner of Parole. A number of girls are already housed there.

The Colonel will stop this morning at Hamilton. He will make a speech there, and then will go on to Toronto, where he is to make his big address tonight. In both cities today has been declared a civic holiday. Members of various British missions at present in this city went up to Toronto on the same train. Nothing has been heard from several of the Provinces since Friday, and Chairman Hodges of the Dominion Business Committee estimates that the actual investment throughout Canada up to Saturday night was more than $200,000,000.

OLD CLAFLIN HOME BURNS.

Built by Founder of the Great Dry Goods House, Long Ago Given Up.

Fire destroyed part of the house, known as the "Claflin Mansion," at 194th Street and Sedgwick Avenue, the Bronx, last evening. It was once the home of Horace Brigham Claflin, founder of the dry goods firm of that name, but had not been occupied by the family for twenty years.

Herbert Boss, the caretaker, discovered the blaze shortly after 6 o'clock on the top floor of the three-story house. Before the firemen arrived the fire had gained such headway that both of the upper stories were burned. It was estimated that the loss on the building would reach $10,000. No attempt was made to estimate the loss on furnishings or to list what part of them had been destroyed.

There were fifty rooms in the house. It was built in what was the centre of the Claflin estate, now perhaps the largest and most valuable of the old estates still remaining intact in the Bronx.

FIVE SHOW HORSES BURNED.

Destroyed with I. H. Clothier, Jr.'s, Stables at Radnor, Penn.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Five well-known winners of prizes in hunter classes at horse shows in different parts of the country were burned to death today in a fire that destroyed the stables of Isaac H. Clothier, Jr., at Radnor, near here.

The horses were Miss Canada, Ichabod, Ingomar, Colonel Livingston, and Virginia Boy. The loss, including the horses, stables, and contents, is estimated at more than $50,000.

Dr. Cook's Old Home Destroyed.

The three-story brick house formerly belonging to Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of north pole notoriety, was destroyed by fire last night. The house stood on Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, between Myrtle Avenue and Willoughby Street. It was the place where eight years ago, when Dr. Cook first returned from the arctic, a crowd gathered to greet him. There was a triumphal arch in front of it, through which Dr. Cook and a triumphal procession marched. The house of late had been used as a tenement.

SEASON ABOUNDING IN SHOCKS TO STUDENTS OF FOOTBALL FORM DRAWS TO CLOSE

MANY BIG UPSETS ON BARRED FIELD

Rutgers, Princeton, and West Virginia Wesleyan Add Surprises to Long List.

SANFORD'S TEAM IN GLORY

Scarlet Proves Individual Effort Worthless Before Unity of Eleven Men.

Several new football surprises were added Saturday to the record of a season which has already bubbled over with gridiron reversals. Rutgers accomplished one of the most remarkable achievements in defeating Cupid Black's team of former college stars in a game which proved the value of expert coaching over individual brilliancy.

Coach Fred Dawson's team of Princeton Freshmen shattered a Yale dream by rising to great heights and subduing the Eli cubs when New Haven considered the Blue youths overwhelming favorites. West Virginia Wesleyan turned all calculations upside down by beating West Virginia, an eleven which had conquered such teams as the Navy and Washington and Jefferson. Another stunning shock was the performance of Auburn in holding Ohio State, the western champions, to a scoreless tie.

In a season like the one which closes Thanksgiving Day, all calculations, based on comparative scores, are set at naught. The reason for the unforeseen outcome of many of the games is hard to locate. In some cases it seemed to be the uncertainty of the tactics of the open game, while in other instances the general disorganization of the elevens due to war conditions brought elevens together under conditions far from normal. Here for instance was the Dartmouth team, which had the strength earlier in the season to beat such formidable opponents as West Virginia and Penn State, only to fall before Brown by a margin of two touchdowns when Brown had shown a decided slump and had been beaten by Syracuse and ripped to ribbons by Cupid Black's stars.

Teamwork Counts for Rutgers.

George Foster Sanford, the Rutgers coach, has always been a stanch advocate of the theory that a team of only middling fair players, welded together under a system of compact team play, was superior in every way to an eleven of individual stars. "Sandy" backed this theory up with convincing proof on Saturday. There has never been a better opportunity of trying out this theory of machine-like organization against specialized talent than there was when the New Brunswick eleven faced the cream of Eastern and Western gridirons at Ebbets Field.

The Rutgers eleven had been coached by Sanford so thoroughly that they played with military precision. There was co-ordination and harmony in every play. The linemen worked hand in glove with the backfield. The plays went off like clockwork; there were no delays in execution. No one player was asked to carry the burden. The Rutgers players were like Dumas's Three Guardsmen—"all for one and one for all."

The success of the Newport Naval Reserves this season has rested on the ability of some star like Charley Barrett or Gerrish to break loose and run wild in an open field. With a line of experienced, skilled players, such as the Naval Reserves had, it has been no difficult matter for them to protect the runner from the opposition long enough for him to get free. The Reserves expected to do this same thing against Rutgers. Their répertoire of plays was limited. They did not figure that they needed a variety of attack to down any team they faced.

The quick, low charge of the Rutgers line, however, put the Newport defense to rout. The line of New Brunswick forwards were down under their opponents with the first movement of the ball, and speed and unity of effort smashed the calculations of the naval men to bits. At the very outset the overconfidence of Black's highly lauded team got a surprise from which it never recovered.

Keck Becomes Famous.

A freshman who can kick a goal from placement from the 43-yard line can immediately be set down as a kicker of no ordinary talent. This is what young Keck, the Princeton tackle, did against the Yale freshmen in New Haven Saturday, and thereby scored the three points which marked the Tigers' margin of victory. After Princeton's downfall at the hands of the Harvard freshmen, and Yale's defeat of the Crimson Cubs, Yale was a 6 to 1 favorite before the game at New Haven Saturday. Princeton's reversal of form was wonderful, and during the greater part of the game they forced the fight and constantly threatened the Blue youngsters. Overconfidence also may have played a part in the downfall of the Yale cubs.

Dartmouth's fumbling was costly in Boston for both of Brown's scores came after Captain McDonough and Sid Holbrook permitted the pigskin to trickle through their hands. Dartmouth stuck to old-fashioned football tactics just as she did against Penn, and did not resort to an open game until late in the day. This open game of Dartmouth's appeared to be her most effective weapon, and yet has been used only as a last resort.

Syracuse's decisive defeat of the Michigan Aggies was another instance of the East's superiority over the West. The intersectional contests were about even yesterday, Notre Dame upholding the prestige of the West by beating Washington and Jefferson by the margin of a field goal. Washington and Jefferson was evidently still suffering from the effects of the beating they received from West Virginia the previous week, while the same effect on the Mountaineers was evident from its downfall before West Virginia Wesleyan. This reversal occasioned no little surprise, because Wesleyan was defeated a few weeks ago by Washington and Jefferson by a score of 13 to 6.

Army Has Successful Year.

The West Point team finished its season by winning a hard-fought game from Boston College. The Army has had a fairly successful season, its only defeat coming in the Notre Dame game. Each of the service academies suffered one defeat during the season, although Annapolis, under Gilmour Dobie, had developed a much superior scoring machine than the Army. West Point, however, did not have the advantage of the coaching of former seasons, as all the former members of the coaching staff are in active service and the Army has always relied on graduate coaching.

The Columbia-New York University game furnished one of the best contests of the season at South Field and the defeat was a disappointment to the Columbia crowd. Fordham had an easy time with the Naval Reserve eleven from Pelham Bay, which is the same service team which will play the Mineola Aviation Corps at the Polo Grounds Thursday afternoon.

The inability of the crack Ohio State team to get better than a scoreless tie with Auburn was a surprise. Auburn produced a player who was just as sensational as Chick Harley in half back Ducote. There was no incentive of rivalry in this game, however, to spur Ohio State to its greatest effort as the game was a benefit affair and was played before the soldiers at Camp Sheridan, Montgomery, Ala.

Curtis Held to Tie Soccer Game.

Curtis High and Townsend Harris Hall played a tie soccer game in the high school series at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday, each side scoring a goal. After ten minutes of play in the second half, right half back Weitz scored off a corner kick by [illegible]mpolski. Ten minutes later Macken of Curtis headed the ball in off a corner kick by R. Lynch. Curtis High [illegible] in the P. S. A. L. race.

BROWN'S SPRINT WINS RACE.

Comes from Behind to Take Harlem Athletic Contest.

A spirited sprint gave Harry Brown of the Harbrook A. C. a victory in the weekly handicap road race of the Harlem Athletic League held yesterday over the West Harlem Catholic Club's course of about five miles. Brown had a handicap of 1:45, and finished with an advantage of about twenty yards over M. Tea, Glencoe A. C., who was second from the 3:15 mark. The victor's time was 30:53. Victor Voteretsas, the Greek runner of the Morningside A. C., who is in the city on a furlough from army duties at Spartanburg, S. C., started from scratch and finished sixth in 30:00. This gave him the fast time prize.

The team honors went to the Morningside A. C. with twenty-one points, making the seventh consecutive victory in team competition since the opening of the Harlem Athletic League road running season.

ROOT AND DROBACH ENTER.

Veteran Riders to Team in Coming Six-Day Race.

Pete Drobach, the Boston cycling favorite, who rode the entire hour sprint last year in the Garden when his partner was unable to continue the race, was teamed yesterday with Eddie Root, a four-time winner of six-day races, for the coming grind, which starts Sunday night.

Root was originally teamed with Marcel Dupuy, who was unable to reach here for the contest. Oscar Egg and Paul Suter, the two other foreign entries, are due today on the French Line. Drobach finished third in the six-day race in Boston last month.

Instead of an hour sprint each afternoon and evening, a two-hour sprint in the evening and a one-hour sprint in the afternoon have been set up for the cards. The track will be finished for the men to take workout on Saturday. The fact that there are no sprint championships prior to the six-day race will give the riders more time to familiarize themselves with the course.

SPEEDWAY RACING COMES TO AN END

Pacing Honors Go to Mittie Bedworth—Marion Toddington Is Trotting Champion.

The curtain on the local light harness racing season was rung down yesterday at the Harlem Speedway with the tenth Fall matinée of the Road Drivers' Association. Because of the cold weather only a handful of spectators were present to see the horses compete in the final event.

Horses owned by J. A. Murphy led in the season's point scoring, and to this stable go the 1917 Speedway trotting and pacing championship titles. Marion Toddington, the Murphy chestnut mare, finished the season at the head of the trotters, with a total of 45 points. This gave the Murphy horse an advantage of nine points on Dr. C. P. Martin's Bon Todd, which finished second, while E. Carpenter's Bessie Baron was third with 34. In the pacing class Murphy's Mittie Bedworth, a chestnut mare, carried off the laurels with a point score of 32. Clover Patch, another Murphy-owned horse, and J. Leonard's Silent Sister tied for second place with 28 points each. Clover Patch had won the title during three previous seasons.

Marion Toddington gave the small crowd of shivering spectators a glimpse of her championship form in the trotting feature yesterday when, with Dave McClary, the veteran driver, holding the reins, she triumphed in straight heats over the bay gelding Oakland Boy. The latter is also from the Murphy stable, and was driven by Jesse Smith. Marion Toddington's time, for the heats were 1:01 and 1:09.

HAVANA MAY GET MATCH.

Proposed That De Oro and Otis Play for Cue Title in Cuba.

It is possible that the next match for the world's professional three-cushion billiard championship between Alfredo de Oro, the title holder, and Charles Otis, the challenger, will be played in Havana. Negotiations to this end are now pending, but whether they will eventuate into an actuality remains in doubt. There are several snarls which need to be untangled before the match can go out of the country, some of which transgress the rules under which contestants play for the three-cushion emblem.

De Oro is particularly anxious to have the match played in Havana. The Cuban Government recently voted him a life pension of $150 a month and the certificate, indicative of that is to be presented to him at Havana some time in January. In view of this De Oro wishes to give the Cuban people the opportunity of seeing him play in a championship match.

Originally the champion was to have played Clarence Jackson prior to the match with Otis. The withdrawal of the latter, however, moved the Otis match forward. According to the terms of the championship De Oro must play Otis in not less than thirty nor more than forty days from Nov. 12, and this would bring the next challenger, August Kieckhefer, eligible for January. The withdrawal of Jackson therefore upset the tentative plans which the champion had made to play Otis in January at Havana.

Under the rules governing the championship trophy, without the consent of the player he has to meet and the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, a champion cannot name as a place for a match any other city than the one in which he has a legal residence. Nevertheless, if De Oro can induce Otis to agree to play in Havana the donors of the emblem will interpose no objection.

Ralph Greenleaf, the Monmouth, Ill., "Boy Wonder," will be the next contender for the championship at continuous pocket billiards, now held by Frank Taberski of Schenectady. Greenleaf will have his chance between Dec. 18 and 26. By defeating the Iowa boy, Taberski will become the owner of the championship emblem, which has been a medium of competition since the tournament held at Chicago, Feb. 26 to March 20, 1916.

Welker Cochran, the Manson, Iowa billiard star, who defeated Leonard Howison week before last, will play Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia at Maurice Daly's during five afternoons and evenings this week. They will compete at 2,500 points, 18.2 balkline, in ten blocks of 250 each. The first session will begin this afternoon.

The New England Association of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players has decided to hold three tournaments this Winter. The classes will be A B and C and will be based on grand averages of 3.5 and 7. Inasmuch as there are no records of grand averages by New England players, entrants will be classified by a committee comprised of Richard Engstrom, N. S. Kelly, and William Crocker.

CRIMSON GETS PRIVATE GYM

Harvard Authorities Turn Over Randolph Hall for General Use.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 25.—Randolph Hall gymnasium, used in the past exclusively by wealthy students of Harvard's gold coast, will be opened to the general student body of the university this week, it has been announced. With Hemenway Gymnasium given over to the occupancy of sailors of the Government Naval Radio School, Harvard students have been without a place for indoor exercise this Fall. The university purchased Randolph Hall and its private gymnasium a year ago, and it was decided today to put the gymnasium into general use.

Fort Hamilton Eleven Victor.

The Fort Hamilton Post football team triumphed over the Second Naval Battalion of Brooklyn yesterday in a one-sided game at Fort Hamilton, by 54 to 0. The contest was preparatory to the Fort Hamilton game with Fort Hancock, to be played Thursday at Ebbets Field.

NEW YORK ELEVEN TRIUMPHS

Replays Protested Soccer Game and Wins Again.

Replaying a protested cup tie match with the Clan MacDonalds, the New York Football Club again was victor by the score of 2 goals to 0 at Lenox Oval yesterday. New York qualified for the second round, in which it will meet the Interborough R. T. eleven next Sunday.

A battle royal on the soccer gridiron at Clark's Athletic Field in East Newark was fought between the West Hudsons and the Paterson Football Club in the second round of the American Football Association's cup tie series, and resulted in favor of the West Hudsons by the score of 2 goals to 1.

The Babcock & Wilcox soccer eleven eliminated the Scottish Americans from the cup tie series of the American Football Association by the score of 3 goals to 2 in a hard struggle at Bayonne. Elliott and Sweeney scored for the "Babs" in the first half, and Muir made it three for the home team soon after the restart.

Playing with only ten men the Interborough R. T. soccer team was successful against the Jersey Athletic Club of the National League by 2 goals to 0. Edmondson scored first with a long shot.

40,000 HOMELESS DOLLARS.

Tennis Ambulance Fund Awaits Disposition by the Government.

Just at present the ambulance fund of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, amounting to some $40,000, is awaiting some definite disposition on the part of the officials at Washington. The fund was raised through a series of exhibition matches, club and patriotic tournaments, and was to equip tennis ambulance divisions. The name of each club giving $1,000 was to appear on an ambulance for service in France.

Since the start of the campaign, however, conditions have changed with regard to the equipping of ambulances, and the snarl that has resulted has left the tennis ambulance fund high in the air. Those in charge of the fund feel it incumbent that the provisions of the agreement with the clubs contributing money be carried out, and endeavors are being made in this direction. Should they fail to achieve their object some other method of using the money for the benefit of the Red Cross will doubtless be devised.

The matter will be one of the chief topics under consideration when the Executive Committee of the tennis association meets at the Waldorf-Astoria on Dec. 7. A statement of the case from the viewpoint of the tennis association was issued yesterday from the office of the Field Secretary, Paul B. Williams. It reads as follows:

"When the National Association undertook this campaign it had a definite understanding with the Red Cross as to how the money should be used. During the Summer, however, the Government took control of the ambulance service, and thus far the association has been unable to secure an authoritative statement of its intentions with reference to the ambulance fund. Although the Government was supposed to assume the undertakings of the Red Cross in this matter, it has not stated its intentions, and the National Association has been unable to fulfill the obligations entered into with its members. The whole matter is being amicably negotiated, however, and officers of the association hope to have a statement from the Government in time to permit the Executive Committee to take final action in disposing of the funds now available.

"In justice both to the Red Cross and the association, it is fair to state that every effort has been made to adjust the seeming difficulty in a manner that would carry out the obligations of both organizations. Delay has doubtless been due to the pressure of business at Washington, and it is believed that in view of the definite agreements on which the National Association campaign was based, a satisfactory understanding will be had without much further delay."

George T. Adee, President of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, having been commissioned a Major in the Reserve Corps, it is considered probable that he will retire as head of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, or at any rate that he will not seek re-election when the annual meeting is held in February. Julian S. Myrick is now acting President of the association, and he is being mentioned as the successor to Mr. Adee. While it is understood that Mr. Myrick is perfectly willing to continue as acting president, and have Mr. Adee remain President, Mr. Adee will doubtless withdraw from tennis activities for the present. In case he does this it is believed there will be other candidates in the field besides Mr. Myrick, although the latter is the logical choice in the opinion of many closely identified with the game. One who is mentioned as a possible rival to Mr. Myrick is Craig Biddle of Philadelphia.

The nominating committee which will prepare the official ballot for the annual meeting is composed of Edwin Sheafe of the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston; James S. Cushman, West Side Tennis Club, and Charles Garland, Pittsburgh A. A.

NO CHAMPIONSHIP HOCKEY.

Amateur League, However, to Hold Interborough Matches.

Although the Amateur Hockey League will not hold a championship tournament this year, arrangements have been made whereby the followers of the sport should see plenty of fast and interesting hockey during the Winter. At a meeting of the league at the Crescent Athletic Club it was decided to organize an Amateur Hockey League team in New York and another in Brooklyn, and then to arrange a schedule of interborough matches.

At the meeting the representative of the Boston Athletic Association stated that the Unicorn Club would again have a team on the ice. Also, it is understood that the Boston Hockey Club would have a team. This will make intercity games possible. To make these intercity contests more interesting, it was decided to combine the New York and Brooklyn force into an all New York aggregation when out-of-town clubs play here.

Also to make the game faster the Amateur Hockey League has decided to play six-man teams, and to allow substitution and resubstitution of players. The new rule will greatly help the Crescent Athletic Club, which is the Brooklyn team, as it will be able to call upon its former stars to help keep alive the pastime. By allowing substitution and resubstitution, fresh men continually will be upon the ice.

The New York team will be a consolidation of the New York Athletic Club, the Hockey Club of New York, and the St. Nicholas Hockey Club. In the ranks of these organizations there are more than enough senior hockey players to organize one, if not two, fast six-man hockey teams. By calling out its veterans, the Crescent Athletic Club, which will begin to practice at the Brooklyn Ice Palace next week, believes that it will be able to put a satisfactory team on the ice.

At the meeting yesterday George Hallock, Jr., resigned as President of the Amateur Hockey League. Dr. Robert J. Bell, Charman of the Athletic Committee of the Crescent Athletic Club, was elected as his successor. The league will meet again next week and take up the question of playing dates. The matches are to be played at the Brooklyn Ice Palace and the St. Nicholas Rink.

Harvard to Have Informal Seven.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 25.—Hockey is to be played at Harvard University this Winter on the same basis as that of football this Fall. A meeting will be held Monday for men who wish to report as candidates for an informal team. No games will be scheduled with other colleges, but contests will be arranged with military and naval sevens, the proceeds to be devoted to war relief funds.

TWO LOCAL CLUBS TO EXPAND LINKS

Baltusrol and Sleepy Hollow Take Steps Toward Increasing Facilities.

FORMER BUYS 140 ACRES

Another 18-Hole Course to be Constructed at Short Hills—Nine More Holes at Scarborough.

Two of the most popular golf clubs in the metropolitan district are about to expand for want of room. In fact, the Baltusrol Golf Club already has completed arrangements whereby another eighteen-hole course is to be constructed at Short Hills, N. J., and the Sleepy Hollow Country Club proposes to outline a scheme for utilizing a lot of ground, not now under cultivation, for a possible additional nine holes to the present hilly eighteen-hole journey at Scarborough, N. Y.

Baltusrol has developed so many experts at the game in recent years and so many enthusiasts that it finds its eighteen holes inadequate to the demand for space. There are 750 members at Baltusrol, and almost all of them are playing members. The women of Baltusrol are as ardent in their devotion to the game as the men, and there are almost as many women players as men.

Until a few days ago Baltusrol only owned twenty-four acres of ground, or the space on which the clubhouse and other buildings stood, and the golf course was leased. At a recent meeting, attended by almost every member of the club, the finances of the organization brought forth so much optimism that it was voted not only to purchase the property now leased, but to buy an additional 140 acres which adjoin. This was accomplished, and an architect started over the land with orders to lay out another eighteen-hole course. Baltusrol paid almost $500,000 for the property.

Changes in Courses Planned.

According to the present plan, nine of the lower holes of the present course, together with nine new greens to be located on a sixty-five-acre plot bordering on the Westfield High Road will constitute the east course. The nine hillside holes are to be supplemented by nine new greens on seventy acres of rolling land lying to the south of the present tenth and eleventh greens, and this addition would make the south course.

The first tee of the south course would be directly behind the clubhouse, and its termination would be the present eighteenth hole. The first tee of the east course would be as at present, and it is likely that the sixteenth green, which is in front of the clubhouse now, would be the eighteenth of the new east course.

Although the members are jubilant over the project and many are anxious to have work started as soon as the weather permits, some of the careful members deem it unwise to make any changes until after the war. With such a large sum spent already, it is thought that the club should not cut too deeply into its finances until war conditions justify such an expenditure.

Baltusrol, with two courses of the merit of the present one, would rise to the lead of the metropolitan district. During the present season almost every golfer who played at Baltusrol remarked the excellence of the turf, both of the greens and the fairways. Baltusrol was one of the first clubs of the district to seed its fairways with wire grass, and it was the first to find a grass which would hold up a ball.

Golfers admit that the sod around Short Hills is conducive to good turf. It is hardy and virgin enough to allow of experiments. The seed takes hold and brings up a grass strong enough to allow of frequent grooming and to leave a surface which is almost flat. Baltusrol also has not had to fight against the moles and insects which eat away the grass.

Turf Is Important.

The condition of the turf, according to experts of the game, can have a lot to do with the playing of the golfers. Probably this is one of the reasons why Baltusrol has turned out leaders of the game and why the Baltusrol women recently won the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association team title for 1917. Led by Mrs. William A. Gavin, the present metropolitan champion, Baltusrol has almost a score of women players ranked among the first few in the district. Mrs. Gavin is at scratch.

Sleepy Hollow recently acquired control of additional land at Scarborough valued at $600,000. This property was purchased with a view to the future and had not the war interfered it is probable that a second eighteen-hole course would have been in the process of construction now. Sleepy Hollow has a difficult course. It is a hard climb for most players, and there are some who think that the course could be changed so that it would not be so much of a task.

There is to be a meeting of the members of Sleepy Hollow Nov. 29, at which time consideration of two amendments to the constitution are to be discussed, and also the members will be questioned on the possibility of a change in the course as it is now. The purchase of the new land and the added fixed charges have made an increase in the entrance fees and the annual subscription necessary. The fees will be raised if the new amendments are favorably acted upon at the meeting.

It is proposed to develop a part of the property recently acquired in accordance to plans made by landscape architects, and to negotiate the sale of this land to members of the club. Several of the members looked upon this scheme with great enthusiasm last Summer.

Announcement has just been made of the golf events to be played at Belleair, Fla., during the Winter season. There will be nine tournaments on the schedule beginning with the annual January competition on Jan. 21. Next will be the women's putting tournament Feb. 2. The annual jollification of the seniors is scheduled for Feb. 8. A woman's competition will be held Feb. 11 to 15. The Washington Birthday fixture is to start Feb. 18 with the final on Feb. 22. The woman's championship, won last year by Miss Elaine V. Rosenthal of Chicago is to be held from Feb. 25 to March 1, inclusive. A professional amateur four-ball competition is billed for March 7. On March 8 and 9 the West Coast open championship is to be played. The amateur championship, March 11 to 15, winds up the season.

PENN SOLDIERS EARN TRIP.

Triumph in Football Games Against Rivals of Maryland.

CAMP MEADE, Md., Nov. 25.—Ten thousand rooters today saw the football team of the 313th Infantry Regiment, composed of Marylanders, defeated by the 314th's team here. The latter team and regiment are composed of Pennsylvanians. By virtue of winning the Camp Meade championship, the team of the 314th will go to Philadelphia to play the champions of Camp Dix next Saturday.

It was said today that Eddie Collins, second baseman of the Chicago Americans, would probably come here soon as a selected man. He lives in Philadelphia.

Chess Game Ends in a Draw.

D. Janowski of Paris and C. Jaffe contested the seventh game of their chess match yesterday, at the rooms of the New York City Chess Club, a draw being recorded after fifty-one moves. Jaffe had the white pieces in a queen's pawn opening, which the French champion defended irregularly. Of the seven games played to date, Janowski has won 3, Jaffe, 1, and 3 were drawn.

Kehlman Victor in Walk.

A handicap of nine minutes aided A. Kehlman to win the opening handicap walk of Morris Evening High School, held yesterday over a course of about four and one half miles, in the Bronx. Kehlman's time at the finish was 41:38. J. Mess was second. Louis Labowitz, who started from scratch, finished tenth, in 36:15.

A Correction.

In last Saturday's advertisement through a typographical error, we misquoted a salesman's reply to a customer who had asked, "Will this coat wear well?"

The types made the salesman say, "Not as well as a coat of finer woven fabric." What he did say was, "Not as well as a coat of firmer woven fabric."

Firmer refers to the texture, and a lot of the more moderately priced garments come in that class.

Hudson Super-Six Costs $300 Less

Promptness Means a Saving. Price to Advance as Soon as We Sell Ten Cars

The price of Hudson Super-Six seven-passenger phaeton models advances at least $300 just as soon as we and a few other dealers have disposed of present stocks. In our case there remain only 10 cars.

Factory production of cars built of materials bought last year when costs were from 30% to 60% lower than they now are has already been closed. All cars to be produced from now on are to be built of materials bought in the higher market of this year.

Other manufacturers increased their prices some months ago. Prices have been advanced twice by some makers since the Super-Six has been selling at its price of $1650 for the phaeton model.

There is no way to escape the influence of increased material costs. All makers have met the same conditions. Hudson held a temporary advantage because of the large supply of materials bought at prices more favorable than those who bought later have had to pay.

Save a Season's Operation Cost by Buying Now

All automobile prices will be higher next year. Get one of these Hudsons now. The saving will cover a year's operation cost.

Motor car demand has steadily increased during the past two years. This fall has been a big buying season. All Hudson dealers have been short of certain models for more than two months.

The great wealth that is being accumulated by people in all sections, who until recently did not have the money with which to satisfy even their simplest wants, is today making a new crop of motor car buyers. That condition is increasing more rapidly than factory production.

Buy your car now to make certain of delivery.

It surely isn't necessary to add anything about the Hudson Super-Six. There are now nearly 50,000 Super-Sixes in service. It has led all other fine cars in sales from the day its deliveries were large enough to count. You can buy your Super-Six now at a saving of at least $300. When stock of 10 cars is sold, then the price goes up.

HILLQUIT CRIES, 'ON TO WASHINGTON'

Stirs Garden Audience with the New Slogan of the Socialists.

REVIEWS THE ELECTION

Declares Campaign Put His Party on the Map of the Nation and Predicts Future Victories.

"On to Washington!" was the cry of Morris Hillquit in Madison Square Garden last night, at a meeting at which more than 4,000 men and women celebrated the Socialist gains at the polls three weeks ago. Mr. Hillquit flung his challenge at the national Administration after he had brought forth a storm of cheers with the declaration that the Socialist record on Nov. 6 had "signalized a crushing defeat for the dangerous propaganda of militarism and the undemocratic policy of suppression sought to be introduced into this country."

Pleading almost as hard for the continued existence of The Call, the Socialist newspaper, the Saturday issue of which was barred from the second class mail, as he did for a program of social justice to the workers and a speedy peace, Mr. Hillquit again and again aroused his hearers to a frenzy of cheering and red-flag waving. His direct charge that the "ruling powers" had combined to compass the destruction of The Call, and that so long as 150,000 men Socialists and 150,000 women Socialists fought that design it never would succeed, got a rousing response.

Although a 25 and 50 cent admission fee cut the audience to half the size of recent Socialist gatherings at the Garden, the thousands who poured inside were vociferous in their indorsement of every radical utterance, cheering no more loudly for Hillquit than they did for Jacob Panken, Justice-elect of the Municipal Court, when he characterized Russia as the only country free today, and predicted the coming of internationalism when Germany and all other countries would be free too.

A magazine containing articles on the Russian revolution by Lenine and Trotzky, leaders in the present pacifist demoralization in that land, found ready sale in the lobby. Advertisements also were circulated for a ball in support of The Masses, a suppressed publication whose publishers have been indicted for violation of the Espionage act.

Charles Ervin, editor of The Call, made a fiery speech, defying efforts to suppress his publication and begging every person present to buy two copies every day for a week, and to give one to "a friend who may prove sympathetic." He declared himself ready to go to jail in the cause of "a free press."

The triumph of woman suffrage at the polls was celebrated by the gathering almost as enthusiastically as were the Socialist gains.

Hillquit Reviews the Election.

Mr. Hillquit was the first speaker. In opening his remarks he said:

"I have every reason to rejoice at the Socialist showing in the recent election. We have put socialism on the map of New York and on the map of the United States. After fifty years of persistent and dogged work, and hard, at times, seemingly hopeless, struggle, we have established socialism as an important and permanent factor in the political and social life of America."

After reviewing the Socialist vote and recalling the fact that eleven Socialist Assemblymen are to go to Albany, while the party for the first time is to be represented in the Board of Aldermen, Mr. Hillquit denied that the Socialist vote was a vote of unrest, declared that the Socialists had shown similar great gains elsewhere, and then went on:

"One great and historical importance of the recent election is that it has signalized a crushing defeat for the dangerous propaganda of militarism and the undemocratic policy of suppression sought to be introduced in this country. All the ruling powers of the American metropolis in business, finance, politics, pulpit, and schools combined to make the issue unmistakably clear to the whole world. They presented to the people of New York a program of militarization of our government and schools, of our actions and our thoughts, a program of political and moral terrorism, and a program of intellectual and mental straightjacketism. They had the audacity to proclaim this miscreant child of own imagination as the only embodiment of true patriotism and true loyalty. Very well. The people of New York accepted the issue, and the fourth of them have voted it down to eternal defeat.

"While the Fusion forces on their fire-eating platform lost one-half of their political strength, the Socialist Party, which made its campaign on the clear-cut issue of social justice, preservation of democratic liberties and a speedy and general cessation of war, increased its vote almost five-fold.

Takes Up Suffrage Victory.

"And we have secured the vote to the women of the State. Of late we have heard some interesting discussion about the factor primarily responsible for the marvelous victory of the great cause of woman in the last election. Now that we have the election returns, the subject has ceased to be one of speculation and has become a matter of mathematical demonstration. The 150,000 votes which we gained in the State of New York turned the defeat of two years ago into a decisive victory this year, and these votes have come in decisive numbers and heaviest from precisely the same districts which have given us the heaviest Socialist pluralities. It was also the Socialist Party which forced the standard bearers of all other parties, much against their will, to openly espouse and support the cause of woman suffrage.

"We do not ask the political gratitude of the women. We do not expect either recognition or support from the conservative women of the rich, and their frantic disclaimers today only amuse us."

In closing his speech Mr. Hillquit said: "The election has demonstrated the great political power of the Socialist movement in this country. We must now organize and vitalize and perpetuate it as a great weapon in the hands of the working class in the struggle for liberty all through the country. We have forced open the doors of many local legislative assemblies to our representatives. Our slogan now is: 'On to Washington!'

"The coming general election will be nation-wide. The people of the United States will be called upon to choose a new House of Representatives, the most important body in the foundation and determination of the vital national policies of this country. The Socialist Party of the United States must be represented in Congress by an imposing delegation to voice the sentiments and demands of the working class and of the great masses of the American people.

Sees Only Victory Ahead.

"There is nothing ahead of us but victory. Socialism is triumphant all over the world. No power of earth, no capitalistic reign of terror, no sanguinary international war can stop the progress toward social justice and human liberty and eternal peace. Our campaign must go on from day to day, our struggle continues, and the best, the most valiant fighter in our ranks between and during campaign times is that wonderful little organ, The Call, against which the ruling powers have combined to compass its destruction. But they have combined in vain, for so long as we are 150,000 male Socialists and 150,000 female Socialists, so long as we remain alive and active and struggling, will we be able to maintain our Call."

Other speakers were Assemblyman Abraham I. Shiplacoff, Alderman-elect Algernon Lee, Marie MacDonald, and August Claessen.

DENOUNCES SOCIALISTS IN THEIR STRONGHOLD

Henry A. Wise Wood Tells Bronx Audience Preaching of Sedition Must Be Stopped.

Speaking in the heart of the district that polled a large Socialist vote in the recent election, Henry A. Wise Wood, addressing the Bronx Open Forum in the Morris High School Auditorium, 166th Street and Boston Road, yesterday afternoon, declared that the people of the Bronx should be ashamed of those Socialists who preach sedition and must take steps to stop such preaching.

The Socialist, the pacifist and the conscientious objector who do not raise their hands in this war, said Mr. Wood, are parasites on the back of the man who carries the gun and who is preserving the life and liberty of the man who refused to fight for his country.

"They lie when they say they want free speech," he declared. "Free property is what they want. Their doctrine would break up society. The Socialist hates the law because it reserves the right for a man who has earned his property by the sweat of his brow to keep it. They hate soldiers because they protect men and their property and they hate the flag because it is the symbol that binds the soldier true to his trust. Socialism has laid Russia open to the Germans and has broken down the national fibre of the Russian people."

Mr. Wood said that in Washington people were speaking of the war lasting five years longer and were preparing to raise an army of five millions of men to carry it on.

The other speakers were Major Louis Livingston Seaman and Borough President Douglas Mathewson. Major Seaman roused the audience by denunciation of the brutality of the Germans which he had witnessed.

"Because there is in Berlin a red-handed murderer who knows no law and because he has been practicing that Kultur since the name of Hohenzollern was established is the real reason why we are at war," said Major Seaman. "Hohenzollern literally means band of robbers and these bands of robbers have been at it for six hundred years. They are the descendants of Attila, whose practices they follow."

Major Seaman exhibited some war relics, including a fragment of the first bomb dropped by a Zeppelin in the war. Borough President Mathewson recounted the incidents that led this country to enter the war and exhorted loyalty as the keynote of the life of the people. Brigadier-General Eli D. Hoyle, of the Department of the East, and George Gordon Battle, who were scheduled to speak, sent word that they were unable to attend.

SAYS UNITED STATES SAVED FRIENDS BY WAR

James M. Beck Tells Audience We Would Have Had None Left Had We Avoided It.

If the United States had not entered the war we would not, at the conflict's close, have had a friend in the entire world, said James M. Beck, Chairman of the League of National Unity, to an unusually crowded meeting of the Free Synagogue, 36 West Sixty-eighth Street, last night. The neutral nations would have accused us of not having defended them on the issues of freedom of the seas and in violations of neutrality, Mr. Beck told the big audience. Our present allies would have accused us of having been unwilling to fight for the principles of justice and humanity on which our nation was founded, and the Teutonic powers would have said that, but for the munitions sold to their enemies, they would have won the war long ago.

Karl Liebknecht, the German Socialist, was the bravest man in the war, Mr. Beck said, because he dared stand out against Germany's military party. The German people should not be held responsible either for the war's beginning or present continuance, Mr. Beck insisted, since they have been deceived and hoodwinked throughout, and have believed that in prosecuting it they were merely defending themselves from the aggression of the outside world.

"In 1875 Bismarck, that farsighted statesman, warned the German militarist party that if Germany made an unjust war upon France the entire world would take arms to defend the unjustly treated nation as a matter of principle," Mr. Beck said. "Without the leadership of the militarist party the German people would never have entered the present conflict.

"This war may well be said to have been caused by the selfishness of many nations. England could have stopped it in the beginning if she had not adopted the attitude originally that her interests in Serbia were too trifling to go to war about. The United States might have stopped it if it had not adopted a policy of barren and immoral neutrality for the first two and a half years. The immorality of this first attitude of ours, however, was corrected by the inspiring call to arms on April 2, when we definitely determined to throw our last man and penny into the scale to defend the basic principles of civilization."

Mr. Beck laid special emphasis on his belief that during the last six months the United States had played an exceptionally brilliant part in the world's present struggle for the principle of justice.

"We have already appropriated one-tenth of the nation's entire wealth for the prosecution of the war," Mr. Beck added. "We have called 1,000,000 men and already have more soldiers actually in France than Meade had at Gettysburg or Napoleon had at Waterloo. Many of our American youths were inspired by a desire to fight for the principle of international justice long before the nation, as a whole, responded to the issue. In 1916, there were 16,000 young Americans in the armies of France and England."

WOULD SEND DISLOYAL BACK

Ex-Ambassador Gerard's Plan for Men Who Favor the Kaiser.

Before an audience of 3,000 persons in the Brooklyn Academy of Music James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, last night recommended that the disloyal minority of German-Americans should be deprived of the money they had accumulated here, given back the wooden shoes and rags in which they landed, and sent back to the Fatherland.

"The vast majority of German-American citizens are loyal," he said. "What do these few disloyalists want? Do they think they will be better off if Germany conquers this country? I don't know that Benedict Arnold had such a good time. I have seen wild animals kick and claw and squirm in the mountains, but none of it would be equal to the way your fat, disloyal German-American would kick and squirm if you tied him up to ship him back to Germany. The bodies of the men killed in this war, if laid head to heels, would reach from New York to San Francisco, from San Francisco back to New York, and back again as far as Denver. Don't you wish that you could take that one man—the man responsible for this war—and drive him along such a Calvary, beating and scourging him at every step?"

The meeting was a patriotic concert and benefit given by the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Mary's Hospital and among the audience were Bishop McDonnell and many of the Catholic clergy of Brooklyn. The former Ambassador praised the 20,000 priests in the French Army—"Fighting always two fights, one for France and liberty, the other for religion."

"I have heard of one incident," he added, "I cannot guarantee it, but I am waiting for affidavits, where a church of a Protestant denomination whose services are conducted in German refused admission to the bodies of G. A. R. veterans, brought there for funeral ceremonies, until the American flag was taken away from the top of the coffin. In a State near Chicago there is a Senator who Colonel Roosevelt says would be digging a trench if he were in Germany, and who I say would be filling one."

DEVOY WARNED IN BOSTON.

Vigilance Agents Stop Him in a Speech Against the War.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 25.—Eight hundred persons attended a meeting held in Hibernian Hall tonight under the auspices of the Clan-Na-Gael and applauded John Devoy in an attack on England, Lord Northcliffe, and Lloyd George. Devoy said that most of the newspapers in the country, especially the New York papers, are the biggest liars on earth and were in the employ of British agents.

He said that German cruelty in this war is nothing to England's cruelty to Ireland, and he referred to Edith Cavell as a spy, and justified her execution. Devoy also said that the Irish in America must demand that President Wilson make his "safe for democracy" proposition apply to Ireland, or the whole war would be a failure. The loyalty of the Irish in America, he said, depended greatly on this. He declared that Ireland must have complete independence at once.

Chief Flynn of the Secret Service was roundly hissed and called a traitor.

Devoy was warned by members of the Vigilance Corps of the American Defense Society that further remarks would not be tolerated. He then concluded his speech.

$45,000 MORE FOR SYRIANS.

Brooklyn Mass Meeting Adds to Relief Fund.

At the close of a mass meeting held at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon and attended by 2,500 persons, it was announced that $45,000 had been pledged for Syrian relief work. It was also stated that at the recent mass meeting at the Hippodrome $101,000 had been raised. The Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, presided. Henry Morgenthau, Dr. Talcott Williams, and George A. Ferris, a Syrian lawyer of this city, were the speakers.

Mr. Morgenthau asserted that the Turks and Germans took more than 300,000 able-bodied men from Armenia and Syria, as well as 150,000 animals that might be used for food, leaving the aged and the children to live upon a wasted land.

"There is no help today for this people as long as the embargo by England and France exists," said Mr. Morgenthau, "unless this Relief Committee sends money to prevent the entire race from being exterminated. We are fighting that democracy may live. The fearful cancer in the Balkans and the disease that exists in Turkey are the causes of this upset. These should have been rooted out forty years ago. This is a final struggle for which we should have been prepared many decades ago. It is a question whether America is going to stand side by side or wrap itself in self-consciousness and disregard of others."

Dr. Williams said that he took pride in the fact that he was born in Syria, near Mount Lebanon, and that Syria was the fountain head of 200,000,000 descendants of the Arabic race scattered from Gibraltar to the Euphrates. "Be speedy with your wealth," said Dr. Williams, "that this race may not perish from the face of the earth. When this war is over and we come to organize the world in a league to enforce peace in all lands, see to it that the Syrian race shall not have perished because you did not contribute enough and fast enough."

Mr. Ferris told the audience that more than 1,000 Syrians were dying every day of starvation and disease, and that disease was rampant because of the inability of the living to bury the dead.

BENEFIT FOR NEGRO TROOPS

Scores Had to be Turned Away from Concert for War Relief.

So many well wishers of the negro soldiers in the national army sought admission to a concert for their benefit in the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre yesterday afternoon that the doors had to be closed and scores turned away. There were songs by Grace La Rue, Miss Abbie Mitchell, the United Colored Church Choir, and others. Burr McIntosh and Dean William Pickens of Morgan University delivered addresses.

"The first company of soldiers chosen to guard the White House when the war started were colored," Dean Pickens said. "Perhaps this was because no Germans could possibly be among them. Ours is what might be called a 'safe' color nowadays. The record of the 54th Massachuetts Regiment of negroes in the civil war and of the 10th Cavalry in Mexico recently shows also that our color will not 'run.' This war is a great opportunity for us colored men, because by bravery and devotion we can prove that we are not American citizens with a qualification."

The entertainment was for the benefit of the Circle for Negro War Relief, which proposes to aid and supplement the Red Cross and all other governmental agencies in furnishing necessities and comforts for negro American soldiers and their families. Mrs. Emily Bigelow Hapgood, President of the organization, said last night that she was unable to state the amount of the entertainment's proceeds.

WAR DRIVE FOR $3,000,000.

Knights of Columbus Raising Fund for Soldiers' Aid.

The Knights of Columbus are now engaged in a drive to raise $3,000,000 for the following purposes: To maintain volunteer priests to look after the welfare of Catholic soldiers in the camps of this country, to send about 200 Catholic priests abroad, to erect at each of the national army cantonments three recreational centres and one large building at each of the sixteen National Guard encampments, and to erect from twenty-five to thirty recreational centres at the regular army expansion camps, so as to provide recreation for all soldiers, regardless of creed. It is also planned to furnish each building with a phonograph and records, piano, a library with current literature; to maintain information bureaus in France, so that parents, relatives and friends at home may hear from those in the service, and to do all other work for the comfort and welfare of the soldiers and sailors of all creeds.

Contributions may be sent to Frank W. Smith, Chairman of the New York Chapter, Knights of Columbus War Committee, Criminal Courts Building, New York City; William P. Larkin, 2 West Ninety-fourth Street, New York City, or to William J. McGinley, Supreme Secretary, P. O. Drawer 96, New Haven, Conn.

BOARDS TO EXECUTE ENEMY TRADE ACT

McAdoo Provides for Control of Transactions Involving German Interests.

RULES COVER TEUTON ALLIES

Money Transfers and Operations of Alien Insurance Among Subjects Regulated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Secretary McAdoo tonight promulgated a general order with the approval of President Wilson, establishing the procedure to be followed in the execution of the Trading With the Enemy act as to foreign exchange transfers, evidences of debt between the United States and any foreign country, the sending out of the United States to an enemy country of letters or other writings and the licensing of enemy, or ally of enemy, insurance companies.

This action is taken under the authority of the Executive Order of Oct. 12, in which the President distributed the powers to regulate those activities which were made subject to Government control as a war measure.

The new order by the Secretary of the Treasury designates the Federal Reserve Board as the agency to assume jurisdiction over foreign exchange and the export of bullion, coin or other precious metals subject to the operation of licenses to be granted for such exports by the War Trade Board. The books of account, and all business records of all persons or firms seeking to make any transfer of evidence of debt to an enemy, or an ally of enemy country, are made subject to inspection by the agents of the Federal Reserve Board.

The War Trade Board has power to administer the method of transmitting letters, or other writings, from this country to an enemy country, or an ally of an enemy country. This power is guarded against danger, in a military sense, by subordinating the acts of the War Trade Board to the supervision of the Censorship Board and the executive administration vested in the Postmaster General. The customs divisions of the Treasury Department will have the actual work of issuing licenses relative to sending letters to an enemy country.

The Bureau of War Risk Insurance of the Treasury Department will have jurisdiction of licensing enemy insurance companies to continue their business.

Text of McAdoo Order.

Secretary McAdoo's order follows:

"By virtue of the authority vested in the Secretary of the Treasury by executive order of the President, dated Oct. 12, 1917, I hereby adopt the following administrative procedure deemed necessary and proper for the executive administration vested by said executive order in the Secretary of the Treasury; such administrative procedure to remain in effect unless and until modified or superseded by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury:

"1. I hereby designate the Federal Reserve Board to act as the agency of the Secretary of the Treasury, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, for the investigation, regulation, or prohibition of any transaction in foreign exchange, export, or earmarking of gold or silver coin, or bullion or currency, transfers of credit in any form, (other than credits relating solely to transactions to be executed wholly within the United States,) and transfers of evidences of indebtedness or of the ownership of property between the United States and any foreign country or between residents of one or more foreign countries by any person within the United States;

"Provided, That licenses from the War Trade Board shall also be required in respect of all such transactions with, or for account of, an enemy or ally of enemy or any person acting for, or on behalf of, or for the benefit of, an enemy or ally of enemy, and I hereby designate the War Trade Board to act as the agency of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue any such licenses; and I hereby further designate the Federal Reserve Board, acting through its duly authorized agents, to act as the agency of the Secretary of the Treasury to exercise the authority and power vested in the Secretary of the Treasury in Article X. in said executive order to require any person engaged in any such transaction to furnish under oath complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters, or other papers in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person, either before or after such transaction is completed.

"The executive order dated Sept. 7, 1917, made under the authority of Title VII. of the act of Congress approved June 15, 1917, entitled 'An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes,' shall remain in full force and effect, subject to the requirement of licenses of the War Trade Board in the cases hereinbefore specified, until new regulations shall have been established by the President or by the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President, and thereupon shall be superseded.

Licensing of Communications.

"2. I hereby designate the War Trade Board to act as the agency of the Secretary of the Treasury to administer the authority vested in the Secretary of the Treasury relative to the sending, taking, or transmitting, or attempting to send, take, or transmit, out of the United States—and to issue licenses under such regulations as said War Trade Board may from time to time prescribe, to send, take, or transmit out of the United States—any letter or other writing, book, map, plan, or other paper, picture, or any telegram, cablegram, or wireless message, or other form of communication intended for or to be delivered directly or indirectly, to an enemy or ally of enemy; provided, however, that nothing herein shall be construed to diminish or impair either the executive administration vested in the Censorship Board or the executive administration vested in the Postmaster General by said executive order, dated Oct. 12, 1917. All applications for such licenses shall be made to the War Trade Board in the form prescribed by the War Trade Board. Such licenses shall state that the terms thereof are authorized and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall provide that the number of the license, under which any such communication shall be sent, shall be plainly marked upon such communication.

"3. I hereby designate the Customs Division of the Treasury Department to administer, and to issue licenses (except licenses to send, take or transmit out of the United States any letter, writing, or tangible form of communication intended for or to be delivered, directly or indirectly, to an enemy or ally of enemy,) in respect of the authority vested in the Secretary of the Treasury under Article XI. of said executive order, relative to sending, or taking out of, or bringing into, or attempting to send, take out of, or bring into, the United States, any letter, writing, or tangible form of communication, except in the regular course of the mail.

"4. I hereby designate the Bureau of War Risk Insurance of the Treasury Department to administer, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, the authority vested in the Secretary of the Treasury, under Article XII. of said executive order, relative to the granting of licenses or withholding or refusing the same to an enemy or ally of enemy insurance or reinsurance concern doing business with the United States through an agency or branch office or otherwise.

"WILLIAM G. McADOO,
"Secretary of the Treasury."
"The White House.
"Approved: Nov. 23, 1917.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

The belief that the severe slump which carried all classes of securities to levels in many cases below those established during the worst panic of recent years went too far by way of discounting the altered position of American industry confronted with the prospect of a long and increasingly expensive war was substantiated in the past week by a general recovery effected without the return of any speculative enthusiasm. The break which culminated with the end of the second Government loan campaign called attention to security bargains which the public began to acquire just as soon as it lost its fear of bear raiding. The advance last week was aided by the acceptance as a foregone conclusion of a belief that the Interstate Commerce Commission will recognize the urgent need of higher rates for the railroads, and by the news of the great victory of General Haig's army in the drive that bids fair to take Cambrai. It is hardly likely that the upward movement will proceed fast enough to characterize itself as a bull market. People bought stocks because they were selling obviously below their intrinsic value, but they have not followed up rallies with speculative buying always seen in a big upward movement. The process of readjustment has been carried on so far with due regard for the many dangers still threatening. The railroads are still far below the average price at which they sold before the executives decided upon the pending application for an increase in rates.

The question at issue between the carriers and the Federal authorities empowered to regulate their rates is much greater than the amount of the increase to which they are entitled to enable them to meet augmented costs of operation. The matter of adequate service has assumed larger importance than that of adequate rates. A warning that all thoughtful executives have been sounding for years has begun to attract attention. It has been more than a decade since the American railroads as a whole have invested a proper amount in any year for the improvement of their facilities and the provision of rolling stock and terminals to take care of the country's growth. The War Board postponed the day of reckoning by taking all of the systems in hand to be operated by a central body. In that way they affected a considerable reduction in unprofitable train miles and made each piece of equipment do more work. Unfortunately, there is an end to the extent to which greater economies and efficiency in the use of existing facilities can offset a steady increase in the demand for transportation. The railroad executives are not willing to admit that the end has yet been reached, but they are forced to the conclusion that to avoid congestion this Winter it will be necessary to carry the theory of centralized control much further than it has been so far developed. The result is that it is seriously proposed to cancel a large number of important passenger trains in order that the tracks and locomotives may handle more freight. This again is in the nature of temporary relief, which does not touch the fundamental difficulties at which it is aimed. The railroads must be in a position with the coming of Spring to do an unusual amount of deferred maintenance work, not only to make good the ravages of the approaching Winter, but to repair deficiencies of upkeep of long standing. They must be able to shut their eyes to the abnormal costs of new equipment and place orders for delivery as early as the plants can turn out new cars and locomotives. The proposed increase in rates will not automatically restore railroad credit, and it is out of the question to borrow heavy sums in a market which has been swept nearly bare by the Government's own borrowing. It is almost obvious that the Government must join with the carriers either as separate companies or as a single system in working out a plan for financing the construction which they must shortly authorize.

With all the delays and lost motion for which our Federal Government is notorious, even under the pressure of war's demands, there is discernible steady progress toward the concentration of all the national resources, both of men and materials, for the prosecution of a successful campaign against Prussianism. The cherished liberties of the individual in this country are seriously threatened by the new realization of what the retention of old privileges would cost. Slowly, of course, but relentlessly public opinion is being bent to the view that nothing counts as worth while if it hinders in the slightest degree the output and use of munitions. If Government ownership of the railroads holds a promise of being the shortest route to a free movement of supplies, then all of the sound economic objections to Federal control will receive no consideration. If the operation of millions of touring cars draws so heavily upon the supplies of gasoline as to embarrass military operations there will be an immediate curtailment of what must be recognized as wasteful consumption of liquid fuel. If there is not enough coal mined to keep all industrial plants engaged in the manufacture of uniforms, guns, ammunition, steel, and ships supplied, coal will be denied competing purchasers using it for the production of luxuries and non-essentials. It is not pleasant to contemplate Government interference with normal activity on such a scale, but it is much more disturbing to reckon the cost of interference with vital agencies of production and transportation. The longer the Government temporizes with unpleasant tasks the longer peace will be delayed.

The United States is passing through the successive stages of Great Britain's experience, but is reaching the point where no one will question the absolute necessity of subordinating all else to the furtherance of the war much more rapidly than the British did. Leading English authorities say that it was two years after the beginning of war before the nation stopped deluding itself with the belief that no great and general sacrifice had to be made to crush the enemy. In the highest circles at Washington the gravity of the food, fuel, labor, and shipping crises are much more clearly understood than is generally supposed. By taking warning now the country can be spared suffering that is inevitable if preparations for a long war are made in a half-hearted way. The declining rate of submarine successes, the apparent inability so far of the Teuton forces to complete the conquest in Northern Italy, and the unexpected success of the fighting on the western front are all significant as marking the hopelessness of Germany's ambition, but they are not being allowed to blind the Administration's eyes to the size of the task that still confronts the Allies.

LONDON MARKET STIMULATED.

Military and Political Happenings Affect Stock Exchange.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Military and political happenings stimulated the stock markets last week. The Russian developments were not a factor financially, and it is expected that the rule of the extremists will prove brief. The Premier's vigorous statement in Parliament on Monday disposing of the so-called crisis in consequence of his Paris speech, had a very bracing influence in all financial circles.

War securities were still the most popular, and there were many further advances in armament securities, especially old established businesses like Armstrong's and Vicker's. Oil shares were strong and active, and a substantial rise was recorded in Burmahs in response to the first dividend on ordinary capital.

The Treasury announced Monday its intention to requisition shares of the Royal Dutch Company at £51 a share, in contrast to the ruling price of 49½, and the quotation rose to the mobilization figure as the immediate result of keen buying in shells owing to the desire of displaced shareholders to retain an interest in the Royal Dutch Shell group.

Shipping securities were increasingly popular and many prominent shares advanced, but there was a sharp reaction in Castner Kellner Alkali, owing to the reduction of the dividend from 22 per cent. to 20 per cent.

Russian bonds were nominally lower and Scandinavian stocks were weakened by the rise in exchanges. French 5s were steadier. It is anticipated that the portion of the new French loan to be issued on this side will be offered at an early date at 62½, the equivalent, at the exchange of 27.40, of the Paris price of 68.60.

British railways were harder in tone notwithstanding some indications of labor unrest, the men refusing a further increase in wages of 5 shillings per week.

Money has been in keen demand in consequence of larger sums deposited with the Bank of England, which now allows the increased rate of 4½ per cent. on foreign balances, and preparations for the disbursement of the war loan dividend on Dec. 1, requiring about £50,000,000. War bond sales in the week to Nov. 17 were £10,806,350, compared with £9,791,600 the previous week.

REFLECTS BRITISH SUCCESS.

Paris Market Responds, but Coming Loan Also Is Factor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Monday's Bourse recorded an upward movement, principally among metal stocks and the shipping group, particularly Trans-Atlantique, Chargeurs Reuins, and Messageries Maritimes. On Tuesday Omnibus and Transport shares were the favorites, and on Wednesday the French Collieres, the sugar and the petroleum groups.

The British military successes near Cambrai, coupled with the large majority obtained by the new Clemenceau Ministry, stimulated the market Thursday with the exception of the Russian group. The Bourse was active Friday, but there was some selling in view of the proximity of the new war loan, with profit-taking in shipping and rubber shares, while sugar issues and the collieries registered further advances.

Improvement was reported in the position of the De Beers Diamond Company, and Suez Canal jumped 100 francs on the week, largely helped by the British successes in Palestine, but the markets closed easy, with selling predominant because of the foregoing reasons coupled with unsatisfactory outlook in Russia.

New taxation, foreshadowed for the coming year, includes a raising of the present tax on excess war profits, higher death duties, higher receipt stamps, and an increased tax in the retail trade on luxuries.

The gold holdings of the Bank of France amount to 3,294,347,932 francs. War advances increased 200,000,000, and foreign advances 15,000,000 francs. Exchange rates were easier, business being done today in sterling at 27.23 and dollars at 5.72.

IT IS A FACT, realized by few, that at no time in the last twenty years, not even in the panic of 1907, have bonds sold anywhere near their present low levels. This, therefore, is an exceptional opportunity, and one which should not be allowed to pass unheeded.

War Tax Opportunities

In the past high prices and low yield of many bonds have directed the attention of Partial Payment purchasers to the opportunities available in diversified, high-earning stocks.

War-tax conditions have resulted in the sacrifice of the best bonds, which are now selling on a plane where prices are low and the yield high.

Thousands of investors who are now purchasing standard securities for the first time are buying such time-tested bonds with a reasonable initial deposit and regular monthly payments—on the Partial Payment Plan.

Anglo American Oil Company Limited
PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT

At an extraordinary general meeting of the Company held in London on the 21st of November, 1917, a resolution was passed increasing the Capital of the Company by £1,000,000, by the creation of 1,000,000 new shares of £1 each. The new shares will be offered to the holders of the Company's share warrants and registered members resident in the United States of America and other allied and neutral countries outside the United Kingdom, in the proportion of one new share for every two shares held by them in the present issued capital, at the price of $7.50. The subscription list will open on the 16th of January and close on the 28th of February next.

Scrip certificates will be issued to holders of the Company's share warrants if they so desire, to enable them to sell their rights instead of taking up their proportion of the new capital. Applications will be received in New York for these scrip certificates between January 16th and February 14th next. Further particulars with the conditions of the new issue will be announced shortly.

Inasmuch as the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury object to the issue of new capital in the United Kingdom during the war, a scheme has been adopted whereby the ratable proportion of the new capital is reserved for subscription to the holders of share warrants resident in the United Kingdom at the price of £1-11-6 and the issue to them in the meantime of scrip certificates.

Utilities—particularly power companies—are indispensable to efficient war production.

The services they render are requisite to industry, commerce and public in war or peace.

SEES FOREIGN TRADE STABILIZING CREDIT

National Council Offers Suggestions to Government in Meeting War Problems.

REPORT GOES TO WILSON

Favors Production Stimulation to Provide Funds for Prosecution of the Conflict.

"Practically all the money in the allied portions of the world, and most of that held by neutrals, in time, can be made available for our war emergencies if our production constantly provides a proper basis for foreign trade." This is the view of the National Foreign Council, as set forth in a report on the principle underlying the co-ordination of price-fixing, taxation and the maintenance of foreign trade, which today will be presented to President Wilson, and later to Congress.

The report was prepared for the Council's Committee on Banking Facilities for Foreign Trade by Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the Board of the Irving National Bank. The report was prepared, it says, in the effort of the council "to offer a suggestion which may be helpful to the Government in the formation of its plans to meet, perhaps, the most serious and difficult problems it has ever encountered in relation with business interests, namely, the fixing of commodity prices and the taxing of business profits."

The resolution of the council submitting the report to the President bases its action upon the facts that the war has involved the country in huge expenditures, to meet which the Government has adopted the wise policy of greatly increased taxation; that the Government has been compelled to resort to the expedient of price-fixing in numerous cases; that effectiveness of American participation in the war demands the maintenance of production in practically all lines at the maximum capacity, and that the maintenance of foreign trade during the war is a most efficient means of preventing distrubance of credit, insuring funds with which to meet the needs of Government in taxation or loans; stabilizing conditions of industry and maintaining the economic structure of the nation.

For these reasons the council recommends to the President and Congress the co-ordination of its efforts at price-fixing and taxation upon principles that will stimulate production, insure the fullest maintenance of foreign trade, and so provide a steady source of funds for the vigorous prosecution of the war.

Fair Profit to Producer.

The report further declares that "the relation of price-fixing and taxation to the maintenance and development of foreign and domestic trade in war times is direct and of the greatest force." It proceeds then to a statement of the economic law that "whenever the Government requires the total possible production of any article, whether for war or peace, it must pay such price for that article as will return a fair profit to the producer; otherwise, and if that producer cannot obtain a fair return, or profit, upon his labor and investment, he will not labor or invest, and production necessarily is curtailed."

Pointing out the fact that in an ideal plan for price-fixing and profit-taxing high production and not low prices should be the controlling consideration, the report says:

"If the final determination of the war is to be measured to any considerable extent by the relative economic power of the belligerents—and, of course, it will be so measured—the existence of the things which money can buy will be of far greater importance than the possession of money itself."

That leads up to the statement that all the money in the allied and neutral world can be made available for our war emergencies by proper maintenance of foreign trade. For it is foreign trade, the report says, that "is the source from which the greater portion of our gold must come, and from which our national gold reserve will derive its greatest security. Foreign trade also provides the possibility of keeping the entire national energy at all times employed in profitable production by creating a foreign demand for products for which there would be no demand at home."

The "only really big thing in the world today," continues the report, "is to win the war. In winning the war, the big things, apart from obtaining the fighting men, are to produce and conserve. In such a situation we should not become so obsessed with the idea of the value of money as to be blind to the value of other things. The part which money plays is not of the greatest importance.

"It is easy to imagine a condition in which no amount of money would obtain the men and materials necessary in an emergency—it is hardly possible to imagine a condition in which the securing of the men and materials required would depend entirely upon the possession of money. There can be a class of economy which kills.

"The first thing is to win the war, because if we do not win it, it will not matter particularly what else happens to us, and we firmly believe that it is only by careful and faithful application of sound economic principles that we can carry through successfully the enormous burden laid upon us."

Must Proceed Safely.

The report points out that the Government, in exercising these new arbitrary powers, must proceed safely and scientifically, or else the greatest danger may follow. Another suggestion made by the council is that a further step be taken in the co-ordination of the Government's buying activities. In the program for spending $19,000,000,000 within twelve months, the many separate buying departments of the Government, now competing against each other for supplies of all kinds, in their operation, in the judgment of the council, are bound to create high prices to the Government, correspondingly high prices to the people, disturbance to the industries—particularly those not essential to war supplies—and, worse of all, to seriously curtail the purchasing power of every class of consumer. Relative to this, the report says:

"The next step therefore, at this time, is to tie together the numerous purchasing departments of the Government, under one control, fully clothed with authority, similar to that created in Great Britain and France out of their experience in the early years of the war. We feel that the realization of such a plan not only is possible, but near at hand. With the Administration's splendid record of constructive Congressional legislation during the last six months so vividly before us, it certainly is not too much to expect that the needs of this situation will be fully recognized and met upon the reconvening of Congress. Therefore, it is a duty upon business men actively to support any proposed measures which may be presented to properly work out this desired result."

In conclusion, the document holds that in the ways indicated, the burden of the solution of these entirely new and trying national problems will be borne, not alone by the Government, but also by the highly trained and widely experienced business judgment of the nation.

James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation is Chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council. Among its members now in Washington assisting the Government in war activities are E. N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board; Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, John D. Ryan, President of the Anaconda Copper Company, and Fairfax Harrison, of the Railway War Board.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Surplus Reserves Increase.

An increase of more than $4,000,000 in surplus reserves was reported Saturday in the Clearing House bank statement. This brought the excess reserves up to $113,383,000, the highest since Aug. 4, when that item stood at $168,735,000. For the week loans contracted by nearly $182,000,000, the same being due to the liquidation of Treasury certificates of indebtedness which matured on Thursday and were paid at the Federal Reserve Bank. The statement also showed a reduction of about $48,000,000 in demand and time deposits, and the withdrawal of $195,000,000 of Government funds from the Clearing House members.

Expansion in Rediscounts.

The weekly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York showed an increase of $147,000,000 in commercial paper discounted and acceptances purchased, the expansion in the case of the former being $128,000,000. Part of the increase represents, no doubt, advances made to member banks, not actual discounts of paper. The bank's holdings of United States Government bonds and notes were reduced by $130,000,000, to $28,000,000. Gold reserves of the institution fell off about $26,000,000 during the week, while member bank deposits increased $21,000,000, and Government deposits were enlarged by $27,000,000.

Reserve Notes Outstanding.

The Reserve Bank reports that approximately $378,000,000 of Federal Reserve notes are outstanding, the increase for the week being $28,000,000, which is considerably above the average of recent weeks. Against these notes there is $174,000,000 of gold and lawful money deposited with the Federal Reserve Agent and $234,763,000 of commercial paper. It is interesting to note that despite the expansion in note issue there was increase last week in the gold fund of the Reserve Agent, and that the percentage of gold against the notes is now down to about 46 per cent., the lowest yet reported, and comparing with 40 per cent. the legal requirement.

Increase in Odd Lot Buying.

Bankers and brokers are calling attention to the fact that one of the most encouraging features of the stock market situation in the last few weeks has been the steady purchasing of odd lots of stock by investors all over the country. Commenting upon the spontaneous buying of small lots of securities, as has been reported from the transfer offices of corporations, Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank, said Saturday: "It seems to me that the course of events and our national necessities make it inevitable that there be more money available for commercial enterprise and proportionately less for speculation. However, such purchasing as has been reported in odd lots of stock and good bonds on a cash basis constitutes real investment and should help to bring about a better understanding of both the present opportunities and the present problems of finance."

Another Demand for Cotton.

With the quoted price of 30.30 cents a pound for spot cotton on the New York market and 29.70 cents for December contracts, at the close of a week of rapidly advancing prices such as the market has not seen for months, there naturally were many efforts to explain the unprecedented demand for cotton in all forms. One explanation, which, at least, has the merits of novelty, offered by a jubilant trader on the long side, is that the Government needs all the finest quality cotton cloth it can get for airplane wings. The British are covering their airplane wings with linen, this student of conditions explained, and the Germans with nettle fiber for lack of anything better, but the United States was compelled, because of the impossibility of obtaining enough linen for its enormous new air fleet's wings, to try Sea Island cotton.

The Fabricated Ship Industry.

Recent statements that the first fabricated steel ship was to be launched at a Pacific port yesterday apparently refer to the fact that this is the first fabricated ship built under contracts awarded by the Emergency Fleet Corporation. As a matter of fact, although the general public first heard of it in connection with the Emergency Fleet Corporation's program, the fabricated ship dates further back. The first fabricated ship was launched on the Delaware some weeks ago, belonging to a number which were being built to private order, and which were taken over on the ways by the Government last Summer. Although commenced for private shipping interests, these ships are in no way different from those of the largest class of standardized fabricated ships which the Government has since ordered from another Delaware yard controlled by the same interests.

Confusion of Terms.

There seems to be considerable popular confusion as to the meaning of the words "standardized" and "fabricated" ships. It happens that all fabricated ships are standardized, but not all standardized ships are fabricated. A standardized ship is simply a ship built to standard plans. In this sense most battleships which are built in classes from identical plans, each ship of the class exactly like each other, might be called standardized. Long before the war many big American and British shipping companies had lines of freighters which were standardized, each ship of the line built to the same plans as all the others. The fabricated ship, however, is a ship which, instead of being built entirely in the yard and on the ways, each piece of metal bent and shaped and fitted on the spot, is merely assembled on the ways from parts separately made to pattern in steel mills many miles away. The fabricated ship is always standardized, because there would be no economy, but a distinct loss in time and expense, in adopting the fabrication method for a single ship, or for less than a wholesale order.

Liberty Loan and Other Information

In the past few months many cases have been reported where purchasers of Liberty Loan bonds when forced by circumstances to sell have been the victims of unscrupulous purchasers offering less than the market price.

Investigation has shown that a considerable proportion of recent liquidation in Liberty Loan bonds has been due to ignorance on the part of individuals among the 12,000,000 original buyers who have not realized that the best securities in the world are rated as good collateral for loans.

Following its usual policy, THE ODD LOT REVIEW is specializing in information on the Liberty Loan issues. You will find in this week's issue a variety of information on this subject given in compact and readable form.

If you own a Liberty Loan bond you will find $1 per year for a subscription to this publication a good investment. Every year thousands of new readers testify to the increasing army of Americans who value the platform of this publication and know that we live up to it.

OUR PLATFORM

The welfare of the small investor.
His right to the same investment opportunity as the large investor.
His right to a voice in corporation management.
His right to comprehensive and current information.
Fair play from his corporation—and for his corporation.

In connection with the popular investment trend at this time a symposium of opinion on the significance of current Odd Lot investment absorption is a feature of this week's issue which ought to be read thoroughly by large and small investors.

Convincing testimony of the value of the editorial service is found in the thousands of big investors, firms, banks and institutions who subscribe for The Odd Lot Review.

At a time when financial precedents, like all other historical precedents, are worth little in gauging the outlook for the future, the value of an able and independent viewpoint on events expressed in terse English without unnecessary technicalities has been doubly emphasized.

These bonds, in addition to being a direct and general obligation of the entire city, payable from taxes levied upon all of the taxable property, are by city ordinance secured by a first lien upon the net earnings of the wharf and terminal properties, which further ensures the prompt payment of principal and interest. This ordinance provides for the establishment and maintenance of a cumulative sinking fund sufficient to retire the loan at maturity.

STOCK OF OIL RUNS LOW.

Daily Consumption Increased in September 8,550 Barrels Over Average.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The average daily draft on the petroleum stocks of the country during the month of September was 44,550 barrels. The average daily draft for the first nine months of this year was about 36,000 barrels. The increased consumption during September was 8,550 barrels a day above the average for the nine month period.

At the end of September the stock of petroleum on hand was the lowest in several years, as a result of increased consumption. On Dec. 31, 1915, there were 185,899,792 barrels on hand, and on Oct. 1 last this had been reduced to 164,249,000 barrels. The status of the petroleum situation was disclosed in figures made public tonight by John D. Northrop of the United States Geological Survey. They show by months the quantity of crude petroleum marketed, consumed, and in stock in the United States since the beginning of 1916 as follows:

'MINUTE MEN' PLAN THEIR PART IN WAR

Building and Realty Interests Act to Help Uncle Sam Find Homes for Workers.

NEWARK BANKERS STIRRED

Housing for 30,000 Meadow Mill Workers in Nine Months—Material Men Alert.

Any building construction emergency that may arise in the vicinity of New York requiring high speed efficient co-operation of the building and material interests will be fully met if the plans proposed at a meeting of real estate, construction and building material "Minute Men" in the offices of Jerdine, Hill & Murdock last week are carried out, says The Dow Service Daily Building reports today.

Anticipating the action of the bankers and public spirited citizens of Newark, who on Thursday night appointed Uzal H. McCarter, President of the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, Chairman of a committee to work out a financial plan for the formation of a company or corporation to erect within the next nine months a group of 16-family apartment houses and at least 1,000 two-family and one-family homes in the Essex County seat and the probable action in the very near future of the great manufacturing interests of Long Island City, Queens, and Brooklyn toward similar results, H. H. Murdock, who was an active member of the General Committee recently named by Borough President Marks to study the building situation as affected by war conditions, called a preliminary conference to determine just how the builders, architects, realty men and building material interests of New York could help meet the increasingly insistent housing problem. Further action will be taken to-morrow.

Heavier demands upon building material and construction interests than have been imagined are expected to develop within the present building season. The point has been reached where the relation between accommodation of factory workers and the establishment of manufactories of war essentials is not only intimate but vital to the success of the war. The focusing of this problem has been brought about largely by the investigations made by Otto M. Eidlitz and other members of the National Housing Committee.

At the same time word comes out of Washington to the effect that certain commodities are to be classed as non-essential. Fuel and railroad facilities will be curtailed. Window glass has been officially designated as an essential. Jobbers' stocks are about sufficient to last two months in a normal market. At the outside, window glass stocks will spread over three months under a weak building market. Should a repetition of the Black Tom explosion take place or a similar window-smashing accident occur these stocks would be very seriously drained.

There are many other building materials in which the surplus stocks are barely sufficient to meet the current demand. Manufacturers last Spring and Summer hardly anticipated such a complete turn about in the prospective building market as is in process of development right now. The result is that there has been a general price stiffening and one of the provinces of the "Minute Men" will be to so co-operate with the Government's various departments as to anticipate any emergency call so as to insure adequate supplies to permit building operations to proceed with the greatest possible speed to an assured completion.

In the glass situation about 25 to 30 per cent. of last year's production will be manufactured under the Government's restriction. Instead of using coal, natural gas probably will be piped and pumped to sections where the natural supply has failed. But the same kind of sand that is used in the manufacture of window glass is also used in the manufacture of steel. Some of the labor used in the glass mills can also be used in the steel mills. The same is also true of labor in many other building material plants.

It has been estimated that homes must be provided in Newark for 30,000 workers, more than a third of them with families. Long Island City's quota of munition plant and food manufactory employes is constantly increasing, and the housing need is already imperative.

At the same time there is such a large volume of building operations that have been held up for many years, the probable wholesale construction of a number of public schools by the incoming administration, the probable release of many constructional public improvements through the same agency, that the short building material stocks in practically every department are inspiring the far-sighted to get into the building market at once, especially as much of the inflowing population to outlying districts during the next year will find permanent homes in New York's suburbs.

It is stated authoritatively that no building material will be positively or permanently shut out of this market. The worst that can happen is to have the supply curtailed at manufacturing centres and possibly intermittent traffic delays. Labor shortage will make this restricted supply acute for several years to come.

Current price movements are noticed in cuts in many metal departments. Single strength B quality first three bracket window glass has been advanced. Discounts formerly 86 and 85 per cent. are now 86 per cent. flat. Common Hudson brick is back to $7.75 and $8 for run of barge, but there is no disposition to push this market. There is no Winter reserve stacking under way, showing that the dealers and the manufacturers are alike indifferent to sales and are anticipating the strong market that is now sure to come within the next few months. If there is any change in the price of metal lath it will be upward.

All these indications point to a complete change-about in the building and realty situation, at least in the suburbs, within the next few months, and architects are already beginning to feel the quickening pulse of far-sighted investors.

FARMERS AND LABOR TO FORM PARTY HERE

Nonpartisan League, Now Active in Politics in the West, to be Launched Today.

PRESIDENT TELLS ITS AIMS

Meeting Will Precede Labor Food Conference to be Held at Cooper Union Tonight.

The Farmers' Non-Partisan League, which has taken a hand in politics in the Northwest, is to be launched in New York State at a meeting to be held in Cooper Union tonight. A. C. Townley, President of the organization, has arrived in the city and is at the Hotel Brostell, 3 East Twenty-seventh Street. He comes here at the invitation, it is said, of the Labor Food Conference, which represents several labor organizations and 500,000 wage earners and several up-State farmer organizations.

Those who are pushing the movement in New York believe that a non-partisan league in this State is going to bring about political changes, and will ultimately lead to a combination of the farmers in the country and organized labor in the cities that will gain control of the political destiny of the State. It was because they considered the starting of the movement so important that Mr. Townley was invited to come to New York.

The meeting in Cooper Union will be important in putting the plan before the public, but the really important gathering will be a conference between Mr. Townley and representatives of the farmers and of organized labor at the McAlpin Hotel in the afternoon. John J. Dillon, now uncertain whether he is Chief of the Bureau of Foods and Markets, or whether he has been deposed from the state service, will attend this conference. In establishing the league in this State, Mr. Dillon is to play no small part. He has the backing of the Labor Food Conference and the farmer organizations.

The Cooper Union meeting will be presided over by John Mitchell, Chairman of the State Food Commission. Mr. Mitchell said yesterday that it was a meeting to consider the food situation and had no political significance. It is not expected that politics will come up at Cooper Union, but it may. Carl Beck of the Labor Conference said that in a discussion of the food problem it would be hard to keep out the fact that the Food Administration had surrounded itself with advisers representing big business and that labor had only a small voice in arranging affairs that so vitally concerned it.

Organization Moving East.

"We are organizing the league east of the Big River now," said Mr. Townley. "Out in the West the success the farmers have had in obtaining the rights that were so long denied them is known. It is no more than just that the farmers, the men who produce the things essential to life, and the men and women who labor, the real backbone of our country, should combine for their own interest. It is a lesson they have learned from capital. In California we already have that sort of an alliance, and in Washington laborers and farmers have stood together for two years. In Minnesota the labor organizations are working out a program of what they want, and they will confer with the Non-Partisan League.

"There will be a meeting tomorrow afternoon between the farmers and labor, and at this meeting many things that are vitally interesting will be gone into."

Mr. Townley was asked whether at this meeting a formal political organization would be broached.

"I do not believe that any such organization will be formed," he replied. "It is possible that a loose organization will be effected that will be a step toward establishing means whereby the farmers and the wage earners can cooperate in working for their common good and for exchanging views."

Mr. Townley declared that the Non-Partisan League was not a political party in that it did not put a ticket into the field. "League men are only put up for office," he said, "when the men put up by the existing parties are not acceptable to either the league or the labor movement. When election time is approaching the league calls meetings in the precincts and these elect delegates to county conventions and the county conventions elect delegates to the State convention. The record of candidates is gone into carefully, though it is usually known beforehand, and the league agrees to indorse certain men for office. It makes no difference whether the man wanted is Democrat, Republican, or Socinlist. If he is a man who will stand by labor and the producers rather than give his time to guarding special privilege, he is indorsed. This done the members of his party in the league go out and vote for him at the primary. Where the league is strong that man is usually elected. The league and organized labor cooperate and there are meetings at which representatives of both discuss candidates and agree upon a program. It has been found that the desires of labor run along the same lines as do those of the league."

Hopes to Control State.

"That is a pretty strong combination," a reporter suggested.

"With such a combination," said Mr. Townley, "we will control the State."

John Mitchell, a labor man, had been asked to preside, Mr. Townley said, because the meeting is held by the Labor Food Conference which wants to help the Food Administration.

"I have only just arrived in New York, and the first thing that confronts us is a story that the Nonpartisan League is disloyal," Mr. Townley said. "I want to nail that lie right now. The league is loyal and it is patriotic. When the league won in North Dakota and in other States those opposed to it started that story. It was just what was to be expected.

"In the first Liberty Bond campaign North Dakota did not fill her quota. That was not because of disloyalty. It was because the issue came at a time when the farmers had spent all their money for seed and preparing for the big crop which the Government asked for. The second issue was oversubscribed, I think, by 7 per cent. The Nonpartisan League is a combination to help win the war and make no mistake about that. North Dakota has a record for enlistment that should be an answer to the charge of those who fear us and so cry disloyalty."

Asked as to the immediate political future in New York State, Mr. Townley said.

"Ultimately we may put up a ticket in this State, but it will not be tomorrow or the next day."

Replying to a question why the league had been formed, Mr. Townley told of the attempt of the farmers of North Dakota to get legislation they wanted. The climax came, he said, when 200 farmers gathered at Bismark to back up their request for grain elevators and were told by members of the Legislature to "go home and slop the pigs."

Legislative Reforms.

"That was in 1915," Mr. Townley added. "Half of the Senate is elected each two years. When the first half came up for election the league elected eighteen of the twenty-five candidates it indorsed. Twenty-four more are to be voted for in the near future. Already the league has obtained much beneficial legislation. Through its efforts taxes on farm improvements have been reduced, rural schools have been standardized, a 15 per cent. inheritance tax has been levied on large fortunes, railroads have been compelled to furnish sites for elevators and warehouses on their rights of way, the railroads must furnish cars to all shippers alike and furnish side tracks at coal mines, a Dairy Commission has been created, and by combining and changing county offices great saving has been brought about. There still remain many important items on its legislative program that it is expected will be put through when its influence in the Legislature is stronger."

The Cooper Union meeting, billed as a Nonpartisan Food Conference, will be opened by J. C. Hilsdorf, Chairman of the Labor Food Conference. Congressman John Baer of North Dakota, will give a chalk talk, and John J. Dillon and Mr. Townley will speak.

Mrs. Julian Heath, President of the Housewives League, has issued a call to league members to attend the meeting.

ESTIMATES WORLD'S CROPS.

Rome Institute Reports Bumper Harvest of Some Staples.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Bumper world crops of corn, oats, potatoes, rice, sugar beets and tobacco for this year are shown by estimates compiled by the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, made public today by the Department of Agriculture. Wheat, rye, barley and flaxseed, however, have fallen below the five-year average of production from 1911 to 1915.

The production of wheat in seventeen countries, not including the Central Powers, will be 1,868,000,000 bushels, 85.6 per cent. of the five-year average. Corn raised will amount to 3,312,000,000 bushels, which is 14.1 per cent. greater than the average production for the last five years. Other crops are estimated as follows:

Rye, 147,000,000 bushels; 92.2 per cent.
Barley, 587,000,000 bushels; 96 per cent.
Oats, 2,206,000 bushels; 114.9 per cent.
Rice, 70,000,000 bushels; 115.5 per cent.
Flaxseed, 38,000,000 bushels; 69.8 per cent.
Potatoes, 719,000,000 bushels; 112.4 per cent.
Sugar beets, 19,000,000 short tons; 106.6 per cent.
Tobacco, 1,186,000,000 pounds; 120.5 per cent.

SHOWS HOW TO DRY FOOD.

Dehydrating Plant, Planned by Mrs. Harriman, Now in Operation.

In the East Gallery of the Grand Central Terminal a large community dehydrating plant with a capacity of 1,000 pounds a day, is in operation. A demonstration of it was made by Mrs. Oliver Harriman in the presence of more than one hundred invited guests.

"We need have no fear that our soldiers will want for food in an emergency," said Mrs. Harriman, who has worked since last Spring in developing food conservation. With the co-operation of Lucius P. Brown, of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs of the Health Department, she has been investigating the possibilities of food drying. Clarence V. Ekroth, chemist, has been directing the work.

To provide a suitable agency through which complete co-operation could be extended Mrs. Harriman organized and equipped the Mrs. Oliver Harriman Food Research Laboratory. Practical investigations have resulted in the construction of the plant which was exhibited yesterday. This is soon to be duplicated and set up at several centrally located cities throughout the country.

Dehydrated pears, potatoes, carrots, beets, turnips, peaches, tomatoes and others not only in their dehydrated state, but actually in the process of re-hydration, or re-constitution, which terms are used to describe the process of taking up the water needed to bring them back to their natural condition, were exhibited. Also dehydrated tomatoes, compressed in cubical blocks. Cabbage, spinach and onions, all compressed in cubes, occupying less than one-tenth of the bulk and weight of fresh tomatoes, also were shown.

WATCH PRICE OF TURKEYS.

Administrator Williams Asks for Investigation All Over City.

State, city, and national Food Administrators are much interested in the report circulated since the Joint Commission fixed the Thanksgiving prices for cold storage turkeys that many retailers, doubting the authority of these agencies to punish violation of regulations, will sell turkeys and other articles for what they desire. City Food Administrator Arthur Williams sent a telegram to the Food Administration leaders in each Assembly District in the city asking them to conduct an investigation through the workers in the election district and to report any retailers violating the price-fixing regulation to him at once. Mr. Williams also requests complaints of restaurants which do not observe Tuesdays as meatless days and Wednesdays as wheatless.

At the conference of the Consumers' Co-operative Society of the Eastern States, held in the Public Library, 228 East Twenty-third Street, J. W. Sullivan, representing the American Federation of Labor, read a resolution adopted at the Buffalo Convention, indorsing the co-operative store plan. Steps were taken to interest other trade unions in the plan by which the consumers establish stores and so do away with the middleman profit. M. Fainberg, representing the Russian co-operative movement, said there were 27,000 co-operative stores in Russia. These officers were elected: Dr. James P. Warbasse, President; Peter Hamilton, Treasurer; Scott H. Perky, Secretary; Cheves West Perky, Associate Secretary, and Katharine de Selding, Assistant Secretary.

Annual Festivities Abandoned for the Period of the War.

In view of the serious problems confronting the country, incidental to the world war, Representative Thomas F. Smith, President of Amen Corner, announces that the Directors have decided to postpone indefinitely the annual festivities and dinner planned by the Corner for Dec. 15. They feel that it would be contrary to the spirit of the times to have a function this year of the joyful character which Amen dinners have had for the last seventeen years. Consequently no further Corner festivities will be held while the country is engaged in the present conflict. The Amen Corner will celebrate in due and intelligent form the coming of peace after the United States has done its full and victorious share in extending and preserving human freedom throughout the world.

Before reaching the decision to postpone the dinner all the tickets had been subscribed for. Checks will be returned and the subscribers will be preferred in the opportunity to attend the Amen Corner Peace Jubilation Dinner.

Send Congratulations to London to Celebrate Britain's Promise.

The Provisional Zionist Committee yesterday sent a cable message of greeting and congratulation to the Zionist mass meeting which was held in London last night to celebrate the promise by the British Government to support the establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine. Either David Lloyd George or some member of his War Cabinet was to speak at the meeting, besides Lord Walter Lionel Rothschild, Dr. Chaim Weitzman, President of the British Zionist Federation, and the Rev. Dr. Moses Gaster. The message from the American committee read as follows:

The hearts of millions of our people are filled with joy. The declaration of the British Government approving the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people is epochal. The wise and high-minded declaration of the British Government that His Majesty's Government will use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of the Zionist aims is in consonance with the traditional policy of the British nation respecting the Jews, and the liberation and protection of small nationalities which our countries have determined shall prevail throughout the world. The declaration is the beginning of the fulfillment of the centuries old aspiration of Israel to re-establish the Jewish homeland. We feel justified in assuring you that the united Jewry of America will give the fullest measure of support to the practical working out of the plans that will carry the declaration to complete fulfillment.

MRS. DE SAULLES TELLS STORY OF HUSBAND'S NEGLECT

Relates on the Stand the Humiliations She Endured Before the Murder.

DOESN'T RECALL SHOOTING

Letters to Her Child's Nurse Describe Her Yearning for Happiness.

WANTED ONLY A QUIET HOME

Justice Waves Lawyer Aside and Tells Accused to Tell Her Story in Her Own Way.

Before an intensely sympathetic audience, which filled the courtroom of Justice Manning at Mineola, Mrs. Blanca De Saulles yesterday told her story of the events leading up to her killing her divorced husband, John Longer De Saulles, Yale athlete and politician, who died after being shot five times by her at his home, The Box, in Westbury, on Aug. 3 of this year.

Mrs. De Saulles testified that on the day of the murder, when she went to Westbury for her boy, De Saulles said to her: "You cannot have him now or ever." She said she immediately suffered a "dreadful pain" in her head and recalled nothing more until she arrived at the Mineola Jail.

Spectators who had swept court attendants off their feet and rushed into the courtroom until Justice Manning came out of his chambers to check them listened in profound quiet in order to catch every word, while the young woman in a low voice replied to the questions of her lawyers.

Her answers were reticent. She said as few words as possible, and occasionally avoided the questions of her lawyer when they meant to bring out her comment on the kind of a man her former husband was. As a rule, when she was asked to proceed with her narrative herself, she came to a stop after a few sentences, and could not go on until her lawyer put questions to her.

The eyes of the entire courtroom were on the young woman when court was called. Right behind her was her mother, Mme. Errazuriz-Vergara, of Chile, a middle-aged woman of handsome and distinguished appearance, who made it almost as much a point as does her daughter not to allow the curious public to guess, from any expression of the face, what is passing through her mind. By her were her son, William, and her daughter, Amalia. Around them were Castro Ruiz, the Chilean Consul General at this port, and a number of Chilean and American friends. Across the courtroom to the left of Mrs. De Saulles as she sat on the witness stand sat Charles A. H. De Saulles, a brother of the dead man; his lawyer, Almuth C. Vandiver; Mrs. Caroline Degener, and other sisters and relatives of the slain man, who with compressed lips and incredulous expressions discussed statements which were drawn from Mrs. De Saulles about her husband. The father and mother of the dead man were not in court. The spectators' seats were filled with a crowd composed largely of women, many of them richly dressed, who had come to the trial in the thirty automobiles which lined the curb outside of the courtroom.

Mrs. De Saulles Takes the Stand.

As soon as court was called to order Henry A. Uterhart, the defendant's chief counsel, who is 6 feet 4 inches tall, rose and made a bow to his client without speaking. She stood up and walked around the aisle in the rear of the jury box and reappeared to the audience as she took the witness seat. She was simply dressed in a light brown waist, with a skirt and a large collar of a darker brown. She is below middle height and very slight of build. On the witness chair her feet seemed scarcely to touch the floor, and she looked less than her 23 years.

There was a slight touch of color in her cheeks, evidently put there by excitement. By contrast with her perfect repose and placidity while the prosecution had for a week been trying to prove her a cold-blooded murderess, she was animated and even restless when she first took the stand yesterday. She looked from her lawyer to the Judge and then to the jury, and then gave a glance at the court room, as if she were making some mental measurements regarding the painful ordeal which was before her.

After the first few questions she seemed, however, to answer her lawyer almost mechanically and to use monosyllables when she thought they might answer the purpose. She ceased to respond automatically when Justice Manning put questions to her, which he did frequently, in an encouraging tone, as he became paternal and profoundly sympathetic. She would look at him with a serious expression and answer more freely, as if she had been put at her ease by the manner of the court toward her.

Curiously enough, her smiles, which came now and then throughout the day, although they appeared frank and winning, seemed to reveal more of her suffering that did her serious expression. When something struck her as funny she evidently released for an instant the almost professional facial control which she usually preserved, and allowed her whole mind to be pictured in her face.

Smiles at Her Photograph.

She smiled first when her lawyer caused to be handed to her a photograph taken the day before she was married, showing her at 17 years old in robust health and at the height of her beauty, which has by no means left her in spite of her thinness and pallor. She seemed to think it funny when her lawyer asked her if she could name who it was.

Later she smiled again merrily when her lawyer asked her what kind of a car it was in which she had met the accident which fractured her skull the second time. Her lawyer referred to some special fittings in the car which caused the accident, but she thought he meant to ask the make of the car. When she named the make the audience smiled with her.

But, in spite of the engaging quality

8 German Ships Allotted to Philippine Government

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The United States Shipping Board has allotted to the Philippine Government eight former German ships which were interned in Philippine ports when the war began. They will be used to help maintain Philippine trade during the war.

There were twenty-six German and Austrian vessels interned in Philippine waters when the war began, and, except these eight, all the others, each larger than 2,000 tons, were brought to the United States. The only former German ship larger than 2,000 tons still in the Far East is the former North German Lloyd liner Princess Alice, which is now being overhauled at Olongapo.

ARMY GETS ORDERS TO GUARD PIERS

Will Place Sentries First Over Chelsea and Southern Pacific Properties.

ZONES ARE MARKED OUT

From 72d St., North River, to 39th St., East River, Are Included in Prohibited Areas.

Brig. Gen. Eli Hoyle, commanding the Eastern Department of the Army, with headquarters on Governors Island, it is expected, will issue orders within the next few days placing under military guard those parts of the waterfront from which supplies and troops are sent abroad. The first orders which were sent to New York yesterday by Secretary of War Baker instructed the department commander to organize military guards for service in front of the great Chelsea Piers, south of Twenty-third Street, and the Southern Pacific Piers in the Christopher Street district. These will be the first of the Manhattan waterfront properties to go under Federal guard. It is also expected that a number of the Brooklyn piers from which war supplies are sent will go under army guard in the next few days.

The department headquarters on Governors Island, from which the army patrol will be directed, was one of the busiest places in New York yesterday. To enforce the President's regulations along the New York, Brooklyn, and New Jersey waterfronts, it is said, from 4,000 to 5,000 soldiers will be required, and until a proposed Federal police force, which will have semi-military status, can be organized, equipped, and trained, the harbor guard, it is expected, will be made up almost exclusively of soldiers of the regular army.

General Hoyle said last night that for the present at least he would have no statement to make as to the waterfront situation. The matter, he said, was in the hands of the War Department, and the Eastern Department would act as the orders were received from Secretary Baker. Brig. Gen. Jesse Carter of the Bureau of Militia Affairs of the War Department, who on Sunday conferred with General Hoyle, Federal officials here, and representatives of the city government, carried back to Washington a complete report on conditions on the waterfront. He decided what piers and other harbor properties constituted "vital points," which for that reason should be the first to be placed under military guard.

The United States District Attorneys and Marshals in New York and Brooklyn busied themselves yesterday in issuing final orders to enemy aliens to vacate barred zones, and in preparing to extend the fullest co-operation to the army and the police in the strict enforcement of the new regulations.

Marshal McCarthy, who received his final instructions from Attorney General Gregory on Sunday night, had a large force of Deputy Marshals at work yesterday notifying Germans who have offices or homes in barred zones that they must immediately prepare to vacate their present quarters. In the case of employes the orders were to move out of the zone immediately, and in the case of the heads of firms and other employers to get out within a reasonable time. The time limit set by the Marshal for Germans to vacate the barred zones is 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, except in the cases of certain heads of firms. It is expected that 90 per cent. of the Germans affected by the new regulations will be out of the zone by that time, and that the others will have other places of business and homes by Saturday morning at the latest.

Marshal McCarthy will begin this morning the posting of the barred zones. Huge placards defining the zones have been printed, the warning notices being in English and in German. These placards will be placed on all buildings within the prohibited zones, at the entrance to all piers, and at the 100-yard limit of all crosstown streets leading to barred portions of the New York waterfront. These placards will read as follows:

NOTICE TO ENEMY ALIENS.

Enemy aliens must not under any circumstances pass beyond this line (an arrow will indicate the prohibited direction). Enemy aliens will be immediately arrested if they violate this rule. It is the duty of all good citizens to notify this office of any violation of the foregoing rule.

THOMAS D. McCARTHY,
United States Marshal,
Southern District of New York.

Boundaries of Zones.

Marshal McCarthy made public last night the boundaries of the new waterfront zones which no enemy alien will be permitted to enter. The main Manhattan zone begins at Seventy-second Street on the North River and extends to the Battery and around the Battery and north on the East River to Thirty-ninth Street. It had been reported that the North River zone would end at Forty-fourth Street and the East River zone at Twenty-fourth Street. In addition smaller zone on the North River are created, the centres of which are

RADICAL LAWS PROPOSED TO LET RAILROADS POOL

Federal Incorporation by Congress to Escape State Interference Demanded.

REVENUE IN COMMON FUND

Bills to Abolish Private Routing and Create Traffic Controller Also Contemplated.

MANAGERS DISCUSS REFORM

Committee of Seven Appointed to Carry Out Plans for Pooling Equipment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Railroad operating Vice Presidents representing the Eastern lines, meeting today to work out a pooling system to relieve the railroads of congestion, found themselves confronted by many obstacles, legal and physical, to the quick carrying out of the plans outlined by the Railroads' War Board Saturday. It is recognized that some of these, such as the possible pooling of revenues, will require legislation. Other features of the proposed revolution of the railroad system already have encountered opposition from State commissions.

As the conference proceeded it became evident that if anything approaching permanent reform was to be accomplished the hand of the Federal Government would be required to force compliance of State Railroad Commissions with the radical changes proposed. Some of the officials present declared that the proper step in this pressing emergency was Federal incorporation of the railroads without delay by Congress, which will reassemble on Dec. 8.

The problems, it was seen, must be solved by the railroad Presidents in co-operation with the Government. So, after considering the immediate thing before them, a resolution directing that all available facilities of all railroads east of Chicago be pooled to furnish the maximum freight movement, the Vice Presidents created a committee of seven to be in full charge of the operation of the railway pool; and then adjourned.

A. W. Thompson, Vice President of the Baltimore & Ohio, was made Chairman of the committee. The other members are C. R. Gray, President of the Western Maryland; A. T. Dice, President of the Philadelphia & Reading; P. E. Crowley, Vice President of the New York Central; Elisha Lee, acting Vice President of the Pennsylvania Lines East; G. L. Peck, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Lines West, and A. J. Stone, Vice President of the Erie.

This committee will establish headquarters in Pittsburgh and will sit continuously until the traffic problem produced by abnormal war business in eastern territory has been solved. The next meeting will be held Wednesday in Pittsburgh and will be attended by some of the leading railroad chiefs.

Pressing Problems.

Matters that must be settled before the problem can be clarified and anything like adequate railroad conditions established, as discussed by the officials today, were these:

There must be a Controller of Government Traffic.

Private routing must be abolished.

Laws must be amended permitting pooling of revenues and abolishing of private routing.

State railroad commissions must be made subservient to Federal laws by the possible Federal incorporation of carriers.

In the greatest emergency the railroads have faced in their history, with the Government requiring better facilities than ever before, the railroads are incessantly annoyed and hindered in making needed changes because radical measures taken and others suggested in the revolutionary program conflict with State laws, as they do with national laws. The Federal authorities have recognized in most instances that statutes which prohibit carriers from doing certain things in normal times must be set aside during the war period.

The railroads, however, have not been aided so generously by the State commissions. It was pointed out that the State commissions had it in their power to nullify anything that might be attempted in a sweeping and effective way by the railroads.

In order to impress the necessity upon the State commissions of co-operation at this time Charles E. Elimquist, Chairman of the Association of State Railroad Commissions, was before the operating Vice Presidents today and was informed of the situation. He was requested to use his good offices to arrange to have the State commissions agree to uphold any remedies approved by the Federal authorities for the period of the war. That his efforts might meet with success unless President Wilson got behind the appeal was feared by some of the railroad men.

Confusion of Preferred Freight.

As to the necessity for a controller of Government traffic it was pointed out by the traffic managers that much of the trouble experienced by the carriers originated in the failure of the Government to indicate priority freight. Two-thirds of the freight is now carried for the Government in Eastern territory, and nearly all of this is marked with "preference tags." All Government departments use these tags, with the result that the railroads are not able to determine what should have preference, and confusion and congestion exist. That there should be a Government controller who would have charge of all the freight for the Government and co-operate with the Priority Committee of the War Industries Board was suggested.

Congestion cannot be relieved in any appreciable degree, these railroad experts said, unless the law permitting shippers to determine the routing is amended or ignored. As the present law operates, a shipper at any point may designate the road over which his freight shall be routed. This work adds to the congestion, as most shippers select one or two roads which lead directly from the West and the seaboard. These

See German Plotters in Institute of Agriculture

ROME, Nov. 26.—The Italian Government has recently taken under special consideration the International Institute of Agriculture in the belief that in a measure it is being used as an agency for the Central Empires. The Government has been discussing the most appropriate measures to end any such abuse, but has not yet determined whether to suspend the work of the institute until after the war or place it under the management of a royal commission. Rome is the headquarters of this organization.

The undertaking is somewhat difficult, as the institute has an international character, having been founded by the King in June, 1905, with the participation of fifty-five countries. When Italy entered the war the representatives of the enemy countries left Rome, but the institute continued its work, with the allied and neutral delegates, including David Lubin of California in attendance.

Mr. Lubin was the originator of the idea of the organization, and has been a strong supporter of the Allies in the war from the beginning, and most sympathetic toward Italy, interesting himself in all the plans for her welfare. The institute is presided over by Marquis Capelli, one of the Vice Presidents of the Chamber of Deputies, who has been charged with having German leanings.

SENATORS WANT WAR ON AUSTRIA

Lewis, Democratic Whip, and Stone, Foreign Relations Chairman, Favor It.

FORMAL ACTION EXPECTED

Illinois Senator Would Annul Citizenship of Lukewarm Aliens and Court-Martial Plotters.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Democratic whip of the Senate, and Senator Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, made it known todsy on their return to Washington for the coming session of Congress that they favored a declaration of war upon Germany's allies, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey.

Senator Lewis spoke of sentiment in the Middle West as favoring a declaration of war so as to make the issue clear-cut between the United States and the Central Powers.

"At the same time," said the Senator, "in declaring war upon Austria I have no doubt that a distinction will be made between the Austrians and the Hungarians and Bohemians. The Hungarians and the Bohemians are anxious, and have for a long time been anxious, to establish democratic forms of government. Also we must distinguish between the Austrians and the Poles.

"I do not think that we can in any way be considered as favoring any plans which Italy may have for taking territory from Austria. The President and the Congress have made it clear that the United States is not in this war for any territorial aggrandizement or to aid any other nation to take territory.

For Drastic War Measure.

Senator Lewis stated further that he intended to urge two drastic war measures—one to deprive naturalized citizens of their citizenship if they failed to support the Government in its war crisis and the other to put the prosecution of persons who destroy food, blow up bridges, place bombs to destroy life or property and commit acts of sabotage, in the hands of the military, instead of the civil courts. On these points he says:

"It is high time that some steps be taken whereby it will be possible for the United States to take away from naturalized citizens the rights and privileges of United States citizenship and the protection it gives from those who will not support the Government. If they will not support the Government, will not fight for it when necessary, then I say take away their citizenship and send them back to the land to which their sympathies turn.

"In the case of American citizens who are born here and in whom citizenship is inherent, and who refuse to support the Government, a law should be passed which would take away from them suffrage, the right to hold office, and other similar privileges which they now have.

"Any persons who destroy food intended for the army, place bombs, commit sabotage, or destroy bridges, should not be given the benefis of civil prosecution, with the endless appeals and delays attendant thereon. They should be handed over to military courts-martial. After a few of them have been hanged or shot we should cease to have so much trouble with these outrages as we now have."

Senator Stone's statement in favor of a declaration of war against Germany's allies has special significance, because he was one of the "little group of willful men" who in March, at the close of the Sixty-fifth Congress, defeated the President's bill to authorize the arming of merchant vessels. Many members of the Foreign Relations Committee are in favor of war on Germany's allies, and the support of the Chairman seems to insure that any recommendation of the President that action be taken will be reported favorably.

In his statement Senator Stone said:

"There should be an understanding, of course, between the two branches of the Government before any action is taken. But we are, in fact, now at war with Germany's allies. The situation is anomalous, it would, in my opinion, simplify matters greatly if we should informally declare war against Germany's allies. It seems to me exceed-

Michael, Brother of ex-Czar, Is Arrested in Petrograd

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 27.—Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of the former Emperor, according to a Petrograd dispatch to The Times, has been arrested and imprisoned in Smolny Institute, the headquarters of the Bolsheviki.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 26.—If Russia enters into separate peace negotiations the Ministers of the allied powers at Petrograd will demand their passports, according to a dispatch from Haparanda.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 27.—The Times's Petrograd correspondent says he has learned from an authentic source that there was a meeting of the foreign Ambassadors at the American Embassy Friday night, at which it was decided to ignore the note of Leon Trotsky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, demanding an armistice. It was decided, the correspondent adds, to treat the note as if it had not been received.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Word from Copenhagen that the allied Ambassadors at Petrograd had decided to demand passports from that country if Russia entered into separate peace negotiations with Germany was interpreted here tonight as meaning that the Ambassadors would regard any such action on the part of Russia as tantamount to a declaration of war against their own countries. Russia, it was pointed out, could not be regarded as neutral if she entered into peace with Germany. If not neutral and not an ally, it was argued, she must be ranked as an enemy.

It was pointed out that the allied countries have not entered into any negotiations with the Bolsheviki and that their Ambassadors have borne no active relations to Russian affairs since the revolution that swept the Bolsheviki into power.

PETROGRAD, Saturday, Nov. 24.—A congress of the Second Army, with one dissenting vote, has passed a resolution approving all the measures promulgated by the Council of National Commissioners, including the decree for an immediate armistice and peace and favoring the government of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates.

The resolution appeals to all soldiers not to support Premier Kerensky and the Provisional Government Generals, "against the people." The most striking passage in the resolution follows:

"The Second Army, with arms in its hands, will defend the authority of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and the National Committee. At the first order of the Military Revolutionary Committee of the Second Army, which is clothed with full power, we will advance as one man against counter-revolutionists in the rear, as well as at the front.

"On our part we are taking all measures for the removal of counter-revolutionary elements from the commanding personnel of the army, for the immediate democratization of the army and in particular for the transfer of the higher authority in the army to elective bodies."

Rear Admiral Verdervski, in announcing his resignation as Minister of Marine, gives as his reason lack of sympathy with the course of the Government of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates relative to an armistice. He, however, exhorts his subordinates to continue to carry on the work of the department.

Report Soldiers Dying of Hunger.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A dispatch to Reuter's Limited from Petrograd dated Nov. 21 says:

"The commanders at the front continue to send in most ominous dispatches concerning the exhaustion of supplies, and reports of forthcoming hungry hordes of soldiers invading the centres of population."

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Copenhagen gives similar reports. It says advices received from Russia describe the situation as more desperate than ever and assert that the coun-

Bolsheviki Demand All Corporate Property; Abolish Class Distinctions and Privileges

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The Maximalist Commissioners have proclaimed the abolition of class titles, distinctions, and privileges. All persons henceforth are "citizens of the Russian Republic." The corporate property of nobles, merchants, and burgesses, according to the proclamation, must be handed over to the State.

The Peasant Congress of the Tomsk Government (West Siberia) has sent a message to the All-Russian Conference of the Peasant Council at Petrograd expressing disapproval of Premier Lenine's land decree. The congress declares that supervision of land affairs must be left in the hands of the Peasant Congress until the Constituent Assembly meets.

The Maximalist Commissioners, who are identical with the Bolsheviki—the men who want more—have put into specific form certain phases of their program, which, in a word, is to make all men and women equal, not only before the law but in their social, educational, and industrial environment. The program not only includes the abolition of all class and ownership distinction, as did that of the French Revolution, but at the death of each "citizen" and "citizeness" his or her property, with certain reservation for the bringing up of their offspring, is to be absorbed by the State and again divided among those who need it.

ITALIANS CRUSH ATTACKS IN NORTH

Repulse Massed Assaults on Positions Between the Brenta and Piave.

ALLIES ARE COMING UP

Heavy Anglo-French Reinforcements Within Hearing of the Guns on the Battle Front.

ROME, Nov. 26.—Strong Austro-German attacks on the northern mountain front, between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, were repulsed yesterday, it is announced officially.

The War Office statement follows:

Yesterday enemy masses, supported by heavy artillery, again attempted to attack our positions between the Brenta and Piave Rivers. On our left wing the enemy's efforts were directed against the Monte Pertica area. They were crushed promptly, and a deadly and well-executed counterattack on our part was made in answer to every fresh attempt by the enemy. At Tasson the Monte Rosa battalion of Alpini annihilated its assailants.

At our centre, where the enemy's pressure was strongest, the Fifty-sixth Division lived up to its enviable reputation. Enemy columns which with stubborn fury attacked from the northwest and north in the direction of Monte Casonet, Col dell'Orso, Monte San Larolo, and Monte Spinoncia, were mowed down by our fire, repeatedly met by furious counter-attacks and definitely repulsed, leaving more than 200 prisoners in our hands.

On our right the enemy attack started from the eastern slopes of Monte Monfenera. The assaulting waves were first checked by our artillery fire and afterward counter-attacked several times and repulsed by our gallant Alpini. A few score of prisoners were taken.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (via London.)—Only local engagements on the Italian front are reported in today's afternoon statement from Army Headquarters. The Germans are said to have achieved successes in these operations.

The text of the afternoon announcement follows:

In local mountain fighting we achieved successes and maintained them against Italian counterattacks.

Anglo-French Forces Near the Front.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 25, (Delayed)—(Associated Press.)—Solid ranks of Franco-British infantry, with artillery and supply trains, were seen by The Associated Press correspondent today within sound of the battle on the Italian northern line. They had been on an eight-day march.

The correspondent was on a tour of the northern fighting front, where the great battle is continuing with unexampled violence. Major General di Giorgio was found commanding the extreme left of the Fourth Army at the point where the fighting was heaviest.

Throughout yesterday and today the battle in the mountains has developed in a steady succession of heavy attacks and counterattacks, with occasional brief intervals for reforming the lines and reorganizing new positions. Twelve different enemy assaults had been made within a few hours preceding the correspondent's visit to headquarters on the field, but the Italian lines had not yielded a foot of ground, and General di Giorgio, while grave because of the terrific struggle his men were making against tremendous odds, was calm and confident that the defensive line would hold until reinforcements were swung into the fighting line.

Staff officers from headquarters were taking the trip along the line, and the route lay straight north into the fighting zone. Soon there were evidences of a bitter struggle just ahead, for along the route long lines of Italian infantry, decimated in the last few days, were reforming to return to the fight. They showed the fearful strain they had been

FRENCH DECORATE 15 OF OUR TROOPS

War Crosses Conferred on Men Who Met German Trench Raid on Nov. 2.

TOLD NOT TO WEAR MEDALS

Recipients Must Wait Until Congress Authorizes Them to Accept Honors.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 26, (Associated Press.)—The French War Cross has been conferred on the fifteen American officers and men who were cited with their company by the French General commanding the sector in which the Americans were stationed at the time of the first German raid on the night of Nov. 2-3.

The men were decorated today, and were informed that they must keep the medals in their possession, but must not wear them until Congress gives its authorization. The ceremony was an impressive one. An American Major General presented the decorations and citations, giving the regimental Colonel those for the men who were killed. They will be sent to their next of kin.

The French General, in referring to the action of this American company, said:

"On the night of Nov. 2-3 this company, which was in the line for the first time, met an extremely violent bombardment, despite which it seized arms and offered such stubborn resistance that the enemy, though numerically superior, was obliged to retire."

The General specially cited in the order of the day Corporal James D. Gresham and Privates Merle D. Hay and Thomas F. Enright, "who died bravely in hand-to-hand fighting with the enemy, who had penetrated the first line."

The others cited were Lieutenant William H. McLaughlin, Lieutenant R. O. Patterson, Lieutenant E. F. Erickson, Sergeant John Arrowwood, Corporals David M. Knowles and Homer Givens, and Privates Charles Massa, William B. Thomas, George Hurd, Boyce Wade, Robert Winkler, and John J. Jarvis.

A recent offer by the British Admiralty to decorate certain officers and men of two American destroyers for their services in combating German submarines was declined, according to the announcement of Secretary Daniels, because the laws of this country prevent soldiers and sailors from receiving decorations from foreign Governments.

PUT YEAR'S WAR COST AT TWELVE BILLIONS

Estimate for Period Ending June 30 Next Is Exclusive of Loans to Allies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—It is costing the Government, according to the latest estimates $33,740,000 a day, or $12,316,000,000 a year to carry on its business and meet the ordinary disbursements, including war expenditures and interest on bonds and Treasury certificates of indebtedness already authorized. These are the estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918:

The estimates from all the executive departments of the Government for the next fiscal year, which will begin July 1, 1918, aggregate $12,701,000,000, or a daily expenditure of $34,797,000.

The estimates, which Secretary McAdoo will present to Congress in the annual budget next Monday, when Congress assembles, are exclusive of all amounts to be lent to the Allies, and represent the actual cost of running the Government, normal and war activities included. A comparison of these amounts with the normal expenditures prior to the election of President Wilson in 1912 is marked. The grand total of appropriations for the fiscal year 1912 was $1,040,000,000. We are now spending in a month what we then spent in a year.

The estimates for the present fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, assume interest on bonds of the first and second Liberty Loan issues and for treasury certificates above whatever amount we may advance to the Allies, on which, of course, they are expected to pay the same interest that the United States pays on its bonds sold to obtain the funds to advance to Great Britain, France, Russia, Belgium, Italy, Serbia, and other allies that may participate in our advances of money.

There are now authorized $9,500,000,000 of bonds and treasury certificates. The interest account is running on something over one-half of this aggregate and will be increased by a third issue within the present fiscal year. The estimates include no amount to anticipate payment of interest on the present worth of war savings cedtificates to the amount of $2,000,000,000 yet to be issued. These will not become due until 1923. They will be taken care of either by the creation of a sinking fund or be refunded in new war bonds.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 26—After heavy counterattacks, following the fighting around Bourlon Wood, the enemy succeeded in entering Bourlon Village again yesterday morning, and seems to hold his ground there up to the present hour.

This morning the battle was renewed and our troops are heavily engaged, not only on the outskirts of Bourlon Village, but also in the neighborhood of Fontaine Notre Dame, east of the forest, which, as I have previously told, was partially destroyed by fire after having changed hands more than once.

The enemy has brought up strong reinforcements and is now well provided with artillery, which has been sent up with great rapidity from the other sections of his front, and when I was in the neighborhood of Havrincourt this morning there was a violent bombardment in progress on both sides.

There is no doubt in my mind that the German command will make powerful attempts to regain Bourlon Wood and the country about it in order to relieve the command we now have over his Cambral line, which is one of his main lines of supply. If we make the railway untenable he is very seriously menaced in his communications.

One effect of the battle is already evident further north, where his troops have been compelled to abandon small parts of their trench system on both side on Bullecourt after the capture of the Hindenburg tunnel trench by the Irish brigades and the trenches behind Bullecourt by the West Yorkshire and Northumberland Fusiliers.

The Cavalry in Hard Luck.

The capture of Bourlon Wood and the resistance by our troops against formidable counterattacks all through Friday and Saturday was aided by the great gallantry of the cavalry—some of our Hussars—who fought dismounted in co-operation with the infantry and the tanks. It was due to them that the northeast corner of the wood was held when seriously menaced by repeated attacks, and if this had been lost the whole of the wood might have been in jeopardy.

Since the break through on the first morning of the battle the cavalry have had a hard time without much luck. Their own hopes of a big drive were spoiled by several unfortunate incidents. One of these incidents was the defense of Flesquieres village by a garrison of Germans, who put up a long struggle before yielding to our pressure, and so held a wedge in our line which made it dangerous for the cavalry to sweep around on either side.

Another unlucky thing was the breaking of a bridge over the canal at Masnieres by the weight of a tank which was the first to cross. One squadron of Canadian cavalry succeeded in repairing the broken bridge over the canal, with the aid of civilians from Masnieres who came out to meet them, and at about 3:30 o'clock crossed, under machine gun and rifle fire from the banks, with only half a dozen casualties. They only numbered 123 men, and orders had been sent after them to retire, as it was so late in the day, but their Colonel lamed his horse in a sunken road, and the order did not reach the squadron commander in time.

So they rode on and had some remarkable adventures. They moved north and made their way through a gap in the wire cut by the troopers, where they were again under rifle and machine gun fire which wounded the Captain and two men. The command was carried on by a young Lieutenant, who rode with his men until they reached a camouflaged road southeast of the village of Rumilly, where they went through in sections under fire of the enemy hidden on the banks. Here they came up against a battery of field guns, one of which fired point black at them. They charged the battery, putting the guns out of action and killing some of the gunners. Those who were not destroyed surrendered, and the prisoners were left to be sent back by supports.

One squadron then dealt with the German infantry in the neighborhood, some of whom fled, while some were killed or surrendered. All this operation was done at a gallop under fire from flanking block houses. The squadron then slowed down to a walk, and took up a position in a sunken road, one kilometer east of Rumilly. Darkness crept down upon them, and gradually they were surrounded by German infantry with machine guns, so that they were in great danger of capture or destruction. Only five of their horses remained unhit, and the Lieutenant in command decided they must endeavor to cut their way through and get back.

The horses were stampeded in the direction of the enemy in order to draw the machine gun fire, and while these riderless horses galloped wildly out of one end of the sunken road the officer and his surviving troopers escaped from the other end. On the way back they encountered four bodies of enemy whom they attacked and routed.

Artillery Busy at Night.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 26, (Associated Press.)—Hard fighting still continues in the Cambrai area for the possession of Bourlon village, with the British holding the upper hand.

There was considerable artillery activity during the night, but, generally speaking, things were quiet. Despite the heavy rainfall of the past week the ground is firm and favorable for operations.

The British today were in possession of still more enemy trench defenses in the region of Bullecourt, the Germans having been forced to withdraw somewhat at several points to rearrange their positions. A considerable number of German communication trenches had become untenable as a result of the British drive into the enemy front lines last week, and the Germans abandoned these for more favorable ground.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—No essential change in the situation on the Cambrai front was reported in the official statement of the War Office today. The bulletin reads:

On the Cambrai battle front the enemy has not repeated his attacks on the Bourlon position since the failure of his attempt at midday yesterday, and the situation is unchanged.

Northeast of Ypres there was considerable artillery activity on both sides early last night in the Passchendaele sector, but no infantry action developed.

The official communication issued this evening said:

On the southern battlefront there has been no further infantry action.

On the Ypres front we have captured a few prisoners in patrol encounters. The hostile artillery again has shown considerable activity during the day east and northeast of Ypres, particularly in the neighborhood of Passchendaele, where certain of our positions at times were heavily bombarded.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (via London.)—According to today's official announcement, the town of Bourlon, in the Cambrai area, is still in German hands.

The repulse of minor infantry forces which advanced against the village is reported, and nests of British behind the German lines near Bourlon are said to have been cleared up. On the southwestern end of Bourlon Wood and west of Fontaine the Germans gained ground, the statement says, as a result of hand grenade encounters in the night.

The statement goes on:

The bulletin reads:

Army of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders there has been only an increase in the artillery activity at times between Poelcapelle and Gheluvelt. There have been foretied engagements with the results favorable to us. Prisoners were brought in northeast of Paschendaele. An attack by an English battalion failed.

On the battlefield southwest of Cambrai the enemy obstinately repeated his attacks on incty. Our troops, who had been tested before in defense and attack during previous days, completely repulsed the enemy again yesterday. Our destructive fire beat upon assemblies of enemy troops and also on the position where numerous tanks were being prepared for action south of Graincourt.

Minor infantry forces advanced against Bourlon, but were repulsed. English nests which remained after the recent fighting behind our lines near Bourlon were cleared in sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting. Eight officers and more than 200 men and twenty machine guns were captured.

On the southwest edge of the Bourlon Wood and west of Fontaine very violent hand-grenade encounters at night brought us a desired gain of ground.

North of Hanteux the enemy attacked after violent drumfire, but was repulsed. An English attack east of Graincourt collapsed before our entanglements.

Our infantry, and battle and pursuing aviators, in spite of a violent rainstorm, successfully intervened in the fighting on the battlefield near Cambrai.

FRENCH HOLD GAINS IN THE VERDUN SECTOR

Germans Open Strong Fire on the Conquered Positions, But Fail to Advance.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Nov. 26.—The difference between French and German methods was well illustrated yesterday by a smart operation of the French troops on the Verdun hills.

For some time past the enemy had been mucking at the front established by the last French attack against the north slope of Hill 344, an observatory and buttress of capital importance on the east of the Meuse. Constant small attacks had been made, with little result and at a cost which the French command might have regarded as sufficient compensation, if, however, understood even more proudly before Verdun than elsewhere that ground is not to be lost, and it was decided to recover at one stroke the short pieces of trench in which the Germans had obtained a footing.

At 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning a bombardment began, and at 10:30 the troops of assault went forward on a front of a little more than two miles to the east of Samogneux Village. In a few minutes two lines of the enemy trenches were overrun and a number of deep dugouts in the ravine between Hill 344 and Caures Wood were cleared out by supporting groups.

The French losses were insignificant, while along with the fruit of two months' effort the enemy lost 800 prisoners.

The advance brings us near to Haumont Village and Caures Wood and strengthens the line generally on the right bank of the Meuse.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Spirited artillery activity continues in the Verdun region, east of the Meuse, where the French troops are organizing the ground they captured yesterday to the north of Hill 344. The day statement reads:

On the right bank of the Meuse there was lively activity by the artillery in the region north of Hill 344, where our troops are organizing the positions which they had captured.

An enemy raid upon our small posts in the region of Bezonvaux was repulsed by our fire.

The night was quiet everywhere else.

The War Office announcement tonight says:

Quite violent artillery actions occurred in Belgium and north of the Chemin-des-Dames.

On the right bank of the Meuse our batteries caught under their fire and dispersed enemy concentrations north of the positions captured yesterday. The artillery fighting continued very spirited in this sector.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (via London.)—Today's Headquarters statement says that on the Verdun front, between Samogneux and Beaumont, the French attacked yesterday on a front of four kilometers, but that the attack broke down in the German defense zone.

The bulletin reads:

Army of the German Crown Prince: After a very strong increase in the artillery firing the French attacked on a width of four kilometers, between Samogneux and Beaumont. The first waves of the attack were dispersed by our infantry and artillery fire and the enemy retreated to their point of departure. Many assaults by newly brought up forces collapsed in our defense zone. Numerous Turcos, Zouaves, and other French troops were made prisoner.

Strong firing extended from the battlefield to the neighboring sectors and continued throughout the day with great intensity, especially on both sides of Ornes.

AIRMEN SHOW AUDACITY

Attack Foe's Troops Without Ceasing, Flying On and Using Machine Guns.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sunday, Nov. 25.—It was early in the morning that I went out again over the newly captured ground to see this battlefield.

Every yard of it across the Hindenburg lines, those great, wide trenches now empty of all life, was strewn with the evidences of the enemy's panic-stricken flight and capture in the beginning of the battle.

The way up to Havrincourt Village on the ridge to the west of Flesquières (by a stone cross, five centuries old, dedicated to St. Hubert, the patron saint of huntsmen before the tanks went ahunting on a fine November morning, then up the slope where the Scottish had to fight their way to a strong high wall of red brick surrounding the château grounds) was littered with things the Germans had left behind—field-gray overcoats, shrapnel helmets, innumerable pairs of boots, goatskin pouches, rifles, bayonets, bandoliers, tunics, gasmasks. It was as if great numbers of men had thrown everything away from them in a moment of great terror and had fled naked from their fear.

In their dugouts were all the little comforts of life which men gather to make life endurable in such dark holes, with wooden chairs and tables from French houses, mirrors, water jugs, and other furniture. Those who had been masters of these houses had gone away, and others had entered into possession. The "moppers up" while the battle was flaming over the countryside not many thousand yards away were settling down and searching for souvenirs in these new quarters.

I followed the track of the tanks, went through the great gaps they had made in the barbed wire, acres of barbed wire, and went along the route of the Scottish soldiers when they surged after the tanks on that grea morning of the surprise.

Some of them had left their kilts behind caught on the barbed wire. With no time to mind rents in the tartan of the Seaforths they had gone on in steel hats and very little else.

All this way to the battle was littered with letters in German and English as if there had been a paper chase instead of a hunting of men. They were intimate letters which men wear close to their hearts until war snatches them away and tosses them to a breeze. "Mein lieber Bruder," I read as I picked up one of them. "My darling hubby," began a letter to a London boy who is now away by Bourlon Wood.

I went out into the open country. Outstretched before me was the whole panorama of this battle. I went up to the edge of it as close as one could go without getting into the furnace fires. All around me were the swirl and turmoil of the battlefield. Everywhere tanks were crawling over the ground, some of them moving forward into action, some of them out of action, mortally wounded, some of them like battle cruisers of the land going forward in reconnoissance.

Across the field guns were moving up, the drivers of gun limbers urging their horses forward over the muddy slopes with new supplies of ammunition for the forward batteries.

Small bodies of cavalry rode about and put their horses to the gallop when black shrapnel burst overhead, with its high snarling menace. Gunner officers and observers were out in the open watching the enemy fire. Their own signalers were flag wagging as if in Battersea Park on a Saturday morning in the old days of peace, though the hostile shellfire was creeping near to them. Odd shells were scattered over the countryside searching for the like of them, as they would say.

It was a fantastic, unimaginable scene. The battlefield conversation would be unbelievable if I were to put down all the remarks I heard from officers and men about me on the ridge of battle and within the zone of fire.

Less than 2,000 yards away from us was a town on fire. It was Graincourt, and the enemy was "knocking hell out of it," in revenge for its capture. It had been my intention to go there, but I stopped short of it and was glad I had gone no further.

Shell after shell burst among its roofs and walls without ceasing for several hours. Red brick cottages went up in clouds of rosy smoke with flames in the heart of it. The enemy's shells burst in Graincourt with so many colors, green, purple, orange, rose, and pink, that it was a wonderful poem in color, but as tragic as the death that was there.

On a slope of ground above this village, but not so far away that at any moment the slope itself might not be swept with high explosives, three English soldiers watched the battle while they sat at their ease on a garden seat taken from a neighboring park. Near by two officers, sitting on an upturned tub and a petrol tin, were munching sandwiches and watching the progress of the attack on Bourlon Wood, which stood up in front of us, black and big, with the sun on its southern edge, while the British troops were fighting inside with tanks and where the enemy was flinging down a heavy barrage.

Officers came galloping up, leaned down over their saddles, and asked: "Have you got any news? How are things going? How about Bourlon Village and Moeuvres and Inchy?"

"I don't like those 5.9s," said a little tank officer who was standing by the side of his monster. He pointed to a road upon which a great number of shells were bursting, and said "That's where I have to go. I think I'll have lunch first."

He began to munch some bread and cheese, and with only half an eye on the battle told me how he had got a bottle of whisky out of divisional headquarters in return for a ride in his tank to an excellent Major and how jolly glad he was of the prize, because "you couldn't get a drink for love or money on this side of the battlefield."

"Do you know where my battalion is?" asked a lonely officer coming up. He had just come back from leave, and was hunting for his men somewhere on the south side of Bourlon Wood.

Overhead came flying men perilously low. They went fluttering over German lines, and we were glad when they flew a little further off, as the enemy flung back shrapnel at them which might hit us if it didn't hit them.

A column of cavalry came down a sunken road and then out on to the sky line above one of the tanks. "They will be drawing fire on me next," said the tank pilot, and with that desire of life which is strong in man everybody hoped he was in a safer place than the other fellow.

Germans Start Heavy Barrage.

At 2:30, or a little later, the enemy began to fire intensely along the whole line of the front below Moeuvres and Inchy.

"Another counterattack, curse them!" said an officer. "That is about the seventh today."

The German gunners were putting down their barrage line dead straight for miles, and revealed a new strength in artillery. The barrage lines swept forward, with white smoke clouds rising after the flash of bursting shells from the field guns and big, black, sinister clouds, with a vomit of earth in them, where the German heavies were crashing, but it was not a counterattack. It was a barrage laid down to kill the British attack on the two villages to the west of Bourlon Wood, which was very quiet and still because no gunners were shooting into it, while men were fighting at close quarters within those glades.

Light signals went up from the enemy's lines. The British infantry was advancing again. Though I could not see, I am sure the moment of the new attack came when the British batteries, which had not been shooting very hard for some time and with only irregular rounds from isolated guns, suddenly burst out in to a great roar of drumfire. All the British field batteries were revealed by their flashes for miles along the front, and there were many of them, and they were very close to the enemy.

I stood in the centre of their fire, with a heavier gun beyond me, and the air seemed to rock and sway with the rhythm of their fire. Below the slopes the grass was alive with little rush-lights, and as the afternoon became darkened and dusk crept over the battlefields and the shadows lengthened and deepened round Bourlon Wood these gunflashes became more vivid.

There were five heavy counterattacks on the British line yesterday afternoon, and by 4 o'clock the enemy was still in Bourlon village, and with a last strong and desperate effort succeeded in driving the British partly back in the forest and off the high ground at the northern end. It was the only success he had had in the day, although he had held the British back from the ground around Inchy and halfway through Moeuvres village, to which he had been driven.

He could not hold the high ground in Bourlon Wood. As the sun was setting on this day of battle with a glorious bar of shining gold below the clouds a final attack was made by the British infantry and cavalry working together. The enemy was again routed from the greater part of the wood, and the British troops entered the village of Bourlon itself, fought through the streets, hotly defended by rifle and machine-gun fire, and mopped up most of the main defenses, although odd groups of men are still fighting there.

When I went away last evening there was still a great gunfire and above a great glory in the sky where mountainous clouds were on fire in the sunset, and over Graincourt, still in the fury of shellfire, was a quiet patch of heaven which had been all blue until suddenly it was filled with little flames as wisps of clouds were caught by the splendor of the day's last light.

After that it was very dark, and as I went back through the woods the only light was where the white rays of the moon filtered through the branches, and all the tree trunks were black and sharp against the glare of bursting shells, with darkness in between them. Behind the lines campfires were being lighted in the hiding places of the tanks.

Beginning of Day's Fight.

On the left the British troops advanced toward Inchy about 8:30 in the morning, and for a time were held up by a fierce machine gun fire which swept down on their left from the east side of the Inchy road, although on the right they made good their advance without serious trouble.

A little patrol of Londoners crept out ahead of the main body and worked their way into a sap on the west side on the way to Proville, to feel the enemy's strength. They were fired at hotly by rifle volleys and came back with their report.

While this was happening the airmen, who were all over the battleground flying very low and behaving with amazing light-hearted audacity, reported that two battalions of the enemy's troops were advancing southward on Moeuvres for a counterattack. The British guns directed their fire on these columns, and so shattered them that they do not seem to have come further, although it is probable that their survivors joined later attacks.

Later in the morning the Germans were seen retiring southeast of Fontaine Notre Dame, by La Folie Wood. They were also seen moving back onto Proniville, on the extreme left. They had abandoned five field guns, with plenty of ammunition.

After midday the British troops were moving on the quarry west of the forest of Bourlon. North Country troops had captured the southern side of the forest. Four tanks went ahead of the infantry and entered the forest, crashing down its undergrowth and small trees and sweeping German machine guns and emplacements with their guns. With the North Country troops following them, they took the crucifix in the wood and went across a sunken road in which the enemy had been in strength. Here the Germans fought with great valor and small parties put up a most desperate resistance.

Tanks forced their way into the village in spite of the fire, cleared out some of the enemy's snipers, who used their rifles from windows and loopholes in the walls, and early in the afternoon news came back that the British line ran halfway through Bourlon Wood down to the centre of La Folie Wood on the right, going across the Cambrai road south of Fontaine.

Hand to Hand in the Wood.

In the wood itself there was close fighting all day long and gunfire ceased in this great belt of trees because the infantry on both sides were within a few yards of each other, fighting with rifles and machine guns from glade to glade and across barricades of tree trunks, while the tanks climbed over fallen logs, crashed through undergrowth, and trampled down stockades and emplacements.

Before dusk the enemy made a desperate attempt to beat the British back by violent counterattacks from La Folie Wood over the ridge northeast of Fontaine Notre Dame. These were beaten off, and more tanks moved up to make a final attack on the forest.

The enemy had been driven back to the northeast corner, which was his last stand among the trees, although he was still defending the village of Bourlon, on the edge of the wood. This the British did not capture until last night, when in the village there were still snipers and small groups of Germans in the cellars and houses.

Tanks, advancing to the northeast corner of the wood, were held up by strong bodies of riflemen and granadiers, who swarmed around them and tried to put them out of action.

It was then that one of the British flying men went up and did an astounding feat, although it was not more wonderful than many other exploits performed by the aviators, who were flying so low that they seemed as if they would trim one's hair with their planes. This airman saw the German troops swarming round the tanks. He pounced on them, flying like a bat about them and straffing them with his Lewis gun. They fled from the roar of his engine, the beating of his wings, and the bullets which came about them like raindrops. Many who could not escape lay dead and wounded in the undergrowth. The tanks went on and gained nearly all the wood with the help of the infantry.

Outside of Bourlon Forest on the east side the Highlanders with the tanks made another attack on Fontaine Notre Dame, but they could not rout out all the nests of men, who kept up a vicious fire from the walls and windows of the ruined houses. Some of the buildings that were on fire glowed red and hot.

So on Friday night the situation was all in favor of the British. They had gained almost the entire Forest of Bourlon, but the enemy still held the village at its northwest edge. He had maintained his line precariously outside Inchy and Moeuvres.

All Day Fight at Bourlon.

All through the night there was heavy gunfire from the enemy batteries. Yesterday the battle was resumed with further attacks on Bourlon and repeated counterattacks from the enemy throughout the morning and afternoon. Last evening the British had cleared the last German out of the forest, had taken the village of Bourlon, forced the enemy half way out of Mouevres, and repulsed all his counterattacks with most bloody losses.

It was a day of great drama, and many hours of it were filled with strange and terrible interest, because seldom, if ever before, have I seen so great a picture of open warfare or so great a movement of men in the fields of war.

SLEEP ON TANK BEFORE FIGHT.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Sunday, Nov. 25.—Battle opened Friday morning on all sides of the forest of Bourlon. It was an attack in which all arms worked together in a most spectacular union.

The British guns opened a terrific drumfire, and it was the greatest demonstration so far in this battle by those field guns which after the first advance had galloped far forward over the captured ground and taken up new positions astoundingly close to the enemy's line of retreat.

All the heavy and light batteries which I had seen streaming up through the day and night, choking the roads with their long columns, silhouetted against the pale dawn as they wound over hillsides, surged in a wild turmoil of horses and mules and guns and wagons into the ruined villages behind the lines, and got into action a few minutes after their journey's end.

Many of the men had fought on other battlefields in this year of terrible fighting. For months they had had but little rest and no kind of peace, and had lived in shellfire until they were haggard and worn and weary; but now they came to these new battlefields with as much enthusiasm as if they were going into action for the first time, because of the new promise of victory; and they did not spare an ounce of their strength, but went to almost superhuman exertions to get up their guns and their shells.

They were first to start the battle of Bourlon Wood, but the first to advance were the tanks, more than two score of them with single scouts ahead, followed by others in echelon formation. Many of them had already been fighting since Tuesday morning. All of them had been working day and night for many days before that.

Standing on the battlefield yesterday with one of them going to join his brothers who were around Bourlon Wood, I heard from a young pilot a tale of his adventure in this battle, and all through his tale ran one refrain, it was his need of sleep. He spoke the word "sleep" as if it were some spell word, holding all the beauty of life. For nine days and nights before the surprise at dawn he had been working to get his engine right, to get his guns right, to fix things up, as he said, speaking with a grim, worn look at the box of tricks by his side. Half an hour before he went over he was seen by the enemy in Havrincourt Château away on a hill in front of him by the white glare of their Verey lights. He had tried to stop every time the light went up, but they saw his movement and instantly a field gun opened on him. Its shooting was marvelous, and I saw how near the shells had fallen to the track of that tank. The young pilot was sitting outside his tank with his Sergeant, but presently he said: "I guess we'll get inside. This is getting too hot."

As they advanced to battle the pilot and Sergeant and one other man were the only ones awake, all the rest were fast asleep, dead and drugged by sleep after their long ordeal.

That seems to me the queerest thing I have heard in this battle—that and the experience of a tank which was hit twice by direct hits. The first shell burst inside the tank after passing between the arm and body of the pilot and by an amazing chance did not wound a soul. Another shell came inside and again no one was hit.

Later the officers and crew got out to deal with their tank, which had become stuck between two banks up by Havrincourt Village, while the enemy was still fighting there. Machine gun bullets whipped round them like a swarm of wasps, but only one man was hit and he was only slightly touched.

"It was a million to one chance each time," said the pilot, "a miracle which you can't count on again."

AMERICAN OFFICERS BACK FROM FRANCE

General Treat Expects End of War Next Year—O'Ryan and Fletcher in Party.

Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan and his staff, Major Gen. Charles G. Treat, and five other field officers in the United States Army with their staffs returned yesterday to an Atlantic port from France on a French liner, and left for Washington to report to the War Department.

Major Gen. Treat said that he was an optimist in regard to the probable end of the war, but felt confident that it would be some time next year.

"We are going to take our time about getting into the thick of the fight," he continued, "but after we get a really good start we'll clean it up. The health of the American troops is good, and they are taking pams with their drill in bayonet fighting and grenade throwing in order to qualify for the firing lines as soon as possible.

"The liquid mud along the battle front caused by the almost continuous rain at this season is cold and very trying to the nerves of the men. The British troops have suffered a great deal in the past winters from what the surgeons call 'trench feet,' which is brought on by standing in the cold mud for hours at a time. To combat this trying complaint, which renders the men useless for a time, every soldier should have at least three pairs of knitted woolen socks and also thick woolen underwear.

DECLARES AMERICA MUST UNITE ALLIES

Winston Churchill, Author, Believes Our Leadership Is Essential to Win.

Winston Churchill, the American author, returned yesterday from a two-month visit to the British and French fronts at the invitation of the Allies, with the firm conviction that the war could only be won by the aid of the United States, which must supply material, leadership, and democratic coordination among the Allies.

Unless this was accomplished, Mr. Churchill asserted, the war would end in chaos, and the revolution which began in Russia would spread to France, Italy, and Great Britain, through the evolution of syndicalism, which had been going on in those countries gradually for some time. Germany, too, would have a revolution, he said, but in her case it would be a bloody one, as the Junkers would die hard and fight for their privileges to the last ditch.

"The situation is a critical one," Mr. Churchill said in an interview at the Ritz-Carlton, "and the question for Washington is the backing up and supplying of the whole thing, which must be done if a sane democratic solution of the war is to be arrived at. Germany is beaten on the Western front now, and if that was all there was to the war the victory would be won; but there is far more than that to be done before peace can be secured.

"After studying conditions carefully, I have arrived at the conclusion that the German submarine is still the chief factor in the war, because the Allies will depend on American troops and stores, ammunition and equipment, which must be carried safely across 3,000 miles or more of water.

"America stands for disinterestedness with the Allies, and it is in her power to establish democratic co-ordination, and it must be done immediately if Germany is to be beaten. The Allies in Europe have had too many internal adjustments to make, and could not give the time they ought to have given to establish a combined offensive. The revolution in Russia is the keynote of an advance of labor in Europe, which, if not guided, will be a very serious thing. Great Britain and France can hold the lines until the United States is ready to go into the front line of trenches in divisions."

CANADIAN CAVALRY ON WAR ADVENTURE

Roam 2 Miles Behind German Line and Charge Batteries, Once by Plunging Over a Hill.

ESCAPE SLAUGHTER BY RUSE

Then Return Afoot, Cutting Their Way Through Four Detachments to Reach Masnieres.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sunday, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—British cavalrymen have had many thrilling experiences since battle began in the Cambrai sector Tuesday and opened a way for them into a great territory, over which they have roamed almost at will, like cavaliers of old seeking combats with those who would accept their gage.

Stories of their charges with drawn sabres against batteries and strong infantry positions have been innumerable. But perhaps none of them had a more exciting time than a squadron of Canadian horsemen, who took their way in a northeasterly direction from Masnières after the smashing of the Hindenburg line.

They swept out of Masnières on their chargers, with their sabres making music against their trappings. They returned afoot, and thereby hangs a tale of bravery and strategy.

For a considerable distance the horsemen cantered along over the rolling land without encountering any enemy. East of Rumilly, however, they came upon several tanks which had run almost into a German position and were being fired at point blank by heavy guns.

The tanks were in a tight place and needed assistance badly. They got it. The cavalry came up in columns of four and their leader, sizing up the situation, sent them in on either side of the battery. Then they charged in straight among the gun crews, their sabres flashing. It was over in a moment, and the last enemy lay trampled upon.

This incident finished, the cavalry trotted off in search of other adventures. Not far away was a sunken road, which concealed considerable German forces armed with machine guns. Scouts discovered this trap, and, dashing back, gave the word to the commander. The latter snapped out a command and the squad, most of whom were unaware of the presence of the sunken road, divided into two bodies, one of which deployed to the right toward a break in the wall of the road, while the other drew their sabres and charged straight ahead.

The Germans, not knowing that British cavalry was in operation in that section, remained in the ditch, and the Canadians reached the edge of the miniature precipice without seeing the enemy. They saw them then, in numbers, and realized for the first time that they were headed for a drop of several feet to the level of the road.

Not a horseman hesitated. They took the flying leap straight down among the surprised Germans and began their work of death. Half a hundred of the enemy lay dead when the rest took to their heels and fled toward Rumilly.

The cavalry commander was then out of touch with the rest of the advancing British forces and decided to remain in the sunken road for a time until he could get orders. Accordingly he sent back a courier to give information as to the location of the squad.

It developed quickly, however, that another force of German machine gunners was stationed in a commanding position nearby. These opened a grilling fire on the cavalry and succeeded in killing several horses within a short time.

It became apparent that the men and the rest of the horses must suffer the same fate if they remained where they were. The commander knew it would be suicide to ride out into the open, and he seized upon an ingenious plan to outwit the Germans. The horses were gathered together and stampeded, with their empty saddles, in the direction of Cambrai. The ruse worked, for the Germans, peering through the mist, thought the horsemen were escaping.

The machine guns came into action against the galloping horses, and the troopers meantime made good their escape from the road. They started back, but, losing their way, were at one time in the outskirts of Rumilly. This may have given rise to a report which became current that the British had occupied the village.

The Canadians continued their journey toward what they thought were the British lines. As they were proceeding they were challenged by a German officer with nine men. Among the troopers was a little chap who spoke German fluently. He was sent forward, with orders to engage the officer in conversation until the rest of the troopers could close in with their sabres.

The emissary fulfilled his mission by engrossing the attention of the officer with a cock-and-bull story, to which the German listened because he did not know that the British cavalry were in his zone. He listened a moment too long, however, for the Canadians rushed forward and killed the men accompanying the officer. The latter was taken prisoner and compelled to conduct the horsemen back to their lines.

A dispatch from Canadian Army Headquarters in France to the Canadian Press, Limited, telling of this same adventure of Canadian cavalrymen, spoke of them as "'Hell for Leather' Port Garrys."

It says that the little force penetrated two miles inside the enemy's territory under command of a Lieutenant. Of the return on foot the dispatch says:

"The retirement was a succession of hand-to-hand struggles. Four times the little party met enemy working parties with the bayonet and dispersed them. Midnight had passed when they reached Masnières again and fought their way through the enemy infantry in the town to a wrecked bridge, where they crossed to safety.

"Forty-three of the men came through unwounded, and they brought back their wounded and over a dozen prisoners."

GREAT DEEDS DONE ON BOURLON HEIGHTS

Fight in Wood One of the Most Spectacular of the War—Airmen's Remarkable Exploits.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sunday, Nov. 25, (Associated Press.)—This morning found the line of battle of the weary but determined British troops stretched in a semicircle about Bourlon Wood and Bourlon Village.

All day yesterday the opposing forces struggled at close quarters for possession of the village, from which the British were forced Friday after gaining a footing in the rush that took them through Bourlon Wood. Nightfall still found waves of infantry surging back and forth through the streets of the hamlet and among the houses, their crimson bayonets telling the story of the terrible conflict. Gradually the Germans fell back, the British pressing forward with persistence which the enemy could not withstand, and the hamlet was finally cleared of most of the German troops.

Today a few of the enemy still remained in Bourlon to be mopped up, but all the main streets had been cleared, and it was surrounded by a strong force of British soldiers.

While the Bourlon position overlooks Cambrai, that city may be a hard nut to crack, because the central part is walled, and many suburbs radiate from it, forming natural barriers against an advance from the west. It seems likely that Cambrai might ultimately become a sort of No Man's Land, dominated by the big guns of both sides, and that this ancient town with its fine old cathedral and picturesque walls will go the way of so many other places which come under artillery fire.

That the Germans attached the greatest importance to Bourlon Wood and Village was evidenced by their stout resistance and the intense counterattacks buried against the British lines.

The fighting over the wooded slopes of the elevation has been among the most spectacular of the war, for the occupation of the forest was due largely to the work of tanks and airmen, who paved the way for onrushing infantry. Several iron monitors led the advance to Bourlon Wood Friday with British planes circling over the enemy at a height of thirty to fifty feet, and carrying on vigorous warfare with their machine guns and bombs. It was hard fighting, but the advance was continued successfully until the northeast corner of the wood was reached, where the tanks were held up by a strong force of the enemy. British airmen, who had been fighting close to the ground, deliberately charged on the foe, with machine guns pumping a stream of bullets into the German ranks. The battle was short and decisive. The airplanes wheeled and rewheeled over the heads of the Germans and maintained such an intensive fire that the defenders were forced to retire, after suffering considerable losses. The tanks then pushed on, the conquest of the wood was completed, and an entering wedge was driven into the village.

Almost immediately the Germans delivered a heavy counterattack on the troops who had penetrated the hamlet, and after a stiff engagement forced them to withdraw again to the edge of the wood. Then they threw themselves on the British line at the edge of the wood. A sanguinary struggle followed, and the British, unable to withstand the fury of the German attack without too great a loss of life, withdrew slightly, and the Germans gained a footing in the northern edge of the forest. But the British were not to let the matter rest, and they surged forward again. This time dismounted cavalrymen advanced with the infantry, and between them they re-established themselves on the old line.

Little by little the Germans were forced to give ground at the edge of the wood about Bourlon Village until the British infantry reached the bloodstained streets of the hamlet once more. Dusk settled down about the contending forces, but they continued to shoot and thrust at one another in the gathering darkness. Finally the German forces were driven outside the village, but were still full of determination. Several times through the night they reformed and swept forward against the village, but each time they were hurled back with heavy losses.

The work of British airplanes in the present offensive forms a graphic chapter in itself. Despite the bad weather, which compelled them to operate within a few feet of the ground, they kept at their task and rendered invaluable assistance in reconnoissance and offensive operations.

There have been almost continual battles between German infantry and British airmen, flying as low as thirty feet above the ground. Never before has this kind of warfare been carried out on such a large scale. Pilots have attacked infantry and gun crews indiscriminately wherever they encountered them and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy with bombs and machine guns.

One British pilot had his machine literally shot to pieces by rifle and machine-gun fire, and crashed down behind his own lines with ten bullet holes through his clothing, although he himself was unhurt.

Another young airman presented himself at headquarters after having been shot down for the third time in two days. He was delighted with his experience, and applied for another machine so that he might go out again.

One aviator attacked a column of German infantry marching in close formation and hurled two high-power bombs among them. The troops scattered, and as the airman whirled away he saw two heaps of dead about huge craters which the bombs had torn in the road.

There were many cases of airmen successfully bombing airdromes, troop transports, and gun crews. A large number of artillery crews have been wiped out by machine-gun fire at close range or by bombs.

Many of the airmen had miraculous escapes from death. An aviator had his machine torn to pieces while fighting infantry with his machine gun. He was caught in the shellfire and the wings of his machine were shot away. Fortunately he was flying only twenty or thirty feet above the ground and close to his own lines. He crashed down in No Man's Land and found himself unhurt. He immediately came under rifle and machine gun fire, but found a German rifle with some ammunition and engaged the enemy single-handed. As he fired he worked his way back until he reached one of his own patrols.

There is not much humor in fighting of this nature, but one incident occurred which is making the air service laugh today. One of the youngest British airmen was flying at a low altitude when four enemy machine guns opened on him. He swooped down and shot three of his opponents as he swept by. The fourth machine gun kept firing, and the aviator in a spirit of boyish mischief leaned over the side of his car and wriggled his fingers in joyous derision at the Germans.

Just as he was in the midst of this performance his opponent put a bullet through the palm of the airman's open hand. The aviator presented himself at a dressing station, and when queried, admitted the truth with crestfallen face.

PLEADED FOR DEATH IN ROCHESTER'S BOAT

Seven Survivors, Arriving Home, Tell of Suffering at Sea After Torpedoing.

THIRSTED IN BITTER COLD

Forty-five of Antilles Men Arrive—One Says Mates Neglected Their Life Belts.

First-hand details of the torpedoing of the American steamship Rochester on Nov. 2 were brought to an Atlantic port yesterday by seven of the survivors who were still suffering from frost bite through exposure in the lifeboat. The men, who arrived on an American liner, limped down the gangway to the pier. Warren B. Thompson, Quartermaster, and two others had split open the tops of their shoes from the soles because they could not bear any pressure on their feet.

"We were steaming along quietly at 4:40 P. M. on Nov. 2, about 400 miles from port," Thompson said, "when the ship was torpedoed by a German submarine which killed Second Engineer Sandot and one of the oilers. Three boats were lowered and filled with the crew of the Rochester and the gun crew. All we had was the clothing we were wearing when the ship was struck. There was no time to collect anything.

"One boat was never heard from, I was told, and two landed at Moville on the northeast coast of Ireland. I was in the Captain's boat with six other men besides five of the naval gun crew.

"There was plenty of biscuit in the lifeboat, but they got soaked with sale water. We managed to eat them because that was the only food we had. But the hardtack made us so thirsty that we drank more than our daily ration of fresh water, which was stored in two wooden beakers kept in the stern sheets, where the Captain sat at the tiller.

Without Water for Seventeen Hours.

"The cold was intense and the salt water which slapped over the boat fore and aft was so cold that it penetrated us through to the very marrow. After the fourth day the fresh water gave out and for seventeen hours there was nothing to drink. Some of the men suffered so much from thirst and exposure that they cried out that they wanted to die and threatened to jump out of the lifeboat. They were held back by their shipmates.

"One young sailor, who did not come back with us, as he was not out of the hospital, was in such agony that he crawled aft to the Captain and begged him to shoot him, because he could stand no more and would not take his own life. In the meantime the boat was drifting along the coast with her fore and aft sail. Occasionally we pulled on the oars to keep ourselves warm, but we were too weak from exposure and lack of nourishment to do much.

"Finally, when we were almost all in, a British trawler picked us up, and it transferred us three hours later to a Red Cross steamship, which landed us at Moville. Shortly afterward the second boat arrived, with seven of her crew dead from exposure. Three of them had died, we were told, when they were in sight of the port."

The others returning with Quartermaster Thompson were David Caldwell, William C. Eisenhardt, Thaddeus Fellowes, William Foulin, Oscar Garlas, and Edward McCauseland.

Another party, comprising forty-five survivors of the American transport Antilles, which was torpedoed in October off the French coast, landed at an Atlantic port yesterday from a French steamship. Second Officer John Christiansen was in charge of the group. The men had been torpedoed a second time on the transport Finland, and two of them had been on the American steamship Vacuum when she was sunk by a German submarine last April.

Overconfidence on Antilles.

William Harrison, one of the crew, said that when the torpedo struck the Antilles the men did not have their lifebelts on because it was the third trip westward and they had become overconfident in the speed of the ship and the ability of the Captain and officers to avoid submarines. The Antilles' boats were swung over the side on the davits, but there was such a scramble for them as the vessel was sinking that some of them were let go by the run, and the men in them were thrown into the sea and drowned.

"We were picked up by the converted yachts Alcedo and Corsair and landed at a French port," Harrison said. "Then we started for home on the Finland, and were only a day out of port when she was banged at by a torpedo. Let me tell you that our chaps, numbering eighty-seven, who were on board, did not need any bugle call to man the boats. Directly after the torpedo exploded we were on deck with belts on in less than two shakes of a dead lamb's tail. So far as I knew every one left the Finland—officers as well as crew—but returned when it was seen that the vessel was not likely to sink, and we landed in France that night."

Two American naval officers of senior rank who returned on the same vessel from France said that the German submarine was still a very elusive quantity to handle. The latest type of periscopes, they said, were not more than two inches in circumference, and when seen at close range they resembled a black broomstick bobbing up and down on the water. With a choppy sea and an overcast sky it was practically impossible to see them at all.

The naval officers explained that the German commanders saw convoyed vessels some distance away and made their plans to attack any steamship that appeared to be out of the proper line. It was a matter of the highest importance that Captains should obey the signals of the convoy master at all times.

SHOUTED 'KAMERAD' ON CAPTURED U-BOAT

Terror Stricken Germans Were Forced to Rise—Americans Fed and Clothed Them.

BASE OF THE AMERICAN FLOTILLA IN BRITISH WATERS, Nov. 26, (Associated Press.)—It is now permissible to give the details of the capture by Americans of the entire crew of a U-boat sunk by depth charges. The explosives had disabled the U-boat and forced it down, bumping along the bottom of the sea and striking terror in the hearts of the crew, when the commander, in order to lighten her, emptied the tanks.

To the great relief of the crew, the U-boat responded, and rose to the surface with such a rush that some of the Germans were thrown about and injured. The U-boat appeared on the surface within several hundred feet of an American destroyer. The submarine's hatch flew open, and the Germans scrambled out of the conning tower, coatless and shoeless, ready to swim for it. They lined up along the narrow deck with hands in the air, shouting "Kamerad!"

The U-boat remained stationary, and the destroyer moved close up and heaved a line, which the Germans made fast. This was no sooner done than it became apparent that the crew had succeeded in opening the seacocks, for the submarine began to settle, at first slowly, then more rapidly. As she did so the Germans leaped into the water and swam toward the destroyer. Some of the American bluejackets jumped into the sea to rescue the injured.

As the last German was lifted aboard the destroyer the hawser attached to the U-boat parted under the strain and the U-boat disappeared.

All the Germans received steaming hot coffee and dry clothing and were otherwise made comfortable for the run to the base, but one of their number, a machinist, had suffered greatly from shock and exposure and died on the way. He was buried with full military honors from the deck of the destroyer, the American commander officiating at what was the first funeral service so far held in this war on an American destroyer.

When the destroyer reached her base the prisoners were almost wholly clad in American bluejacket outfits. They appeared especially fond of the American shoes, which were the first they had ever worn.

INGRAM GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE THE CASSIN

Threw Explosives Overboard Instead of Going Forward as Torpedo Sped Toward Destroyer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Osmond Kelly Ingram of Pratt City, Ala., who perished when the American destroyer Cassin was torpedoed by a German submarine in European waters on Oct. 16, deliberately risked his life to save the vessel. After Secretary Daniels received details from Vice Admiral Sims, he made public the following announcement today:

The Navy Department announces that Osmond K. Ingram, gunner's mate, first class, the only man to lose his life when the U. S. S. Cassin was struck by a torpedo on Oct. 1, 1917, had the opportunity of saving himself as he saw the torpedo coming toward the stern of the ship where his gun was located. Ingram, however, with exceptional presence of mind, realized the additional danger if the torpedo struck the stern of the ship, where certain high explosives were placed, and, instead of going forward and saving himself, he deliberately went aft to throw these charges overboard before the torpedo struck.

The department considers that Ingram sacrificed his life in performing a duty which he believed would save his ship and the lives of the officers and men on board.

Ingram's mother, Mrs. Bettie Ingram, lives at 504 Third Street, Pratt City, Ala. He was blown overboard and his body was not recovered. Five other members of the Cassin's crew were injured. The Cassin got into port under her own steam and the gallantry of her crew in effecting temporary repairs was commended by Admiral Sims in a special report.

ENVOYS OF ALLIES MAY QUIT RUSSIA

try is on the verge of a bloody civil war.

According to this dispatch, the Russian newspaper Volka Narodna asserts that the Russian armies on the northern front have for several days been without food and that soldiers daily are leaving the front in hundreds or are dying in the trenches from cold and hunger. The newspaper adds that mutinies due to hunger have broken out on several parts of the line.

With reference to the order of the Military Revolutionary Committee for the dissolution of the Committee for the Salvation of the Country and the Revolution, the Secretary of the Salvation Committee, a mild-mannered woman, who declined to permit the use of her name, said:

"We refuse to dissolve under any circumstances. They did not elect us and cannot dissolve us. They may arrest and confine us in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, but that will only prevent us from performing our duties and not deprive us of the right to represent those who elected us."

General Kaledines, Hetman of Don Cossacks, according to the Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post, is the master of the Russian situation. With a trustworthy and disciplined army, he is reported to control the bulk of the grain-growing territory, and is rapidly capturing the remainder.

The Russian gold reserve, which the correspondent says was removed to the interior of Russia in 1913, is now held by General Kaledines.

PETROGRAD AND BERLIN TALK BY WIRELESS

President Has Bolsheviki Peace Proposals and Will Decide This Country's Attitude.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Advices today from David R. Francis, the American Ambassador to Russia, brought information to the State Department that Petrograd and Berlin are in wireless communication. The unofficial interpretation placed on this information is that the radio is being used as a means for the exchange of communications between the Lenine-Trotzky - Bolsheviki Government and Berlin regarding the Maximalist peace proposal. Officials declined to comment on this significant feature of the report from Ambassador Francis.

The State Department earlier in the day received the text of the peace proposal made by the Bolsheviki, and a copy of this document is now in the hands of President Wilson for consideration and such reply as he cares to make. The text was forwarded by Ambassador Francis by way of Stockholm. At the State Department no comment was obtainable regarding the attitude of the United States Government, but there is not the slightest chance that these peace overtures will be considered in any favorable light in view of the recent rejection of those made by the Vatican and the known desire of the Washington Government that the United States and the Entente Powers bend every effort toward unity and co-ordination of action with a view to the most vigorous prosecution of the war to a successful end.

President Wilson will himself determine the character of the decision to be reached. This Government has not recognized the Bolsheviki form of government and one of the points to be carefully considered will be whether the dispatch of an answer to the note is to be construed as a recognition of the Bolsheviki Government.

In Entente diplomatic circles the belief was expressed today that the opportunity rests with the United States more than with any other power at war with the Central Empires to win Russia back to the Entente alliance, and it was declared that the greatest elements of skill in diplomacy and statesmanship must be employed toward this end.

It has been suggested that care and tact should be taken not to flatly ignore the Bolsheviki and drive them to further excesses, and that German agents in Russia would seek to make the most of an American refusal to reply to the note by claiming that this country was aligned with reactionary elements. On the other hand, it is being urged that if the United States should recognize the Bolsheviki element it might strengthen their influence and further their efforts toward the negotiation of a separate peace with Germany.

In well-informed quarters here the belief is entertained that the Bolsheviki will not be able to dictate to the Russian armies, and that the military elements have not yet definitely determined their attitude toward the Maximalist rule. The armies of Russia have not been wholly deceived by the Bolsheviki. They distrust them and are expected to follow a strong leader should a master personally appear.

It is not definitely know here whether General Korniloff, former Commander in Chief, is still in prison, but it is strongly suspected that the Kerensky adherents refused to permit his release immediately after the Premier's loss of power. The prestige of Korniloff has been considerably increased here since the advent of the Bolsheviki, especially since he forecast the present situation and desired to take measures to prevent it, but was overruled by Kerensky and arrested on charges of treasonable conduct.

The text of the proclamation issued by General Korniloff early in September, and which may become the rallying cry of many of the military forces opposed to the Bolsheviki should he be released, was obtained here today.

"Russian men," said this proclamation, "our great fatherland is perishing. The Government, under pressure of the Bolsheviki majority of the councils, is acting in full accord with the plans of the German General Staff. Overwhelming consciousness of the impending ruin of the fatherland compels me in this menacing moment to summon all Russian men to save perishing Russia.

"All in whose breasts beat Russian hearts, all who believe in God, let them flock to the temple and pray God to perform a great miracle—a miracle of saving the fatherland.

"I, General Korniloff, son of a peasant and Cossack, declare to all that I require nothing personally—nothing except the salvation of mighty Russia—and I swear to lead the nation by the road of victory over the foe to the Constituent Assembly, through which the nation will decide its own fate and choose the organization of its political life.

"But I shall never betray Russia into the hands of its traditional foe—the German race—or make the Russian people the slaves of Germany. I prefer to die on the field of honor and battle rather than to witness the shame and infamy of the Russian land.

"Russian people, in your own hands rests the fate of your country."

In a second proclamation Korniloff denounced Kerensky for incapacity, indecision, and weakness, and declared that, in order to veil the unfitness of itself, the Government was creating the chimera of a non-existent counter-revolution.

The Russian Embassy has received no telegraphic dispatches from Petrograd since last Friday. In the dispatch received today from Ambassador Francis he notified the State Department that the Russian Northern Army was short of food. Unless this food shortage is supplied, it is believed it will result in a dangerous situation, the result of which no one can safely predict. Word also reached the State Department today, in an unconfirmed report forwarded by Ambassador Francis, that a new Socialist Government had been set up near Petrograd.

REVOLT NOW STARTS IN UKRAINE REPUBLIC

Agrarian Riots in South—Pogrom at Skivira—Cossacks Plan to Reconstruct Russia.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sunday, Nov. 25.—In Kiev the power is now in the hands of the Ukrainian Rada, which has proclaimed a Ukrainian Republic federated with Russia and including the Governments of Kiev, Podolia, Volhynia, Chernigoff, Poltava, Kharkov, Ekaterinoslav, Kherson, and Tavrida. In Kiev the staff made an energetic resistance, but the Ukrainians have joined the Bolsheviki and, summoned troops from the front, and with the help of the Railway Union, which admitted Ukrainian but excluded Government troops, gained the victory.

The Cossack Congress which was sitting at Kiev first declared strongly in favor of the Provisional Government, but later assumed a neutral attitude and moved to Nevo Cherkosk. Czech-Slovak regiments began by fighting the Bolsheviki, but when the Ukrainians joined the insurgents they refused to employ arms against Ukrainian independence, and demanded to be sent back to the front. All the Government institutions in Kiev are in the hands of the Ukrainians, and Russian papers have been confiscated.

On Nov. 20 the Ukrainian Rada issued a manifesto proclaiming a republic, the nationalization of all private estates and monastery land and domains in Ukrainian territory and the convocation of an Ukrainian Constitutent Assembly on Jan. 9. Ukrainians as temporary allies of the Bolsheviki are now revolting against Ukrainian rule and protesting that all power in Ukraine belongs to the Soviets.

The Caucasus has formed its own Socialist parliament, excluding all Bolsheviki. The province demands its independence. At Kishinev the autonomy of Besarabia has been proclaimed. The Cossacks in Orenburg have decided to support the Provisional Government.

In the Government of Kiev and in other southern Governments near the front there is an epidemic of violent agrarian disorders, with wholesale destruction of buildings and livestock. In the town of Skivira there has been a Jewish pogrom.

In Orenburg the power is in the hands of the Orenburg Cossacks.

In Siberia various local revolutionary organizations have concluded a treaty of neutrality and order is undisturbed. It is expected that the elections to the Constituent Assembly will not be hindered.

The news from Kazan, where fighting seems to have been particularly violent, is fragmentary, owing to the interruption of telegraphic communication.

In Trans-Caucasia a Moderate Socialist Territorial Council has provisionally assumed power, and is negotiating with the Cossack territories north of the Caucasus. Here order has not been disturbed.

The Cossack Federation in North Caucasus is at present maintaining a neutral attitude to the rest of Russia, organizing the administration of its own territories and forming a nucleus for the reconstruction of Russia.

General Dukhonin has issued an order to the army explaining his reasons for refusing to negotiate an armistice.

Elections to the Constituent Assembly begin in Petrograd today and last for three days. All parties are vigorously agitating and the Cadets, in particular, have held a large number of successful meetings throughout the week. One effect of the Bolsheviki methods of government has been to increase sympathy for the Cadets, and this probably explains the persistent efforts of the party in power to suppress the Cadet agitation.

An attempt which was made the other evening to print a paper in the office of the Rech was checked by the arrival of Red Guards with bombs. A small evening paper issued by the Cadets yesterday reached a second number, but in the evening Red Guards appeared and confiscated the issue, scattered the type, and seized a quantity of electoral literature. Similar treatment is intermittently extended to the Moderate Socialist parties.

In Petrograd there are nineteen lists of candidates. Thirteen members are to be elected, and the representation is proportionate to the percentage of votes polled by each party. Suffrage is universal, in that it extends to all adults, male and female, over 20, and to all soldiers on active service over 18. The elections will be conducted in the towns by the municipal authorities, and in the country by the rural Councils. In many constituencies preparations for the elections have been interrupted by civil war and the elections accordingly postponed, but it is estimated that within the next three days 40 members out of a total of 653 will be elected.

The Bolsheviki are confident of victory, but it is wholly impossible to forecast the issue, in view of the variety of electoral conditions and the enigmatic attitude of the peasantry.

ANNOYED BY SECRET PAPERS.

French Press Accuses Bolsheviki of Favoring Germany.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Considerable irritation is shown by the newspapers over the publication of Russian State secret documents by the Maximalists, who are accused of collecting those which they think most likely to embarrass the Allies and supply Germany with arguments.

The note of Oct. 9, written by M. Tereschenko, then Russian Foreign Minister, to Secretary of State Lansing, thanking the Secretary for not having had David R. Francis, the American Ambassador to Russia, associate himself on behalf of his Government with the step taken by the Italian, French, and British Ambassadors in demanding the construction of a firm power to reorganize the Russian Army, is considered amusing by the Journal des Débats. "If Mr. Francis did not visit Premier Kerensky with his three colleagues," says the newspaper, "it was only because he received his Government's authorization to do so too late." The Temps refers to the same incident as "seeming but falsely however, to put the United States in contradition with the other allies."

High Distinction At A Low Price: Evening Suits, $35

IN this season of sly cheapening, a nameless Tailed or Tuxedo Suit at $35 is a blank (maybe, a blankety-blank), but a Stein-Bloch Tailed or Tuxedo Suit at $35 gives high distinction to a low price.

Quite aside from the soft, sleek smartness and exemplary tailoring of the clothes, which make them the ultimate ultra for "life's finer moments," the mere Woolens and Labor alone cannot be renewed at $35.

Evening Waistcoats of flattering fit and sprucest style, Carlton, $5; Regent, $7.50; Plaza, $10.

under, but there was no trace of wavering, and the long lines breathed a spirit of eagerness.

In another zone a sight which stirred the blood was that of solid ranks of allied reinforcements crowding the roads. Already they were within sound of the rumble of the guns, and the "Boom! Boom!" from the battle in the distance could be heard above the gallop of the cavalry, the tramp of the infantry, and the clamor of the batteries and supply trains.

It was a dark day, with a gray sky, but the whole scene seemed to lighten up as the color of the Italian gray was tinted everywhere with British khaki and French blue. The allied troops had been on the march eight days, making more than fifteen miles a day.

Allied Troops "in the Pink."

The French reinforcements were first seen in force. They were splendid looking young men. One of their officers with whom the correspondent talked and who wore stripes earned by gallantry, said that they had just arrived after a hard forced march, with others following.

Soon these others came in view, and for two miles the party passed through endless lines of French. There were squadrons of cavalry in the road and in the nearby fields, and long lines of troops with artillery trains and supplies. Field kitchens had been set up at one point, and the midday meal was being served. The men looked in the best of condition, and did not show a trace of fatigue from their long march.

Just beyond here the color turned from blue to khaki, as long lines of the British came into sight. In the lead were cyclists, and then came engineer trains. Following were long ranks of infantry, cavalry, and artillery. At one point headquarters had been temporarily established along the road, and guards were at the gate as the officers went and came. Further on a British General and his staff, all finely mounted, were cantering forward.

The artillery horses were especially marked for their sleek, well-fed condition, and the observers noted how all the brass work of the guns and equipment glinted with the thorough care it had had. One Engineer Corps was rumbling to the rear with huge pontoons on camions, as it had been found these were not needed, but all the rest of the force was moving forward.

The men looked as hard as nails despite their steady marches. Both officers and men were eager to hear how the fight was going and were anxious to get forward.

Talks with these men along the road gave an idea of what they had been doing. They had been marching steadily for several days. The start was made every day at 3 A. M., with an early breakfast, and with rations subsequently served at 11 A. M. and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Along the route their headquarters were in village schools, houses, barns, and public buildings. The men carried loads of about seventy pounds, including rifles, blankets, kits, and the day's rations. This looked like a heavy load as the long ranks ranged along the roads, but the men did not mind it, although they said the long marches had been hard on the feet. The regimental bands were in line, and Italy may hear music again if things go right. All the Italian bands have disappeared in the fierce carnage of recent days, and the bandsmen are charging with bayonets.

The whole appearance of the British and French gave a feeling of great power because of the perfect organization and ardor of all ranks, accentuated by the timeliness with which they were arriving in the vicinity of the battle front.

TOMBA THE CRITICAL POINT.

German Success There Would Threaten the Southern Plain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Telegraphing under date of Sunday, Ward Price, British press representative at Italian Headquarters, says:

"The first encounters in what is likely to be an important battle have been taking place during the last three days at the point where the right wing of the Italian front forms a curious angle. The river on one saide and the mountains on the other form its two sides, and at the apex the enemy at present is making the most determined effort to break through. Within this angle is a dead, flat plain, whose only irregular feature is a mile-long mound whose sodded top rises into a number of small peaks.

"This last outlying foothill of the mountains is called Montello, [on the west bank of the lower Piave,] and should be remembered as a feature of importance in the situation that is developing. Except where Montello masks the nearer view, the rich, well-watered, level plain stretches monotonously away as far as the eye can carry, and the Germans who are now on part of the top of Monte Tomba, to the northwest, can see, on a clear day, to where Venice stands, in the middle of her glittering lagoon.

"If the enemy could come down from Monte Tomba into the plain immediately below he would seriously threaten the defenses of the Piave, since would be cutting across the line of supply and retreat for the Italian troops holding the river bank."

NEWS PRINT PRICES AGREED ON FOR WAR

Manufacturers Reach Settlement with Government After Leaders Are Fined.

ASSOCIATION IS DISSOLVED

Publishers of Country Will Avoid Increase of $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 in Paper Cost Next Year.

By an agreement concluded yesterday in the Federal District Court between the United States Government, acting through the Department of Justice, and news print paper manufacturers dominating their industry in this country and Canada, the news print paper situation, which had been uncertain and menacing for more than a year, was brought to an adjustment by which all interests were guaranteed safety and security for the duration of the war. The agreement, which is universally regarded as one of the most far-reaching and adequately devised war measures yet effected, provides for the fixing by the Government of manufacturers' maximum prices, and compels the dissolution of the News Print Manufacturers' Association, the so-called "Paper Trust."

As a prerequisite for the agreement demanded by the Government five of the six manufacturers indicted for criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust law came into court, and pleaded nolo contendere to the charge against them, and paid fines imposed by Judge Mayer of $2,500 each in the case of four and $1,000 in the case of the fifth. The agreement means that the newspaper publishers of the country will avoid increases in the price of paper amounting to between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 next year, in the opinion of an expert in the paper market identified with the publishing interests.

According to the agreement, the maximum price of news print paper at the mills, bought in rolls in carload lots, is to be $3 a hundred pounds for the first three months of 1918, after which period a maximum price to be determined by the Federal Trade Commission and subject to review by the three Judges of the United States Circuit Court of this district, is to prevail for the duration of the war and for three months thereafter, unless it is altered by the commission and the court. The maximum prices for paper bought in sheets and in less than carload lots are fixed tentatively at from $3.25 to $3.75 a hundred pounds, and will be finally determined by the same procedure.

The $3 price will affect the larger publishers of the country, and is approximately what most of them are paying at present, although it is less than some have been forced to pay. Present prices represent a large increase over the prices paid before 1917. In the future, by a clause in the agreement, the middleman's price will be limited to a reasonable increase over the manufacturer's price. Thus the saving to the hundreds of smaller publishers throughout the country is expected to be one of the chief benefits of the agreement.

Fines for Officials.

Those who paid the larger fine were George H. Mead, President of the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills and other paper manufacturing corporations, as well as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the News Print Manufacturers' Association; Philip T. Dodge, President of the International Paper Company; Edward W. Backus, President of the Minnesota and Ontario Power Company and other corporations, and George Chahoon, Jr., President of the Laurentide Company and other corporations. All were members of the Executive Committee of the News Print Manufacturers' Association. Frank J. Sensenbrenner, Vice President of the Kimberly-Clark Company, and formerly Western adviser for the manufacturers' association, was fined only $1,000 because he had not been connected with the newsprint paper business and manipulation for more than a year. The indictment of Gordias H. P. Gould, President of the Donnaconna Paper Company, and also a member of the Executive Committee of the manufacturers' association, was dismissed because the Government admitted that its evidence against him was not so strong as that against the other defendants. Action on the indictment against Alexander Smith, a Chicago banker, said to have been a financial party to the activities of the manufacturers' association, and the only other defendant in the criminal proceedings, was deferred because Mr. Smith is doing Red Cross work in France, and his lawyer had no authority to enter a plea for him.

While pleading nolo contedere, the five defendants who were fined insisted, through their counsel, that they were innocent of criminal action and were inspired purely by patriotic motives in not contending against the Government's charge at this time. John B. Stanchfield, one of the counsel, quoted a court decision to show that one pleading nolo contendere, which means simply that a defendant does not fight a case, is not tantamount to a plea of guilty. He and his associates said that their clients were not agraid of a trial, that they felt confident of winning in a trial, but that they did not wish to continue a controversy with their Government while it was at war.

Herbert C. Smyth, special assistant to the Attorney General in the case, made light of the defendant's excuse of patriotism and said that it was singular that they had become so patriotic only after the Federal Trade Commission, Congress, and the Department of Justice had marshaled their forces to prevent their profiteering.

The importance of the agreement and all that went with it extends far beyond the field of the news print industry, in the opinion of the authorities. Mr. Hyman pointed out yesterday that the dissolution of the News Print Manufacturers' Association set a precedent for Government action against any other of the hundreds of "co-operative" business associations in the country detected violating the Sherman Anti-Trust law. As is the case with numbers of such associations, the News Print Manufacturers' Association was not admittedly a price-fixing body. It differed from the old-fashioned trust or combination, in that it was not incorporated, its members were supposed to retain their individuality and fredom of action, and its avowed purpose was to bring co-operation among competitors.

Another important feature of yesterday's proceedings, pointed out by Mr. Smyth, was that for the first time the Federal Trade Commission was recognized in court as a price-fixing body. The action of the court was considered as establishing a precedent that will almost certainly have important developments.

In four particulars, according to Mr. Hyman, the agreement has advantages over that attempted last Spring by the Federal Trade Commission in conference with the paper manufacturers and over contemplated action by Congress. In the first place, a sufficient number of Canadian companies to insure the American maximum prices in the Canadian market were brought into the agreement, and, furthermore, Gordias H. P. Gould and Edward W. Backus, whose refusal to sign the former agreement was largely responsible for its failure, became parties to yesterday's settlement. Also, the former agreement was drawn up to continue only for six months, whereas the present agreement will be in force until three months after the end of the war.

The principal price of 3 cents a pound, or $3 a hundred pounds, is half a cent more a pound than that stipulated by the Federal Trade Commission in the earlier agreement, but the commission was consulted before the present agreement was drawn up and gave the opinion that the increased cost of manufacture made the three-cent price fair and equitable, as the two and one-half cent one had been last Spring.

Named Eight Defeadants.

The petition named eight men and forty-four companies as defendants in the dissolution suit. The men were the seven indicted for criminal offense, and George F. Steele, Secretary-Manager of the News Print Manufacturers' Association, who escaped indictment because of his testimony before the Grand Jury. To emphasize the extent to which the defendant companies controlled the market, the petition stated that the total daily output of news print paper in the United States and Canada was 6,300 tons, with an approximate value of $250,000. The approximate value of the output of the defendant companies was estimated at $225,000. Mr. Smyth then said that the defendants would not fight the suit as a decree abolishing the News Print Manufacturers' Association had been drawn up with the consent of defendants George H. Mead, Philip T. Dodge, George Chahoon, Jr., Gordias H. P. Gould, Edward W. Backus, Alexander Smith, Frank J. Sensenbranner, Abitibi Power and Paper Company, Ltd., Belgo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd., Brompton Pulp and Paper Company, Donnaconna Paper Company, Ltd., Gould Paper Company, International Paper Company, Kimberly-Clark Company, Laurentide Company, Ltd., Minnesota and Ontario Power Company, Price Bros. & Co., Ltd., and Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd.; and upon the unanimous resolution of the Executive Committee of the News Print Manufacturers' Association.

Mr. Smyth added that the overwhelming interests and influence of those defendants agreeing to the decree justified it as against all the defendants, and pointed out that the court could proceed against any defendants who had not yet signified agreement to the decree. Judge Mayer then signed the decree, which was as follows:

1. Defendants by becoming and acting as members of the News Print Manufacturers' Association have entered into and engaged in an unlawful combination in restraint of trade and commerce in news print paper among the several States and with foreign nations in violation of the act of July 2, 1890, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

2. The News Print Manufacturers' Association is an unlawful combination of the defendants in restraint of the trade and commerce in news print paper among the several States and with foreign nations, in violation of said act of July 2, 1890; and said News Print Manufacturers' Association shall be and it hereby is, dissolved.

3. Each corporate defendant is hereby perpetually enjoined from carrying into further effect the combination hereby dissolved and from entering into or engaging in any like combination having for purpose or effect (a) the elimination or restriction by concert of action of competition in news print paper, or (b) the concerted working for materially higher prices for news print paper, or (c) the establishment by concert of action of uniform prices, terms, or conditions for the sale of news print paper, or (d) the concerted working to discourage others from manufacturing news print paper.

4. Each corporate defendant is hereby perpetually enjoined from entering into any combination, agreement, understanding or concert of action with any other corporate defendant or with any other manufacturer of news print paper, having for purpose or effect (a) to limit or restrict itself as to the customers to whom it should sell or offer to sell news print paper; (b) to limit or restrict itself as to the quality or quantity of news print paper it should make or sell; (c) to limit or restrict itself as to the service it should render to its customers or the prices, terms, or conditions upon which it should sell or offer to sell news print paper.

5. The injunctions herein contained against the corporate defendants shall apply to and be binding upon such corporations and their respective officers, Directors, agents and employes, and all other persons, firms, or corporations acting under, for, or in behalf of them or any of them, or claiming so to act.

6. Each individual defendant is hereby perpetually enjoined from entering into, engaging in, or carrying into further effect, any contract, combination, or conspiracy having for purpose or effect to regulate, dominate, or restrict the trade or commerce in news print paper of any person, firm, or corporation other than the firms or corporations with which such individual defendant is or may be connected as an officer, agent, or employe.

7. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the defendants from entering into and performing a certain contract of even date with the Attorney General of the United States, as Trustee, made for the purpose of meeting the existing conditions, and by the present state of war in the United States. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed an adjudication for or against the exercise of control by any corporate defendant of any of its subsidiaries as set forth in the petition, nor for or against the right of certain of the defendants or their subsidiaries to avail themselves of the services of the Canadian Export Paper Company, Ltd., or the G. H. Mead Company, or the Minnesota & Ontario Power Company in the manner and to the extent now being availed of, as set forth in the petition herein.

8. The court retains jurisdiction to proceed against the defendants not hereby consenting to this decree, and to enforce this decree, and to enable any of the parties to apply to the court for modification hereof, if it be hereafter shown to the satisfaction of the court that by reason of changed conditions or changes in the statute law of the United States the provisions hereof have become inappropriate or inadequate to maintain competitive conditions in the interstate or foreign trade or commerce of the United States in news print paper, or have become unduly oppressive to defendants or any of them and are no longer necessary to secure or maintain competitive conditions in such trade or commerce.

The agreement by which the maximum prices of news print paper are to be fixed was acknowledged in open court by counsel for all of the defendants in the criminal suit, who individually control 55 per cent. of the news print paper output of Canada and the United States, and Mr. Smyth stated that its adoption by the trade was assured. It is as follows:

This agreement, made this 26th day of November, 1917, between Thomas W. Gregory, the Attorney General of the United States, and his successor, or successors in office, as trustee, acting herein in behalf of each and every individual, firm, or corporation publishing a newspaper and using news print paper in his or its business in the United States that now is, or during the life of this agreement shall become a customer of any of the parties of the second part to this agreement, party of the first part, and the undersigned engaged in the manufacture and sale of news print paper, parties of the second part: Witnesseth:

Whereas, Heretofore differences have arisen between the manufacturers and users of news print paper as to the price and terms at which such paper should be sold, and such differences have heretofore been brought to the attention of the Federal Trade Commission; and

Whereas, The Department of Justice of the United States has instituted, or is about to institute, proceedings in equity under Section 4 of the act of July 2, 1890, entitled an act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies; and

Whereas, It is desirable in the present condition of affairs in the United States that some adjustment of the should be had, it is news print paper should be had, it is agreed between the parties hereto as follows:

First—The United States may file a petition in equity to enjoin any operations of the News Print Paper Manufacturers' Association and of the manufacturers who are members of that association, in so far as such operations are claimed to constitute a restraint of trade. In such proceeding the parties of the second part will consent to a decree as prayed for, reserving the right, at the time such consent to a decree is presented to the court, to make such statements, oral or written, not impairing the binding force of the decree as they are advised may be necessary to protect their interests. The petition may also pray for the dissolution of the News Print Manufacturers' Association, and if a request be made to that end, the parties of the second part will consent thereto.

Second—The price of news print paper on the basis of 24 by 36 inches in size weighing approximately thirty-two pounds per 500 sheets, on all new contracts from now to Jan. 1, 1918, and on all contracts in existence on Jan. 1, 1918, or made thereafter, and on all sales and deliveries, in the United States, shall not exceed the following amounts:

(a) From Jan. 1, 1918, until April 1, 1918, for such newsprint paper in rolls, $3 per 100 pounds, free on board at the mill in carload lots, and $3.25 per 100 pounds, free on board at the mill in less than carload lots, and for such newsprint paper in sheets, $3.50 per 100 pounds, free on board at the mill in carload lots, and $3.75 per 100 pounds, free on board at the mill in less than carload lots. The foregoing subdivision (2-a) shall not apply to the Minnesota and Ontario Power Company nor the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd.; but as said two companies, the Federal Trade Commission, after due hearing and investigation and subject to review as provided in subdivision 2-b, shall fix the just and reasonable maximum prices and terms of contract for said two companies from Jan. 1, 1918, until April 1, 1918, effective Jan. 1, 1918.

(b) After April 1, 1918, the just and reasonable maximum prices and terms of contracts for the sale of all or any newsprint paper shall be determined and fixed by the Federal Trade Commission, after due hearing and investigation, subject to review by the Circuit Judges of the Second Circuit, who, if of opinion that the prices or terms of contract fixed by the commission are unjust or unreasonable, shall determine what are just and reasonable. Such Judges shall have the right to hear any pertinent matter considered by the Federal Trade Commission, and additional evidence or matter if it shall be shown to their satisfaction that such additional evidence or matter is material, and that there were reasonable grounds for the failure to adduce the same in the proceedings before the commission. The maximum prices and terms of contract so determined shall continue during the war and for three months thereafter, with the right to any of the parties of the second part or to the Department of Justice to ask the Federal Trade Commission for an investigation and determination of new prices or terms of contract for such period conditions arise which in the opinion of either make it desirable to ask for any change in price or terms of contract, subject to the same right of review. In determining the prices to be effective April 1, 1918, the Federal Trade Commission shall consider all pertinent conditions, including those prevailing during the months of January, February, and March, 1918, to the end that the prices when announced shall cover the facts as near the time of the effective date of the new prices as is possible.

Third—The parties of the second part, during the life of this agreement, shall offer their news print paper for sale in accordance with the provision of this agreement. In case of sale by written contract said paragraph shall be embodied therein, either wholly or by sufficient reference thereto; but if any customer of any of the parties of the second part, who is offered paper in accordance with the provision of this agreement, prefers to make or retain a contract for a fixed price for a definite period, and any one of the parties of the second part, after duly notifying the Attorney General of his or its intention in the matter, shal make or retain such contract soley in deference to the wishes of the consumer, such agreement so made shall not be construed as a violation of this agreement, even though the price which the consumer pays in furtherance of his own interest is in excess of the prices fixed in this agreement.

Fourth—The parties of the second part agree that to the extent of their power they will cause such of their news print paper as is ordinarily purchased by the so-called small publishers through the intervention of jobbers, dealers, or other middlemen to be delivered to such small publishers at not to exceed reasonable and just prices and terms of sale to be established by the Federal Trade Commission, subject to review by the circuit judges in the manner aforesaid.)

Fifth—The party of the first part, or his successor in office, as trustee of an express trust, may bring any appropriate action, suit or proceeding in law or in equity to enforce this agreement on behalf of any person, firm, or corporation injured or damaged by a violation of the terms thereof, and may proceed by preliminary injunction or otherwise to restrain violations of the terms hereof.

Sixth—Books of account and records of parties of the second part and of all corporations or other instrumentalities owned or controlled by them shall be open to inspection of the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission during the life of this agreement, upon reasonable notice, in so far as said books and records relate to the manufacture and sale of newsprint paper.

Seventh—The liability of the parties of the second part hereunder is several and not joint. Any manufacturer of newsprint paper may become a party to this agreement by signing the same or a counterpart hereof; all counterparts hereof shall be deemed one and the same instrument.

In witness weherof, each of the parties of the second part has caused its corporate name and seal to be hereunto affixed by its proper officers thereunto duly authorized, and has set after its name the approximate present daily tonnage of newsprint paper which it is subjecting to the terms of this agreement.

In accepting the plea of nolo contendere and entering into the agreement with the indicted manufacturers, the Government agreed that none of the defendants in the criminal action should be sent to prison, but Mr. Smyth urged the court to impose the maximum fine of $5,000 on each. He went into the history of the News Print Manufacturers' Association an dsought to show by letters exchanged among its members that it was seeking to throttle the publishers as a power in the market and control output and prices.

Defendans Pay Their Fines.

All of the defendants paid their fines in cash. Their counsel filed answers to the civil petition and criminal suit in which their patriotism and other reasons for consenting to the proceedings were affirmed, while their innocence of wrongdoing was reasserted.

Frank P. Glass, Chairman of the Committee on Paper of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, gave out a statement, in which he said:

The Department of Justice has shown great firmness and sagacity in its attitude of willingness to accept a distinct vindication of the majesty of the law without abnormal rigidity or desire to administer extreme punishment. The department has obtained a satisfactory plea from the defendants, and also an admirable agreement for the relief of the newspapers, which have been so seriously affected by the law's violation. And relief is the chief end of law.

The manufacturers have shown their respect for law by making terms instead of fighting to a finish. The plea of nolle contendere entered by most of those indicted is the moral equivalent of admission of guilt; the difference between it and the general plea of guilt largely relates to the punishment meted out. The consent of the manufacturers to the Federal decree involves a specific admission of past disobedience of law, and includes a solemn promise of law abiding in the future. They have laid the foundation for permanent co-operation with their customers. This course of enlightened selfishness is one they might have had the vision long ago to have adopted in place of one of unreasonable and oppressive profiteering. It is to be hoped that they have finally caught the national pace of big business in patriotic co-operation throughout the war with the Government.

The publishers of the country will thoroughly appreciate the attainment of the two outstanding purposes the Paper Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association has kept in view for eighteen months, namely, the establishment of the fact that there has been an illegal combination in the restraint of the print paper trade, and the concession of the necessity of Government fixation of prices.

Mr. Hyman announced that the Government was prepared to prosecute the case against Mr. Smith if he should stand on his plea of not guilty, refusing to plead nolo contendere. As soon as his counsel, former Judge John Barton Payne of Chicago, hears from him, this part of the case will be decided. Whatever results, the agreeement with the manufacturere will not be affected, Mr. Hyman said.

MEANS PUT ON TRIAL; HARD TO GET A JURY

Most of the Inhabitants of Cabarrus County Have Formed an Opinion in the Case.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. C., Nov. 26.—It is regarded as extremely doubtful that the taking of testimony in the trial of Gaston B. Means, which started in the Cabarrus County Court here today, can begin before Judge Cline orders the Thanksgiving recess. Indeed, it is going to be exceedingly difficult to get a jury at all, of which circumstance judicial cognizance was taken today when, after a brief session, Judge Cline ordered a recess until tomorrow morning to allow the summoning of an additional venire of 150, men, from which court officials hope to select twelve jurors who will decide whether the defendant shot and killed Mrs. Maude A. King, the wealthy New York widow, at Blackwelder Springs, near here, on the night of Aug. 20.

There is a widespread opinion among those familiar with court affairs in Cabarrus County that it is going to prove a hard task to find in Cabarrus County twelve men who are not prejudiced, or who have not formed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. It was for this reason that the State unsuccessfully sought to obtain a change of venue.

The three hours' session this morning was devoted to Judge Cline's charge to the Grand Jury and to the questioning of talesmen, whose names already were in the jury box. Most of the talesmen summoned are from remote sections of the county and were unable to appear until tomorrow.

When brought from the county jail this morning Means faced a crowd that filled the courtroom. Few women were present. As he passed to his seat beside his half dozen lawyers Means smiled, and he appeared calm throughout the session. His wife joined him and apparently was as composed as her husband. Sitting with Solicitor Hayden Clement were Assistant District Attorney Dooling of New York and other officials from his office, and also officials and witnesses from Chicago.

Next to the difficulty of obtaining a jury, the greatest interest of the day was developed when it was announced that Mrs. Anna L. Robinson of Asheville, the aged mother of the dead woman, would appear as a witness for the prosecution.

Just what line the defense will adopt has not yet been disclosed. A plea of "not guilty" was entered this morning, but from intimations that have been dropped the attorneys for Means will await the closing of the State's case before adopting any particular line of defense.

An agent of the Federal Department of Justice was present again today. The Government's interest in the case has not been disclosed, but New York officials have said that papers taken in a raid on Means's New York apartment connected him with German propaganda in this country.

When court adjourned today Means was again locked up in the county jail.

BRING CLEMENCEAU INTO MALVY AFFAIR

New French Premier Was First to Accuse Ex-Minister Now Under Charges.

MAY HAVE TO FACE ISSUE

His Action in Chamber Today Likely to Have Lasting Effect on His Administration.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Not the least of the difficulties confronting the Supreme Allied War Council is the political uncertainty that for the last six months has clouded the French national horizon. For instance, it is now understood that Premier Clemenceau and General Foch are to be the French representatives in the council of allied chiefs, constituted with practically supreme powers, although only meeting from time to time to discuss and co-ordinate plans proposed by military, diplomatic, and economic advisers.

But when the idea of this council first took shape four weeks ago at Rapallo, it was Painlevé, instead of Clemenceau, who was the senior French representative. A month or two before that it would have been Ribot. A month or two hence it may no longer be Clemenceau.

Although Clemenceau has been in power only one week, although he was raised to that power by the loud, insistent demand of a great majority of the French nation, it already is a fact that a resolute attempt is being made in the Chamber of Deputies to undermine him—an attempt no less real or less dangerous because it is ostensibly not directed against him at all. The matter in question is the "affaire Malvy," which contributed very greatly to Painlevé's downfall, and which, unless settled one way or the other, threatens to vitiate the whole political atmosphere interminably.

Last Thursday the attacks against Malvy culminated in a Phillipic by Daudet in Le Action Française, which accused him definitely of treason. Malvy thereupon demanded in the Chamber that as an ex-Minister his case should be judged by the Senate sitting as a high court. A committee of thirty-three members of the Chamber was chosen to decide whether his case should be submitted to the Senate, but unfortunately the correct procedure in such a case is so vague and precedent so uncertain that it is now very much of a question what would be the Senate's powers and how the investigation could be conducted. The confusion appears inextricable, and it seems likely that the Government will be forced to intervene.

That is the crux of the question as regards Clemenceau, for it was the new Premier himself who initiated the attacks on Malvy in person by a phrase in his famous Senate speech three months ago: "I accuse you, Mr. Malvy, of betraying France's interests."

On the other hand, it has always been a political axiom in France that the Minister of the interior controls the elections, because it is his prerogative to nominate the departmental prefects and local authorities generally, so that the Figaro was able to say yesterday: "It is not to be expected that Malvy will fail to find supporters in the Chamber, whereof fully two hundred Deputies owe him their election."

Back of Malvy and his friends are the Socialists who refused to join Clemenceau's Government, and are unwearied in their efforts to bring about the downfall of the man whom they regard as hostile to organized labor and its aspirations. Hitherto Clemenceau has been able to refrain from committing himself on the whole question—his policy has been to leave the Chamber to decide the matter for itself. But it is not unlikely that tomorrow he may be forced to face the issue in the midst of an excited and overheated political atmosphere. On the result of his decision may depend the future of his government.

URGES SUFFRAGISTS TO MEET WAR ISSUE

"Quit Pussyfooting!" Cries Mrs. Street, Demanding Open Declaration Against Pacifists.

FEARS EAST SIDE VOTERS

Mrs. Whitehouse Announces Plan to Co-ordinate the Campaign for the Education of Women Voters.

For the first time since election the pro-German-pacifist issue was brought squarely to the attention of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party yesterday at one of its own meetings. A woman's demand that the women, now that they had won the vote, "quit pussyfooting" and meet the issue, coupled with her assertion that Ritz-Carlton and Metropolitan Opera House gatherings of suffragists were not representative of women of the State, caused something like consternation among the women present, many of them leading suffragists.

Although the attack made by Mrs. E. L. Street aroused much argument among those present it was not handled directly on the floor of the meeting. Other speakers quickly turned the discussion to the alloted topic of educating women voters, and the incident officially was ignored.

Privately, however, the women who had gathered in the Lenox Theatre quickly aligned themselves on one side or the other. Some insisted that Mrs. Street's speech was an accident and an incident; others sided with her and praised her courage in turning the light on the pacifist issue.

These women felt that so long as the Socialists themselves were proclaiming loudly that they alone had brought about the suffrage victory, with every indication that they would demand reward for their support, the party leaders might as well face the challenge, deal with an element of the party which they are satisfied is but a minority, and end all possibility of anti-war scandal.

In this belief they were fortified by their realization that there have been increasing rumblings of Socialist discontent ever since the Socialists failed to get representation at the Metropolitan Opera House victory celebration, discontent which culminated on Sunday night in Morris Hillquit's open declaration at his own "victory celebration" that rich women who denied that the Socialists were responsible for the suffrage victory were to be laughed at.

It was the educational section of the Suffragist Party, formerly the Equal Franchise Society, which met to discuss the party's share in getting women ready for the new responsibility of voting. Earnest discussion along that line had proceeded quietly for some time and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, State Chairman, had spoken and departed, when Mrs. Street arose and said:

"Madame, Chairman, I feel that this case for preparedness is the most vital thing before any of us, and the thing we ought to discuss. I think we need to answer the call to make America safe for woman suffrage. Ever since our victory at the polls I have been hoping that there would come forth a real leader of the women, a real stateswoman.

"We need such a woman; all the women of the State need her, as I imagine the Russian people today want a leader. We want her to draw together all the various factions of women. We must meet this question of what are the women going to do. Are we going to allow the emotional, unthinking women of the east side, the pacifist, Socialist women, to use our wonderful new power? Are we going to let our own Lenines and Trotzkys make a tool of the woman's party? Are we going to let them exercise the right of suffrage and use the influence of the vote for their own designs and participate in public affairs with even more enthusiasm and positiveness than do the women who stand with the country for the things that are right?

Demands End of "Pussyfooting."

"We must be the very first to take the upholding of our liberties into our own hands, and we must draw together all loyal factions of women that we may stand solidly against the disloyal. I think the time to stop pussyfooting has come. I have realized that we have been quietly catering to the men voters, but being now free, being voters ourselves, let us come out boldly on this thing. Where do we stand?

"If the country stood where it did last April, if there was to be a vote or a casting of influence on the question of entering the war and on the question of conscription, where would the women stand?"

Every woman in the auditorium was gazing at Mrs. Street, and all over the hall there was a hum of excited whispers when Mrs. Howard Mansfield, who presided, interrupted her to say:

"I am sure we are all loyal and patriotic."

"I hope the great majority of women are," Mrs. Street answered. Then as further protests of patriotism arose from various parts of the room, she went on:

"Yes, you women are loyal, but the suffrage party that has been meeting in the Metropolitan Opera House and the Ritz-Carlton Hotel is not representative of the women of the State. I can't help fearing that the uneducated, unthinking women are apt to be led astray by pacifism and socialism. I may be wrong."

"I hope you are," Mrs. Mansfield told her, and the public side of the incident was over.

The suffrage campaign has created a tremendous demand for political education, and the party hoped through its efforts to raise the whole average of voters, men and women. This the Chairman said without "any feeling of sex antagonism." The party needed, too, she explained, to undertake a large legislative program that little intricacies of the laws might not prevent women from voting.

Mrs. Frederick Nathan wondered whether the antis were to be invited to join in the educational work and, when assured they would be, expressed a belief that "paid courses may be all right, but we ought to have courses for those who don't want to pay." Mrs. Cosgrove urged that a real normal school be established, with six weeks' intensive Summer courses, that women might be qualified to teach civics and politics.

The Educational Section voted to disband, those women who so desire affiliating with the State Committee on Education.

SUFFRAGISTS LOST UP-STATE BY 3,856

Figures of Republican Chairman Show That City Won for Women.

ANTIS BLAME SOCIALISTS

Mrs. James W. Wadsworth Says German-Born Voters Swayed Result in Election.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Anti-suffrage carried up-State in the recent New York elections by 3,856, and the great majority in New York City alone brought victory to the champions of votes for women, according to the recapitulation of election figures made public by New York Republican State Chairman George A. Glynn. Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, in calling attention today to the up-State result, as disclosed by the Glynn figures, repeated and emphasized her charge that "the increased pro-German, pacifist, Socialist vote of 110,000 which went to Morris Hillquit and suffrage in New York City caused the adoption of suffrage by the State as a whole."

Mrs. Wadsworth declared Mr. Glynn, if his figures are correct, should have called attention to the fact that the antis won up-State, and continued:

"In fact, The Suffragist, the official organ of the National Woman's Party, declares that 'this vote in New York City alone would have been enough to swing the majority to the side of suffrage.' Had it not been for these 110,000 German-born voters in New York City who want peace at any price, the anti-suffragists would have carried New York again in 1917, as they carried it in 1915, and as they carried Ohio three times, Michigan twice, and Maine, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, West Virginia, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, and Wisconsin. The majority of the American people, men and women, are opposed to woman suffrage. It is never adopted at the polls except on a wave of socialism or through popular indifference."

The Glynn figures showed that the total State vote for suffrage was 673,389 and the total against 584,549, the combined vote being 257,938 and the suffrage majority 88,840. In the city, Mrs. Wadsworth pointed out, the total vote was 575,226, of which 334,011 was for and 241,315 against suffrage, a majority in the city of 92,696. The city majority, therefore, was 3,856 greater than the total majority.

Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Chairman of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party, refused last night to comment on Republican State Chairman Glynn's election recapitulation, which indicates that suffrage failed to carry up-State by 3,856 votes, being saved by the huge majority in the city. She pointed out that the Glynn figures were not official.

Suffrage leaders have attempted ever since election to refute charges that the socialist-pacifist-suffrage vote in New York City won for suffrage by pointing to a slight majority up State which unofficial figures indicated. They said last night that their total majority, according to their own tabulations, would be larger than the Glynn total of 88,840, and sufficiently larger than the city majority of 92,696 to show a small majority up State on top of the local majority. Asked how they would seek to refute the charge of having won by a pro-German vote in the city, should the Glynn figures prove correct, suffrage leaders again pointed to the fact that they had won in Fusion election districts—a fact which they said refuted the charge that their strongholds lay in the pacifist districts, where Hillquit polled great numbers of radical votes, which the radicals themselves assert all went for suffrage.

HOUSE ENTERTAINED BY GABRIEL HANOTAUX

Head of Mission Later Confers with French Finance Minister —Economic Council Plans.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The Marquis de Chambrun, who was a member of the French Mission to the United States, today visited Colonel Edward M. House, head of the American Mission. Later Colonel House, William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador, and Henri Bergson, member of the French Academy were guests at luncheon of Gabriel Hanotaux, President of the Franco-American Commission for the development of political, economic, literary, and art relations.

Colonel House this afternoon saw M. Klotz, the French Minister of Finance, with whom he discussed financial affairs. This conference, in effect, was a continuation of that held with M. Klotz at the time of his recent visit to London.

Admiral Benson conferred with Vice Admiral de Bon, Chief of the French Naval General Staff, with reference to the general naval situation, but particularly concerning the disembarkation of troops and supplies at French ports. Admiral Benson and Commander Carter later visited the aviation camp and witnessed tests and flights of various types of naval aircraft.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—In connection with information obtained today that the Inter-Allied War Council would meet in Versailles, it became known that the proposal to create in addition an Inter-Allied Council which would devote its activities to political and economic features was receiving serious attention. The chief function of this body would be to determine the needs of the various Allies and to distribute money and supplies to them in accordance with their requirements.

Lack of authority in such matters has caused confusion in the past, and the United States Government has had its share of embarrassment in this connection in being unable to determine the proportionate measure of help to be accorded to each of its European partners in hostilities. This Government has been unwilling to assume responsibility for decisions on account of its lack of information.

It is intimated that Lord Northcliffe, head of the British mission in this country; André Tardieu, Chief of the French mission, and Colonel E. M. House, President Wilson's special representative abroad, are agreed that the economic and political council must be created.

The political functions of such a council, it is pointed out, would relate not alone to the Allied countries, but also to neutral countries and the world situation in general as it might affect the conduct of the war.

The formation of the economic council is expected by Entente diplomats here to result from the Paris conference, which will open next Thursday. This body would pass upon every question relating to the assignment of ships for the transportation of war supplies, and also direct the filling of orders in concordance with military requirements in particular countries.

DR. KUNITZER DIVORCED.

Details Withheld in Case of Former Hospital Director.

Announcement was made yesterday that Dr. Robert Kunitzer, formerly managing director of Sydenham Hospital, had been divorced in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Cora Kunitzer. They had been married more than twenty years. Counsel in the case declined to make public any of the details of the case, which have been sealed, but it was learned that the suit was not heard in New York County.

Dr. Kunitzer gained publicity when charges were made against him in 1910 before the County Medical Society that he had connived at the falsification of records of Sydenham Hospital to support the claim of Dr. Louis Anton Ewald that the latter had performed a rare operation. The medical society had Dr. Kunitzer's case before it for several years, and then permitted him to resign in 1913.

MRS. DE SAULLES AS WITNESS IN TRIAL

of the shadows of smiles that appeared on her lips from time to time, her remarkable composure would probably have left on those who heard her testify the impression that her apparent icy calm was deeply rooted, had it not been for a remarkable series of letters which were introduced by her. Of all the persons about her during her married life, she confided only in one, a nursemaid, Ethel Whitesides, later Mrs. John O'Neill.

She gave no hint of her troubles to her mother or to her sister and brother in Chile. Her reproaches to her husband were so gently voiced in the letters to him which are on record that they are in reality excuses for him. She said nothing to her husband's friends and relatives. Evidently pride made it impossible for her to admit to any one, even to her own mother, that there was the slightest cloud to her married life. But to her baby's nurse she confided her woes without reserve. Several years after the nurse had left her and married, she was still the only human being to whom Mrs. De Saulles was willing to make known her sorrows.

Early in her testimony yesterday Mrs. De Saulles identified a letter which she had written to her nurse in 1913, shortly after her child had been born. One paragraph of this letter was almost like a keynote or a text for the rest of her testimony. Written when she had been left alone by her husband at the home of his parents in South Bethlehem, Penn., it was the first time she had allowed herself to put on paper what she felt of the manner in which De Saulles had treated her. It was as follows:

She Craved Happiness.

"I don't know why I write all this to you, I, who never talk to any one about myself; but I think it will make little difference to you, who are in the habit of listening to other people's confidences, while it does make a difference to me. When one keeps one's feelings pent up so long one gets bitter, oh, so bitter, that it frightens me. I have fought against this, and keep on fighting. I am so young, and I want to be happy; I try to think of the future, of more cheerful days, making imaginary plans for a little home, beautiful and refined, peaceful and sweet, for my baby boy to grow up in, but something in me keeps on crying: What's the use of hoping that way? Who was ever known to be happy in this world? Oh, how much I want to be happy!"

The letters between these two friends continued from time to time up to the present. One written by Mrs. De Saulles to her confidant, just after she had commenced proceedings for a divorce and before a trip to Europe which her brother and sister had compelled her to take for the sake of her health, indicates how the unhappy young woman continued to find relief for her feelings in confidences to the nurse, which she felt debarred from making to others. In this she speaks of the dread, which later, she said, became intolerable, that her divorced husband in every way possible was poisoning the mind of their child against her and paving the way for a court action in which he might later gain complete possession of the boy by persuading the child to choose him instead of her. In this letter, written in August, 1916, she said, after telling of her plans to go to London:

"The boy will remain here. His father, in every visit he makes to him, influences him so against me that he is now very hard to manage, and now Mrs. Mooney has adopted an extraordinary attitude, as though the child belonged to her, and it were a great condescension for her to allow the child to talk to me, and when he does it's only to tell me that his Boobie (a pet name for Mrs. Mooney) loves him more than I do, because she has told him that, and he says he would rather be with her. So, you see, the whole atmosphere is an impossible one, and while Mrs. Mooney is with the child I just simply can't stand it being there, too.

"So long as the father is allowed to have the child part of the time I can't let a strange nurse look after Toodles, so, for his good, I'm willing to make the sacrifice of being without him, but, Miss Ethel, I'm just eating my heart out, and, of course, every one thinks I don't care."

In another letter to the nurse a little later Mrs. De Saulles wrote:

"I have thought of you so often and wished for you so much in the horrible nightmare I have been going through. * * * Do you still love me? It is such a relief to feel that some one does."

Tells of Heartaches.

These paragraphs are only samples from a series of letters which made extremely poignant reading to the audience, of which a large part had come prepared to weep at the slightest provocation. Justice Manning sternly repressed open exhibitions of sorrow or sympathy, but handkerchiefs made their appearance all over the courtroom. While the letters of Mrs. De Saulles to the nurse were probably more important as character revelation, those which she wrote to her husband seemed to have the greatest popular effect on the audience. This one, written to De Saulles from South Bethlehem, Penn., on July 25, 1913, was one of the most telling:

"Darling Dad: I have had a great big heartache ever since you told me to 'go to your room,' and I have made up my mind that I would not write to you until you wrote to me, or else spoke one sweet word through the phone, but I have relented, and insteam as going to tell you how barrah and unkind you were. I did not think that ever in your lifetime if you were to live for a hundred years, would you have ordered me out of the room, much less gone away without saying good-bye or where you were going to stay. That—after a thousand and one professions of love! Well, I suppose every one's ideals are shattered, and yours probably also, although I have tried not to shatter yours, even when things did seem so hard. I hope you are having a good time in New York, it must be such fun to play bachelor again; in fact, it must seem quite natural, and the last two years surely are but a horrible nightmare—then so inopportunely the wife's letter comes. Why don't you race with Maurice and enjoy yourself? You will only get nervous and bored in Bethlehem and lose your appetite. Devotedly,

"BLANQUITA."

One letter which caused many tears when it was read in court was written by Mrs. De Saulles in the pretended person of her son from South Bethlehem to the nurse, Mrs. O'Neill, who was away at the time, which was June 17, 1913. This was as foldws:

Toodles Writes to "Nursie."

"Dear Nursie: I was so glad to get your nice letter this morning. Mother told me she had also heard from you, and we are all very glad to see that you have not forgotten us. The weather has been quite delightful up to the last three days, and these have been bad enough to cancel the pleasantness of the former ones.

"I am sorry your 'new baby' has given you so much trouble, but you see, not all babies are such good little boys as I am. I am getting a tooth right in the middle of the upper gum, and I was so glad that no one had noticed it, because I wanted to give them all a surprise, but yesterday, playing 'patty cakes' with mother, I laughed—and—she saw it, and shrieked with glee. It isn't quite out yet, but you can see the little bump and it feels quite sharp. Mother wanted to keep it to herself, but Bessie found out, too. Mother has told her not to say a word, so that when grandfather comes back, I shall laugh, and he will see it and give me a new dress.

"Grandpa has been away since Friday in Atlantic City; father was away all last week and came back on Sunday, and left again Monday morning, and won't be back till next Friday.

"I am sending you a little package, which I hope you will like. I don't mean the package itself, but what's inside.

"I surprise the whole family now, but I'll surprise them more still. I can roll on my back when I'm lying on my tummy, and on to my tummy when I'm on my back. I've sat up of my own accord three times, and now I can put my toes in my mouth whenever I feel like it. Mother is looking for some cool place without mosquitos, as she has been feeling quite sick in this heat, and as soon as she finds one we'll move. I miss you fearfully, but Bessie says that now I am her boy. She is very fond of me and thinks me wonderful. She is quite nice, and I suppose, by and by, when we know each other better, things will run as smoothly as before. She is very willing and does things as mother tells her.

"I hope we shall see you again before long. With much love, ever your little "TOODLES."

The letters were read from time to time during the day as they illustrated phases of the life of the young woman which she was discussing in her testimony. She gave little sign that she was undergoing a severe trial until the lawyer had led her up to the events which occurred immediately before the shooting. Suddenly, as her two lawyers were consulting, she turned toward the Justice, with her hands slightly extended in a pathetic gesture, and said:

"Please, I'm tired!"

"Tell Things in Your Own Way."

Justice Manning said that he was willing to adjourn court at once if she felt that she not endure it further. He asked her counsel if he had many more questions to ask. Mr. Uterhart said that he had a good deal of ground still to cover.

"Would you rather not go on?" asked Justice Manning.

"I will, if it is not too long," she replied.

"Don't you think it would be easier if you would tell things in your own way, instead of answering questions? It would not take so long," said Justice Manning.

"I think it would be just the same," she said after a pause.

Mr. Uterhart continued to ask questions until he had taken the young woman up to the events of the day of the shooting. Justice Manning pressed the lawyer to let Mrs. De Saulles tell of the event itself and what occurred immediately before and after. After describing how she had been told over the telephone that the boy, for whom she had been waiting at her home at Roslyn, was being put to bed at her divorced husband's house, The Box, at Westbury, she continued:

"Then I was awfully excited and I asked to speak to Mr. De Saulles. I was told that he had gone to the Meadow Brook Club for dinner and would be gone for an hour. I told Julius [the valet who had answered the telephone] to bring the baby over to me quickly, but he said that he could not do it. I made up my mind then that I would go and fetch the baby."

She stopped. Mr. Uterhart started to ask a question, but Justice Manning said:

"No, please don't interrupt the witness."

Mrs. De Saulles was silent, as if she was not able to recall what happened next, and Mr. Uterhart asked if she had called up D. Stewart Iglehart, a neighbor, who had married a Chilean, a childhood friend of Mrs. De Saulles.

"Oh yes," she said, "I telephoned to him and told him they were keeping my baby, and asked him to go with me. I told him that I was afraid to go alone."

"Were you afraid to go alone?" asked Justice Manning.

"Yes," replied Mrs. De Saulles. "Mr. Iglehart said that it was too delicate to interfere in a thing of that kind, but that he would send his car. But I had already called for a taxi."

In reply to a question she said she did not remember whether she had called for the taxi once or more than once. The next question was:

"Who were with you?"

"My maid, Suzanne Monteau, and 'Sandy.'"

"Who was 'Sandy?'" asked the Judge.

"My dog."

"Now continue with your story," said Justice Manning. "Tell just what happened in your own way. I will give you plenty of time and allow no one to interrupt you."

Saw Her Baby on the Stairs.

"After we got there," she said, "I told the driver to stop some distance away, because I did not want to be seen driving up. I wanted to take the baby away and not be seen. I walked across a space toward the house, but in front of the door I saw Mr. De Saulles's car. I was awfully surprised to see it there.

"When we went in, I saw the baby coming down the stairs with his aunt. I wanted to take the baby and run away, but Mr. De Saulles appeared in the door."

She paused for a long period. Intense silence prevailed in the courtroom, which was broken by the occasional rumbling of a radiator, which in the circumstances seemed to reverberate like thunder.

"Oh, yes; I think I asked for Mr. De Saulles. He came and asked me what I wanted. I said:

"'I think it is mean of you to keep the baby from me this way. I want him.'"

There was a long pause during which Mrs. De Saulles seemed to be striving painfully to call the scene to mind.

"He said something to me. I don't remember just what it was. I said:

"'I have come to take him away.'"

Another pause which seemed to last minutes amid a stillness which would have been deathlike except for the radiator, which had been quiescent through the proceedings until the climax was approaching.

"Then he looked at me." She emphasized the word "looked" in such a way as seemed to support the statement of her lawyers that such a look had been on the face of De Saulles every time before he did something to her which she considered mean and cruel.

"Then," she continued after another pause, "he said, 'You cannot have him now or ever.'"

Justice Manning had turned to face her. The jurymen had their eyes riveted on her, and the entire courtroom was gazing at her in intense suspense. She closed her eyes and a look of suffering passed over her face. Then she resumed, in a low, easy voice, with a quaint trace of a mixture of Spanish and English accents:

"I felt as if I had been stunned. I felt a dreadful pain in the head."

She waited again and said:

Doesn't Recall Shooting.

"I still think I hear those words in my ears."

"You think you hear those words now?" asked Justice Manning.

"Yes."

"That is all that I remember," she concluded. Justice Manning, who addressed her in a courteous and protecting manner, asked her to try to remember more.

"Where were you when the next thing occurred which you remember?" he asked.

"I think I was in the Mineola Jail," she said. She thought a long time, and could not add anything. Justice Manning asked her lawyer if he had any questions.

"None, your Honor."

"You may leave the stand," he said to Mrs. De Saulles.

In his eagerness not to spoil the impressiveness of the conclusion of her story, told in her own words or in answer to questions by the Justice, Mr. Uterhart omitted a number of other questions which he had intended to ask her. She made no direct explanation, for instance, of why she had carried the revolver.

Reviews Her Early Life.

Before she reached the events of the day of the shooting, the young woman had reviewed minutely her life for the past six years and had touched briefly on her life for the seventeen preceding years. She began with the story of falling, as a child, against an andiron knob and hurting her head. From this she jumped to the courtship by De Saulles, followed by their marriage in Paris. The first blow she received from her husband, according to her story, was a remark to her, after he had examined the papers showing her share in her father's estate. Although she came of a family which was worth many millions at one time, its fortunes had declined, and her share, she said, was about 100,000. Asked what De Saulles had said about this sum, she replied:

"He said it was practically nothing."

Mrs. De Saulles said that she had, at her husband's request, written to her mother in Paris asking her to send money to them to buy an estate. Shortly after this, they went to Paris, and De Saulles, in an interview with her mother, "made a scene," she said.

One of the next incidents told by Mrs. De Saulles was the discovery, after they had returned to the United States and taken a home in Larchmont, of an actress' picture in her husband's room on which was written "To Jack, with love, from ——."

At the suggestion of Mr. Uterhart, the name of this actress was not told. Mrs. De Saulles was asked what she said about it. She replied:

"I said that it was not nice for him to have an actress' picture with her name on it in a house where I was."

"What did he say?"

"He said there was nothing wrong about it. That she was a nice girl."

Mrs. De Saulles told of the sale by her husband of $6,000 worth of her stock to pay for the trip which they made to Paris and of another $4,000 worth of stock sold later to supply him with money. It was during their stay at Larchmont, she said, that he presented her with the revolver with which she finally shot him.

"It was one day when we were in New York City together," she said. "We went into a pawnshop and he bought it for me."

It was sent home several days later, she said, because the pawnbroker had refused to deliver it until assured that De Saulles would take out a license for it. He gave her this because she was left alone frequently at Larchment, and he told her to carry it for her protection, she said. Mrs. De Saulles said that during the Spring and Summer of 1912, while De Saulles was busy in the campaign as President of the Woodrow Wilson College Men's League, they lived at Larchmont, but she saw very little of him. After that he took her to the home of his parents at South Bethlehem, Penn.

"Did you know many people here?" she was asked.

"I knew no one outside of his family."

"Were you happy there?"

"It wasn't very nice."

Mrs. De Saulles said that her husband very seldom visited her there. Her baby was born there on Christmas Day. It was some time after the child was born there her letters begin.

Looked Eagerly for De Saulles.

On June 22, 1913, she wrote him the following letter:

Darling, Precious Dadz: I feel so sad tonight, as I had been looking forward with so much eagerness to your coming. It is ages since you left, and I am wondering whether you have forgotten your little wife who awaits you anxiously, and your darling baby boy. I had ordered the runabout for this evening, thinking we would have a delightfully quiet and old fashioned drive during which we could tell each other all the many things we have to say. But, however much I was longing to see you, it is much better that you save yourself this unpleasant trip which in the end would only allow us a couple of hours together.

I do hope you are well—I am so afraid that you don't take the proper amount of rest. You must not worry about Toodles or me. We are both doing remarkably well. He has taken to the bottle like a duck to water, and I am not having any trouble as we had anticipated. If we are having a hard pull, we have still a great many things to be thankful for, it is really wonderful how well Toodles is doing and how little cause for anxiety he has given us. It is a great thing that he has withstood the change of food so remarkably well. He liked even the first bottle I gave him—did not even mind my giving it to him, knowing as he does that I gave him dindin; I, thank God, have not felt any pain nor feeling of uncomfort.

So, Dada, I am very happy that everything has gone so well, and may it continue so. The weather has been quite delightful. Your mother and I are alone, your father having gone to Atlantic City, in order to take Nellie to Louise, to look after her children, since she had nobody to do so. I inclose the three trolley car tickets which have been knocking about; you may have occasion to use them, in case you have no change in your pockets, besides saving 15 cents. "Count the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves," Fraulein used to say.

Don't disappoint me again, darling, and please come Tuesday without fail. It's so lonesome without you, and quite discouraging at times.

May God bless you and grant you success.

All the love in the world from Babybey and me.

Devotedly, DADA GIRL.

In another letter a little later she wrote:

"I missed you very much. I feel so lonely now I don't know what to do. Could you find out from some one of some nice, cool place, with no mosquitos, and nice drives where I could take you in a buggy? Darling, I don't wish to complain, because you are already having a hard time, but, precious, I'm afraid this heat will really make me sick, and dada, dear, I'm doing my best. Little hot water bag is all right—a regular little stove."

One of the letters was written this Summer, while De Saulles, in return for his work in the political campaign of 1912, was seeking the post of Minister to Uruguay, which he eventually obtained. This letter told of Secretary Tumulty telephoning to him, presumably in this regard. In this letter she said:

"I have tried to get you on the phone this afternoon, but when I called up, you were absent from the club. Lester Jones called up and he said everything looked most cheerful and that Tumulty wanted to see you either Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday in the morning; he told Tumulty to wire you, which he did, and I am inclosing the wire; also a letter from L. J. which came this morning just after you phoned. I opened it, thinking there might be something of importance in it, but did not think it worth while to phone it to you. You can judge for yourself.

"I hope you are well and are taking good care of yourself. I am ever so much better and am looking forward with great pleasure to your return.

"We might go to N. Y. together on Monday and then you go on to Washington either that night or Tuesday, and I return here, tho I should simply love to go with you except I might be in your way.

"Toodles is very well and everything is as it has been."

On the margin of this letter she wrote: "Where were you???? "

Of the life she was leading at this time she wrote as follows on Aug 2, 1913, to her confidante, Mrs. O'Neill:

"Have Stood Everything."

Dear Ethel: This letter is the bearer of great news. Toodles has cut a tooth today!!! The darlingest, weeniest, sharpest, whitest little tooth you ever saw. It's one of the middle ones in the lower jaw. You have no idea how excited I got when I saw it. I haven't told his grandparents because I want them to think they've found it and so give him a new dress.

Father is in New York as usual, and this last week has been purgatory in the worst form. If I were a man I should say "h——" a million times over.

Father phoned me from New York to go and meet him there tomorrow, and now Dr. Butler tells me it would be foolish to go before I am better. I am so mad; just the one opportunity of distracting myself is barred me. Mrs. Heckscher has asked me to spend two weeks with her; her invitation includes Toodles. We are both crazy to go, but I don't think Bessie would be equal to the task of traveling with infant's bottles to be prepared on the train. Also she is not quite tidy enough with Toodles's things to go a-visiting.

Mrs. De Saulles has almost got me frantic. I have to use the utmost strength of mind not to pull her hair; really I've been so patient and put up with so much that now my patience has turned into hate. Isn't that perfectly frightful? She is worse and worse from day to day. Now she wants to know why I don't go away, and keeps on asking me how much longer I'm going to stay—as if it were a pleasure for me to stay in a place which is exactly opposite in every way to the home I was brought up in. She ought to be thankful that her son has married a woman who has stood everything without saying a word, just for his sake, and for their sakes has never mentioned the immeasurable distance which separates them from her!

I don't know why I write all this to you, I, who never talk to any one about myself; but I think it will make little difference to you, as you are in the habit of listening to people's confidence, while to me it does make a difference. When one keeps one's feelings pent up so long one gets bitter, oh, so bitter, that it frightens one. I have fought against this, and keep on fighting. I am so young and I want to be happy. I try to think of the future, of more cheerful days, making imaginary plans for a little home, beautiful and refined, peaceful and sweet, for my baby boy to grow up in, but something in me keeps on crying: What's the use of hoping that way; who was ever known to be happy in this world! Oh, how much I want to be happy.

I had just meant to write you about Toodles's tooth, but my pen has taken down all my thoughts—no, not all of them, there would not be enough paper for that—but some of them, thus adding one more woeful story to all the ones you already have to bear.

Toodles is very well, thank God. He has jabbered away today like never in his life before; he keeps on saying, "Bo, bo, bo" most distinctly, and when I try to teach him to say Mama he looks at me very seriously, then bursts out laughing. If I only had a home for him. Even he, the little darling, seems sometimes to be in my way. You must think I don't deserve him—perhaps I don't, but God is the best judge of that.

I hope your little baby is doing well and isn't suffering.

By the way, how is that poor girl who was expecting one, and whose mother died? I have thought so much of her.

I hope you are keeping well and have made up your mind to return to Toodles, anyway for the time being. Come to take care of Toodles and to cheer me up.

Looking forward to seeing you soon again, believe me, most sincerely,

BLANQUITA DE SAULLES.

In August, 1913, De Saulles took her to a cottage at Deal Beah, where, she said, he would spend week-ends with Marshall Ward. She suffered a collapse from the heat in this city and was taken to the Sloane Maternity Hospital. When De Saulles saw her as she was recovered from her illness, he said, according to her story:

"Oh, you're all right, the trouble is you are 'hipped' on yourself."

Gave Him More Money.

Shortly after her illness he got her, she said, to sign two checks, one for $15,000 and one for $5,000. It was shortly after that, she said, that he obtained the appointment to the post of Minister to Uruguay. It was arranged that she should go to London and from there to Uruguay, where she was to meet him, but she had hardly reached London when she got a cable message from him telling her to come back because he had resigned the post, since he could make more money in New York.

She came back and stopped at a house he had taken in Huntington, L. I. While she was here, she said, the mother of De Saulles had written, asking her to try and break off the connection between De Saulles and the Duke of Manchester, who was growing notorious. She said that her mother-in-law had called to her attention an article in Town Topics about them. This said that the residents of Premium Point, New Rochelle, were indignant because of "the heterogenous horde" of "weird males and females" that the "fat and amiable Duke," aided by Jack De Saulles, had collected at the Duke's place here. The piece told of parties with many well-known actresses present, in one of which a young woman had fallen or dived overboard and been rescued with difficulty.

"What did you think when you read this?" she was asked.

"I was terribly scandalized."

"Can you be more particular as to its effect on you?"

"It was a great mental shock."

She went on to tell how at a luncheon party at August Heckscher's home, the Duke had sent a messenger for De Saulles, who departed with him the same day. Later that afternoon, while out on the Sound in Heckscher's motor boat, they passed the Duke of Manchester's yacht, and she saw the Duke and her husband together.

"Who were with them?"

"A lot of funny-looking people."

"Were they men or women?" asked Justice Manning.

"Girls."

Several weeks later De Saulles went to England and eventually cabled her to follow, which she did. There De Saulles, on various pretexts, she said, put her up at one or another hotel where she lived. He went to Paris and she went back to America, she said, because she never saw him and wanted to see her baby. She told of receiving three cables to come to Paris and after each another cable telling her not to come. After the third cable she had bought passage on the Lusitania and had her trunks on board.

"It was her last trip, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"How did you feel at this time?"

"I was sorry I wasn't on it when it went down."

After his return in the Summer of 1915, De Saulles drank, neglected her, and was rude and brutal toward her, she said, until she decided to leave him. This she finally did, she said, after an interview in which he concurred heartily with her plan to separate, and suggested a divorce. She went to Chile with her boy. She said she was wonderfully happy there. She was about to start on a trip for China, she said, when she got a letter from him, asking her to come back for the boy's sake, and she replied that for the boy's sake she would come back.

She told of a fresh humiliation on her return, the incident on Easter Day, when she discovered that her husband had taken Joan Sawyer with their boy on a walk to the Central Park Zoo.

The morning session of court ended here. The attendants had decided to allow those disappointed in the morning to attend the afternoon session and to exclude those who had seen the morning's proceedings. They let the morning crowd out by one exit and were letting the afternoon in by another, but the two tides of humanity became mixed and bowled the court officers and Sheriff's deputies over in a mad rush for the courtroom. In their scramble for places they made so much noise that Justice Manning left his chambers, and, rapping with his gavel, said:

"This conduct is disgraceful on the part of human beings—on the part of those who call themselves human beings. A repetition of this and I will clear the courtroom out altogether. Take off your hat there, or I'll send you to jail. This is not a performance. This is a solemn trial."

She told of various ways in which she thought her husband was poisoning the mind of the child against her. She said she found the boy coarsened each time on his return to her from his stay with De Saulles. She said that she found he had been fed candy and other things bad for him, kept up late at parties, and spoiled in other ways. She said that the boy had told her of being taken into the barrooms of the Waldorf-Astoria and Plaza Hotels.

Mr. Uterhart introduced as evidence certified charts of the Weather Bureau that the five days preceding Aug. 3 were the hottest of the year, and during a discussion of this Justice Manning said:

"I know it. I was holding court at the time."

The trial will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning when Mrs. De Saulles will be cross-examined by the District Attorney.

STATE FARMERS FORM NONPARTISAN LEAGUE

Will Co-operate with Trades Unions in Plan to Benefit Producer and Wage Earner.

The Farmers' Nonpartisan League of the State of New York was organized yesterday at a meeting of farmers from many counties and farmers' associations held at the Hotel McAlpin. The farmers came to New York City at the request of John J. Dillon, Chief of the State Bureau of Foods and Markets.

Pledged to co-operate with the league in the formation of a legislative program that will benefit the producer and the wage earner are the representatives of various trades unions, who met with the farmers at the call of the Labor Food Conference, or which John C. Hilsdorf is Chairman and Carl Beck the Secretary.

The work of arranging a basis of harmony and a legislative program was finally left to a committee of ten equally divided between farmers and labor representatives. Labor will be represented by a member of the American Federation of Labor, two from the New York State Federation of Labor, and two from the Labor Food Conference. For the farmers the committee will be made up of representatives of the State Grange, the Dairymen's League, the New York State Fruit Growers' Association, the State Vegetable Growers' Association, and the State Agricultural Society.

Among those who spoke were Mr. Dillon, and A. C. Townley, apostle of the Nonpartisan League of North Dakota. The following resolution was adopted:

That the producers and consumers of this conference who in the past have been kept apart by cunning middlemen, politicians, and their agents, bring their influence to bear on all citizens' food councils in which they participate toward representation of some kind from both the producers and consumers.

ALCOHOL IN BEER CUT TO MAXIMUM OF 3%

Grain Used in Brewing Is Reduced 30 Per Cent.—Fear to Put the Country on a 'Whisky Diet.'

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Brewers must cut down the alcohol in beer to 3 per cent. maximum and use 30 per cent. less grain in its manufacture, under the provisions of an order approved today by President Wilson, upon recommendation of Food Administrator Hoover. The average at present is about 4 per cent.

The step was taken as a food conservation measure. An effort also will be made to increase the output of cattle feed from brewing establishments.

The production of whisky and other distilled liquors was stopped on Sept. 8 by direction of the President, but there is apparently no intention on the part of the Food Administration to give beer a knock-out blow. In fact, a statement tonight by the Food Administration called attention to the fact that while the manufacture of whisky and other distilled liquors was stopped Sept. 8, there was from two to three years' supply of whisky, brandy, gin, and other liquors in the country and that the elimination of beer would enforce a "whisky diet" with questionable results.

"The Food bill provides that these liquors can be commandeered by the Government if required for purposes of manufacture of alcohol for munitions," the statement read. "On the other hand, the requirements for industrial alcohol in addition to the normal output from sawdust and other waste products are at present negligible.

"Those who wish brewing entirely suppressed should therefore bear in mind that if such a course were pursued the country would be placed on a whisky basis entirely, and the amount of alcobol consumed would most probably increase. The desirability of saving all the grain used in brewing from the point of view of food conservation is therefore limited by the social question involved in the exclusive use of whisky."

There will be no effort, it is understood, to reduce the volume of beer brewed, but the rules to prevent extravagant use of grain in its manufacture will be rigid.

BEGINS MILK INQUIRY TO DETERMINE PRICE

Hoover's Commission Hears Dairymen's League Head Tell of Production Cost.

SUGAR RELIEF SEEN HERE

Conference with Cuban Planters Expected to Determine the Price of Raw Material.

The commission appointed by Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Administrator, to investigate milk conditions in New York State and to fix the price at which it shall be sold to the consumers, held its first meeting yesterday in the City Hall. The inquiry was preceded by a public meeting in the morning, which Dr. W. H. Jordan, the Chairman, said was for the purpose of giving the commission a line on the situation that would enable it to form its program and a plan of procedure. For this reason when R. D. Cooper, President of the Dairymen's League took the stand, he was not required to take an oath.

The commission to investigate the milk situation is composed of Dr. W. H. Jordan, Director of the State Experiment Station at Geneva, Chairman; John Mitchell, head of the State Food Commission; John T. Gavin of the Water Department; Mortimer Schiff, banker; Eugene Schoen, architect; Miss Mabel Kittredge, Chairman of the Woman's Food Committee of the Mayor's Committee on Defense; Charles M. Dow, of Jamestown, N. Y., farmer and capitalist; C. S. Shedrick, President of the New York Milk Conference Board and head of the Queen City Diary Company, of Buffalo; Lucius P. Crown, Director of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs of the Health Department; and Bradley Fuller of Utica, an attorney whose name was presented to Mr. Hoover by the Dairymen's League. Frank M. Stevens, former head of the Public Service Commission for the Second District, is counsel for the commission.

Mr. Cooper in his testimony said that the Dairymen's League embraces territory in New York, Connecticut, Vermont, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. It has about 900 branch distribution points, he said.

Mr. Stevens asked the witness about the cost of milk production, and the replies of Mr. Cooper were practically the same as the testimony he had previously given before the Mayor's Milk Committee. He said that the cost could not be determined by any one month. He said that he was unable to tell how to equalise prices the year around, and suggested that Professor George F. Warner, an expert on the subject, be called as a witness. The commission decided to call Professor Warner later. Mr. Cooper added that approximately one-third of the city's milk supply came from league territory.

Car Shortage Is Felt.

When Mr. Cooper was asked if it would help the commission were hearings to be held outside the city, he replied that it would help the up-State farmers, but would not alter the facts. The witness quoted Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator, as authority for the statement that the corn crop was larger than last year, and that there would be a drop in milk prices. The crop is available now, said Mr. Cooper, but it contains so much moisture that dairymen will not feed the fodder to the cows. He added that contrary to the opinion of the Food Administrator, prices advanced last week. The car shortage, he said, also is complicating the situation.

John Mitchell said he understood that the Government would control foodstuffs and fix prices, and his acceptance of a place on the commission had been predicated on that condition. He had no doubt, he said, that these matters would be adjusted so as to afford relief to all concerned. When the question of costs was up Mr. Stevens called the attention of Mr. Cooper to the fact that the commission must ascertain the costs of production of milk if it is to fix prices for January, February, and March.

Figures showing the amounts of milk received in New York on certain days were submitted by James E. Thompson, Chief of the Division of Milk Inspection of the Health Department.

Cuban Sugar Commissioners selected by President Menocal are expected to arrive here on Friday. George M. Rolph, Chairman of the International Sugar Committee, said yesterday that he believed a satisfactory agreement would be reached at a conference to be held soon after the commission arrived. Tentatively the price to be offered as a basis has been considered by the International Committee at $4.60 a hundred pounds, free on board, Cuban ports. This, it is said, will adjust readily to the $8.40 wholesale rate for refined sugar now in effect here. It is believed that an agreement with the Cuban planters will go far to relieve the sugar situation in America. The only matters to be finally agreed upon are the price for the raw stuff and details of shipment.

The Russian sugar recently released in New York will be ready for distribution early next week, according to Mr. Rolph. From 10,000 to 15,000 tons will materially lessen the shortage here. It is believed there will be almost a normal amount in the local markets after the holidays.

Fresh Turkeys Scarce.

P. Q. Foy, price expert of The Daily Market Report, said yesterday that fresh-killed turkeys are scarce. Less than five carloads were received here last week, he said. Mr. Foy quoted the following prices: Dry-picked, iced, 36 to 38 cents a pound; thinnish, not exceeding 35 cents; dry-picked and Westerns, 37 to 38 cents; Virginias, 35 to 38 cents; fancies, 40 to 45 cents.

Fresh eggs were selling at 50 cents a dozen yesterday, and distinctly fresh eggs at 58 cents. Long Island eggs sold at 60 cents and Leghorns at 70 cents. Fresh-killed broilers were quoted at 25, 30, and 35 cents and ducks at 25 cents. Butter was quoted at 52 cents a pound.

George K. Moon, Chairman of the Fish Committee of the Fish Dealers' Association, told Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator, that the following wholesale prices are now prevailing: Medium bluefish, 33 to 35 cents; fresh butterfish, 14 to 20 cents; small flounders, 4 to 7 cents; large flounders, 8 to 10 cents; haddock, 8 to 12 cents; Spanish mackerel, 17 to 20 cents; Boston mackerel, 26 to 28 cents; steak codfish, 10 to 12½ cents; market codfish, 8 cents; small codfish, 5 cents; Western salmon, 15 to 20 cents.

Food Board Appoints Grain Man.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—John J. Stream, Vice President of the Chicago Board of Trade, has been appointed head of the coarse grain division of the Federal Food Administration. His province includes all grains except wheat and barley. Mr. Stream's office will be in New York.

FREES DR. P. A. BARRETT.

Queens County Court Action in Case of Alleged Medical Negligence.

A charge of manslaughter in the second degree, brought against Dr. Paul A. Barrett of Forest Hills, L. I., was dismissed on Saturday when it came to a hearing before Judge Humphreys in the County Court of Queens.

The allegation upon which the charge was founded was that Dr. Barrett had been guilty of negligence in the treatment last June of 2-year-old Joseph Charles Halle, son of Louis J. Halle of Kew Gardens, thereby causing the child's death. It was alleged that the doctor had caused to be administered to the child one-half a grain of codeine, an overdosage.

Judge Humphreys, on motion of counsel for the defendant, dismissed the case, stating that as there had not been an autopsy before the body was cremated it was the only action he could take.

What District Attorney SWANN Says of Hero Land

" It is most unfortunate that the Army and Navy Bazaar scandal should have come just before the opening of ' Hero Land,' which is a totally different sort of undertaking, and which I am confident is for worthy causes, and is being responsibly and honestly conducted. Mr. Moffat, executive chairman, informs me that no commissions are being paid to any one in connection with ' Hero Land.' This was one of the most objectionable features of the Army and Navy Bazaar. In prosecuting those who have been guilty of a breach of trust in connection with the Army and Navy Bazaar, this office has no desire to in any way deter people from visiting and from contributing to ' Hero Land.' I believe ' Hero Land ' comes under the category of those charitable enterprises deserving of the public support."

KREISLER CALLS ON HILLIS TO RETRACT

Demands That Minister Withdraw Charge That He Secretly Aids Austria.

SAYS ATTACK IS COWARDLY

Violinist Asserts Vouchers for Money He Sent Abroad Were Approved at Washington.

Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, made public last night a reply to the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis concerning statements printed yesterday, in which the Brooklyn clergyman in a sermon preached Sunday morning at Plymouth Church had sharply attacked the Austrian artist a few hours before Kreisler canceled his American tour. The preacher had charged Mr. Kreisler, in effect, with giving aid to enemy arms, and had said that Americans who paid to hear Kreisler play were virtually sending money, every $1,000 of which "would buy fifty rifles to be used against American soldiers."

The violinist demanded that Dr. Hillis should withdraw these charges publicly from the pulpit where he made them, or else give Kreisler the opportunity to confront him as man to man. Kreisler's earnestness in making the demand recalled to his interviewers an old story to the effect that the Austrian had in his time fought three duels in Europe and that he bore on his face the scar of one such encounter. Mr. Kreisler wrote out and signed his reply to the preacher as follows:

"In his cowardly, irresponsible, and unethical attack upon me, Dr. Hillis said: 'It is well known that Kreisler is an Austrian Captain, and to obtain his release from the army he promised to send a large percentage of his income back to the home Government.' This is a baseless and malicious lie. Knowing Dr. Hillis to be a minister of the Gospel, I refuse to believe that he uttered this lie in full cognizance of its falsity and import. I expect him to retract his misstatement publicly and without delay."

Dr. Hillis was absent last evening from his home at 23 Monroe Place, Brooklyn, where Mrs. Hillis said that her husband was lecturing in New Jersey and was not expected to return until a late hour.

In the sermon in which Dr. Hillis made his charges as to Kreisler's conduct while in America during the war, he said:

"Our Government forbids trade with States at war with us. Would a merchant enter into a contract to buy goods from a German he would straightway be arrested; but what shall be said about men who enter into business contracts with Muck and Kreisler? It is well known that Kreisler is an Austrian Captain; that to obtain his release from the army he entered into an agreement to send back to the home Government a large percentage of his income. An Austrian gun costs approximately $20. Every night that Kreisler is paid $1,000 Austria can buy fifty rifles with which Germany can kill our American boys.

"Young Albert Spalding obeyed the call of his country and is serving in France for $30 a month. To do this he canceled contracts for $45,000 for his Winter's work. Last night over in New York, men and women who claim to be patriots bought from an enemy State some thousands of dollars' worth of pleasure, and with the receipts Kreisler can send enough money home to buy fifty rifles with which to kill Albert Spalding.

"It is a duty of jurists to consider this whole matter. Even though we are not at open war with Austria there must be some law under which an injunction can be taken out against directors of theatres and music halls that will enjoin them from doing business with an enemy State, or lending aid and comfort to the enemy.

"If no other citizen will undertake this task, and a law can be found under which action can be taken, I will myself take those steps that are necessary to end this outrage against American soldiers and sailors.

"Kreisler states that he has been sending his money home to support musicians, wounded, of course, in fighting against England and France and Italy. He thinks that the American people lack lack so little logic and sound sense as to be unable to perceive that in relieving the Austrian Government of the necessity of supporting these enemies of France they can take their money, thus set free, and buy guns against our allies and ourselves. He tells us that he could not have sent any money to Austria because for eight months there have been no mails. But there was a Red Cross work here in the United States! Does not this Government need money with which to buy rifles?"

NATIONAL COAL POOL IS NOW ADVOCATED

Agitation Begins for Extension of Voluntary Plan Tried in the West.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The pooling of the nation's entire coal output under Government control may be put into effect before many weeks as a war measure. In some quarters agitation has been started to bring about this result. It is believed by advocates of the plan that the maximum of service to the consumer would be obtained by taking such a step and also by placing the railroads under Government direction for the period of the war.

The scheme under contemplation calls for the establishment of large regional pools which would make possible the greatest degree of efficiency in the distribution of coal to all sections of the country. The power to adopt this course is given in the Food Control act which makes it possible for the Government, through the Fuel Administration, either to commandeer mines and operate them or to purchase all output, pool resell and distribute it.

The last named phase is the one which is being given consideration at this time, as the Government is satisfied that the operators will provide maximum output if the cars and other transportation facilities are supplied. The question of sales and proper distribution remains.

At present operators in the bituminous fields of the Central District have adopted regulations for a voluntary pooling system which it is believed will give immediate relief, and this has the sanction of the Fuel Administration. A Government pool, on the other hand, would relieve the operators of all chance of being faced with a violation of the anti-trust law. It would also safeguard operators against damages where it was found necessary to abrogate contracts to bring about a proper distribution of the output.

It is stated that the problem has been given attention by President Wilson and members of the Interstate Commerce Commission because of the danger of an actual coal famine. With the pooling system in effect the Government would have absolute control of all coal mines, and would be able to direct sale and distribution.

Men who are in favor of this drastic step are definite in their statements that such a course will have to be followed, along with Government direction of railroads, if the war continues over another year, and hold that the greatest good will be accomplished if action is taken without further delay.

Seventy-ninth Street, Ninety-ninth Street and 129th Street. That part of the Yonkers River front which faces the New York Central yards and station is also made a barred zone, while all piers, not included in these zones, at which vessels of 500 tons or more dock are separate zones, no matter where situated.

It was pointed out by the Marshal that the 100-yard limit set by the President was to be measured from the entrance to the piers, which means a zone of about one block in width from Seventy-second Street to the Battery and from the Battery to Thirty-ninth Street on the East River.

"These zones," said Marshal McCarthy last night, "are for the present, and until the army takes charge, military zones under civil control, and until further notice the police and the Federal authorities will co-operate in the enforcement of the President's regulations, and this enforcement will be to the very letter of those regulations. No exceptions will be made in any case. Every German subject must move, and they should move without a moment's delay. By so doing they may save themselves, as well as the Government, from doing anything unpleasant. A failure to obey means just one thing, and that is internment."

Marshal's Office Besieged.

Hundreds of enemy aliens called at Marshal McCarthy's office in the Federal Building yesterday in the hope of obtaining permission to remain in their present homes or places of employment. These persons said they were willing to give bonds if the Government would make an exception in their cases. All received the same answer, which was, "No exceptions all must go." One man who called said he was 72 years old, and that if he was compelled to move he would lose his employment, with little hope of getting another job.

"I wish you would intern me; that, at least, will mean a home and plenty to eat," he said.

"I am sorry for you, but there is nothing I can do," the Marshal said. "You should have taken out citizenship papers years ago and have become a loyal American citizen. I will see what I can do to get you another job, but you must get out of the zone immediately."

Another man, who called, was the head of a firm which had several German subjects on its payroll. This man, who is an American citizen, said the enemy aliens were absolutely necessary to the proper conduct of his business. He was told that if he wanted to keep the Germans in his employ he would have to move.

In one of the New York barred zones is a hotel, in the dining room of which is a steel engraving of the monument which commemorates the German victory over the French in 1870. The owner of this hotel has a number of Germans in his employ. He wanted to keep them and was said to be very reluctant to comply with the Federal regulations, but he promised Marshal McCarthy yesterday that all of his German employes would go before the expiration of the time limit.

Brooklyn Situation Explained.

United States District Attorney Melville J. France and United States Marshal James M. Power of Brooklyn issued a joint statement last night in which they said:

"In view of the many conflicting statements which have been made in the last few days with regard to the enforcement of the enemy alien regulations, recently promulgated by President Wilson, the United States District Attorney and the Marshal of the Eastern District of New York issue this joint statement in order to make clear, so far as possible, the situation in this district.

"1. A list of the piers from which overseas shipments are made to the American expeditionary forces in Europe, and to the Allies are made, has been furnished by the United States District Attorney to Brig. Gen. Hoyle, commanding the Eastern Department, who has been intrusted with the duty of furnishing a military guard for such piers. Such guards, composed of Federal troops, will be established. It may be that all such piers may not be guarded at once. The more important piers will be first placed under military guards and the others in the order of their importance.

"2. The United States Marshal, in accordance with his instructions received from the Attorney General of the United States, has directed every pier owner or lessee in this district to place private inspectors and guards upon the piers, who will require the identification of all persons who seek to enter upon such piers. They are also instructed to cooperate with the military guards when those guards are established. In most instances these inspectors and guards have already been placed on the piers and the Marshal has been furnished with a list of such guards. The Marshal will check up the work of these guards daily.

"3. The Police Department has undertaken to place a policeman on duty, night and day, on every pier in this district, where the situation is such as to demand such protection.

"4. So far as alien enemies now in the 100-yard barred zone limits are concerned, they will be compelled to move immediately. The guards and inspectors are instructed to arrest any enemy alien who enters the 100-yard zone. Violators will be summarily arrested and interned. The practical enforcement of the regulations will rest in the hands of the military authorities, the Naval Intelligence Service, the Army Intelligence Service, such Deputy Marshals as are assigned to waterfront duties, the private guards, and the police."

Marshal Power made a tour of the Brooklyn waterfront yesterday afternoon, and found that on all piers except four his orders had been carried out. The four delinquent owners promised to have their guards on duty by 8 o'clock this morning.

Whether or not the soldiers who will be placed on waterfront duty will wear blue uniforms to distinguish them from the khaki-clad men of the overseas forces, was a question that Governors Island did not answer yesterday. The instructions issued by Attorney General Gregory on Saturday night stipulated that the soldier guards must wear blue uniforms. There is an impression that the Attorney General will not have the last word so far as the uniforming of the soldiers is concerned. The War Department, it was intimated yesterday, would decide that matter, and there was reason to believe that the men would wear the regulation war-time khaki.

PLAN TO GUARD MANY CITIES.

War Department Will Assign Regulars for Pier Duty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Regular soldiers will be used to guard the piers in New York City, and the alien enemy regulations promulgated by the Department of Justice last Saturday will be carried into effect in all seacoast cities, according to an announcement made here today.

The failure of the army authorities to comply with the order in New York City on Sunday night, it was explained, was the fault of the War Department. Another reason for the delay was the inability to issue the passes and make a registration of those who should have access to the piers.

As soon as the public becomes acquainted with the system and learns that the regular soldiers must be obeyed implicitly, the soldiers will be replaced by Home Guards and other non-regular military patrols. For the present it is not the intention of the Government to abandon in any degree the proposed guard by regular soldiers armed with loaded guns and bayonets and instructed to prevent all persons without passes from reaching the piers and wharves.

Within a very few weeks the War Department will be ready to furnish sufficient soldiers to patrol the piers in all the cities where the Department of Justice may deem that extra precautions are necessary.

SAYS SHE WAS ASKED TO POSE AS TATIANA

Russian Dancer Here May Have Explanation of ex-Grand Duchess's 'Escape.'

Further light was thrown yesterday on the report which was circulated on Sunday that Tatiana Nikolaievna Romanoff, daughter of the former Czar of Russia, was coming to the United States to dance, lecture to women's clubs, and tell fairy tales for a Russian relief organization, by the statement made by a Russian dancer now appearing in a New York theatre that she had received an offer to $500 a week to impersonate the former Grand Duchess in this capacity.

The original story, which related the escape of Tatiana from Tobolsk through a fictitious marriage with the son of a former Chamberlain at the imperial court, was capped by the statement of one of the officials of the Russian relief society in question that "these are strange times in Russia."

The dancer, who says she has had an opportunity to impersonate the ex-Grand Duchess, is Mlle. Ekaterina Galanta. Here is her statement verbatim through a Russo-English interpreter:

"About two weeks ago an automobile called at the stage door of the theatre where I am appearing. A middle-aged man, whose name was scribbled in pencil 'Mr. Jacobs,' asked if he could see me. He waited until after the performance; then, speaking very bad Russian, he asked me if I was Galanta from Petrograd. I said yes. He asked me if I had danced in Petrograd. I said yes, since I was 7 years old. He asked me if I had ever seen the Grand Duchess Tatiana. I said yes. I had danced before her and the Czar and the Czarine in the Imperial Opera House at Petrograd.

"He asked, did I want to make much money? I said how much money? He replied, 'Five hundred dollars a week, and you live like a Princess.' I said, How?

"He said, 'You leave this show; you come with me to San Francisco; you disappear as Galanta, you become the Grand Duchess Tatiana. We say you have just arrived on the steamer at San Francisco from Japan; you have escaped from Siberia.' I say, why, and he say, 'For the moving pictures. We must have Russian girl to play the part, you know the Russian Court, you look like the Grand Duchess, anyhow. Will you go?'

"I said, you must see my manager. Then Mr. Jacobs said no, he will do no business with any manager. This must be secret between us if I become the Grand Duchess Tatiana. So I refuse and he go away."

N. A. Volgar, Secretary and Treasurer of the Russian-American-Asiatic Corporation, 61 Broadway, speaking yesterday as the representative of Ivan Narodny, who, he said, was out of town, insisted that the Grand Duchess Tatiana would arrive in San Francisco before the end of the present week. He said that the vessel on which M. Narodny declared she was traveling already had left Honolulu.

"There are a great many reports going around," said Mr. Volgar, "which are intended to discredit us. These reports are inspired by enemies in Washington. I don't say who those enemies are, but we know. Why, they are even spreading the story that Mrs. Carver, who is on the way to meet the Grand Duchess, is or has been a German spy. Just imagine such a report as that being circulated! Mrs. Carver is a wonderful and a noble woman who loves the Russian people, and it is because of her devotion to them that she has visited Russia several times since the war began. Now I ask you if any one should be surprised if a woman who loves Russia as does Mrs. Carver should be engaged in a work to lessen the suffering of the poor Russians in Europe?"

"Are you absolutely sure that the Grand Duchess is coming to America, for you know many people think that a mistake has been made?" Mr. Volgar was asked.

"Of course we are certain she is coming. Has not M. Narodny said so? Do you think that he would make such an announcement if he did not know what he was talking about? Yes, she is coming and we shall all see her, you and I and everybody else."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The report that a daughter of the former Czar of Russia soon would visit the United States was completely discredited in Russian official circles here today. It was learned also that Russian officials here did not recognize certain self-styled Russian relief organizations in the United States and that discussion had taken place between the Embassy and the American Red Cross with respect to them and the latter had been asked to denounce such unrecognized societies.

The Office Boy Takes Your Dictation

You slip the cylinder off The Dictaphone and pass it to him. He carries it to the operator while you are slipping on a fresh cylinder. While the girl starts to type your first letter you continue your dictation. Thus it goes—you dictating—she typing—until your morning mail is completed.

You find that you've reduced the human equation to a minimum; that you have cut out one whole operation in letter-writing—shorthand, a wasteful and costly mode of transcription.

Your letters have to be written only once—on the typewriter. The cost of each letter is cut one-third. No stenographer kept waiting at your desk. All her time goes into typing or other productive office work. She produces at least 50 per cent more each day, yet she finds her work easier than before, because the chief causes of the nerve-strain and eye-strain—shorthand and its transcription—are eliminated.

If your business requires only one stenographer, the saving of time, labor, and money and the facilitation of your correspondence are marked. If you employ a large stenographic force, the all-round savings which are effected by The Dictaphone truly amaze you.

Whenever you make up your mind to take these facts into serious consideration, telephone for a demonstration. Or write to THE DICTAPHONE.

BELL CATCHES AIDS OF MRS. HUMISTON

Man and Girl, Sent to Entrap Upton Officials, Are Driven from the Camp.

WENT TO THE POST HOTEL

Man, Examined, Admits He Told Employer of Rumor That Dead Girl Had Been Found.

Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding the division of the national army training at Camp Upton, Yaphank, Long Island, yesterday announced that a man of about 40 and a girl who did not apear to be more than 16 had been arrested the night before at the hotel on the military reservation, where they had registered as man and wife, and that the man had admitted that they had been sent down to get information as to moral conditions around the camp by Mrs. Grace Humiston. About two weeks ago Mrs. Humiston stated at a meeting of women lawyers that "seven girls who were about to become mothers, who had no husbands, were dead, according to reports which she had received, and that she "had proved the facts in the cases of two of them."

Upon being questioned by a Secret Service agent at Camp Upton yesterday the man in the case, who gave his name as James C. Adkins, admitted that he had told Mrs. Humiston the story of the two girls, and that he had "heard it from some of the carpenters he was working with" during the building of the camp, before any soldiers were in it.

After General Bell had divulged the matter, Mrs. Humiston last night admitted that she had sent the couple to Camp Upton "to prove that a girl of her age and a man of 40 could register as man and wife."

The girl, who said her name was "Flossie or Adeline Francis—they generally call me Adeline," and that she had been living with Mrs. Humiston, refused to answer further questions of the Secret Service officials. The pair registered as "Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pendleton of Kansas City," and said they had come to see a friend at the camp.

When Mrs. Humiston made her statement concerning what she regarded as the conditions at Camp Upton, General Bell asked her to furnish the names of the two dead girls, so he might make a thorough examination, and officials connected with the army camp recreation and social service also asked her to give any information that she had which might aid in improving conditions. She refused the request of Washington officials, asserting that she would only give out her information if Secretary of War Baker should himself request her to head the investigation of conditions in army camps, or "if some reputable newspaper should empower me to investigate, and should be willing to furnish all the funds required for the inquiry and to stand the gaff for anything I found out."

To General Bell's letter she responded that she "would take pleasure in talking with him at an early date" on the matter. But Mrs. Humiston, so far as known, has not been in or near Camp Upton. What she did is told in her own statement over the telephone last night:

"A man about 40 years old and a girl 16 years old, under my instructions, left the Long Island station late Sunday afternoon and arrived at Camp Upton that evening. They did not carry baggage. Following my instructions they went to the camp hotel and registered as man and wife. Despite the difference in their ages the clerk asked no questions.

"On a night prior to their going to the hotel, I gave a dance to working girls, and this girl attended. Several soldiers had also been invited, and one of them was in the hotel when the couple registered, and recognized the girl. This soldier then tipped off the military police of the camp. The police entered the room and asked the girl whether she intended to stay in that room all night.

Carrying Out Instructions.

"She responded that she had come to the room to get information. At the time the camp police entered she was taking down a list of articles in the room, as instructed by me, to be used later, if necessary, to prove that she and the man with her had gained entrance to the place. The girl was arraigned before a Police Chief and questioned, but she held steadfast and did not say that she had been instructed to go there under my instruction. The man admitted to questions that he had come to the hotel at his own suggestion to get information.

"Today, while two high officials from Governor's Island were in my office to confer regarding the supposed conditions at Camp Upton, the girl entered and made her statement in the officers' presence. Following the hearing of her story the officers agreed that the girl and man go to Camp Upton on Tuesday to prove that a girl of her age and a man of forty can register as man and wife.

The man in the affair, James C. Adkins, whom Mrs. Humiston referred to as "a reputable, patriotic man," was employed as a carpenter during the construction of the camp. During this period, as he admitted to a Secret Service agent after being taken into custody at the hotel, he heard "that there was two girls found dead."

Q.—Where did you say they were found dead? A.—It was when was working on the ice plant that hear it. They didn't say where they found dead, only they said on the edge of the camp.

Q.—Whom did you hear that from? A.—From some of the carpenters that was working with.

Q.—Had they seen those two girls? A.—Not to my knowledge. They said it was what they had heard. It was an evident fact that they had heard it and did not know for sure themselves.

Q.—And you told this to Mrs. Humiston? A.—I told Mrs. Humiston that I had heard this from them. I saw her two days later, when I had been trying to find out about the crimes being done.

Q.—How did you go about trying to find out? A.—I wrote to a friend of mine out here.

At their next meeting, Adkins said, he told her he had nothing further to report. Then Mrs. Humiston told him "that she had heard about the girls and who had taken their bodies away when she was going to investigate."

Adkins further told her, he said, that he had heard of men and women going to the camp and registering as brother and sister or man and wife, on the pretense of seeing friends. Then, he said, Mrs. Humiston said something to him about going there, and that "she had a girl she could trust." "She said," Adkins told the Secret Service officials, "that she would like to know the true conditions of the camp, and as a citizen I was willing. I paid my own expenses. I done this as a citizen of the country to find out if the things here was true." But he later admitted that if he would give her a statement regarding this possibility she would consider it worth $5. "She didn't want me to let General Bell know it," he said, "but I intended personally to let General Bell know it and also let Mrs. Humiston know."

Adkins had previously written to Sergeant C. W. Penland of the Cooks and Bakers' School at Camp Upton as follows:

Dear Friend: Will now try to write you a few lines to ask a favor of you, as well as to tell you what to do in order to get tickets to the dance free. I am helping Mrs. Humiston by doing (keep this to yourself) some detective work in regards to girls under 17 years of age being enticed from their homes to white slavery, and I have told her about two girls being found dead near the camp while I was working there, and now she wants as many of our Sgts 1st Class as she can get to do so to come over to her office and tell her what you know about the conditions of the camp and how the girls stay overnight there, and she told me to tell you she would not use your name in any way when she goes to Washington to see the Secretary of War about same, and for you telling her what you know and think would be best to do she will give you free tickets to the show.

Hoping to see you at noon Wed. and with my best wishes to all the boys I am,
Your friend, JAS. C. ADKINS,
435 East Fifteenth Street.

Penland had met Adkins while the latter was employed at the camp. He attended the dance, which was the one given by Mrs. Humiston, above referred to, and with another Sergeant met the girl known as Miss Francis. At 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, according to Adkins, he met Mrs. Humiston at the Pennsylvania station and was introduced by her to Miss Francis. The pair then went to Camp Upton and registered at the hotel, telling the clerk that they had come to see a friend and had expected to get back to Brooklyn that night, but found that the last train had gone. Adkins told the secret service operator he had intended to go back to town that night, leaving the girl in the room alone, so as not to injure her reputation. But he missed the train, and then made other plans, the nature of which was not disclosed. Before going to the hotel, however, he had called at the cooks and bakers' school and asked for Penland. Remarks made there led to the secret service officials going to the hotel and finding Adkins and Miss Francis in the room.

Officers at Camp Upton said last night that if these investigators were fair samples of Mrs. Humiston's staff it was not surprising that she has been misled by unfounded rumors, and that no pro-German activity could be more harmful to the efficiency and good name of the national army than the circulation of unwarranted accusations against the troops in camp.

Nearly Half Is In 61 Mortgages in Westchester and This City.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Charles C. Fenno, as special attorney for the State Controller, today filed an appraisal of the estate of the late Mrs. Laura C. Crane of Scarsdale with Surrogate Sawyer of Westchester County, which shows that she left property valued at $1,003,551. An unusual feature of the personal estate left by Mrs. Crane is that it is made up of sixty-one mortgages on real estate in Westchester County and New York City valued at close to $500,000. Mrs. Crane's personalty is appraised at $723,951.75, while her real estate is valued at $279,600.

At the time of her death she had $52,080 cash on deposit and owned the following stocks and bonds: 200 shares Standard Oil Company of New Jersey valued at $157,600, 184 shares Illinois Central R. R. valued at $19,504, and ten $1,000 bonds of the Gulf & Ship Island Railroad Company valued at $8,450.

Under the will Alexander B. Crane, husband of the decedent, inherits $191,843.58, while Elizabeth G., Caroline E., Helen C., Aurelia B. Crane, and Laura C. Burgess, daughters, and Alexander M. Crane, a son, receive bequests averaging $124,487.64 each. The White Plains Hospital receives $500, the Church of St. James the Less at Scarsdale gets $1,000, while the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute is left $400.

WILL DINE NEGRO SOLDIERS.

Nathan Straus Will Entertain Fifty on Thanksgiving Day.

H. Wall, Secretary of the Rocky Mountain Club, announced last night he had received the following letter from Nathan Straus:

"My Dear Mr. Wall:

"Already before receipt of your first communication I had made up my mind to entertain some of 'our boys' at my home Thanksgiving.

"As I suspect that the colored soldiers and sailors may not be so well remembered for this occasion, I choose them as my proffered guests. The bravery they displayed whenever our democracy was imperiled entitles them to the highest degree of respect and admiration.

"Will you assign to me not more than fifty nor less than forty for this our national Thanksgiving Day, to be at my residence, 27 West Seventy-second Street, at 1 o'clock?"

RADICAL LAWS PROPOSED FOR POOL

roads are now overburdened in transporting steel, iron ore, and other commodities for war purposes. Their congested condition is intensified by the operation of this law, while the congestion might be relieved somewhat by using roads not so busy with Government work.

It is proposed that this law be amended and a subcommittee on traffic named, whose duty it would be to direct traffic over lines best situated to receive it. Agencies would be established at all the big shipping centres, which would designate the routes freight must take. If this cannot be done the railroads will be confronted by the alternative of an embargo. And if an embargo is raised, the railroads will pick out a long list of non-essentials and absolutely refuse to accept freight so classified. One of the classes that would be hardest hit would be the florists, who would be unable to get coal for heating their greenhouses. The railroad experts have ascertained that 750,000 tons of coal are used every year by nurserymen.

Pooling of Revenues.

The railroad officials made it plain that the present plans did not contemplate a pooling of revenues, although many of the resourceful and far-seeing managers are strongly in favor of such a course. They say that the problem can be settled properly by pooling the revenues and the carriers obtaining their pro rata of the receipts as determined upon their haul. This would place the railroads completely under the direction of a board which would have undisputed control of the railroad situation in the country. The reforms now under consideration merely contemplate the pooling of facilities, cars, locomotives, and terminals. The radical steps of combining the revenues may come if the pooling of equipment should fail of its purpose.

The pooling of equipment has not as yet taken into consideration the New England lines. Their representatives will be asked to meet the Committee of Seven shortly and enter the proposed combination, now including all the roads in Eastern territory except those of New England.

Curtailment of passenger trains, which is being gradually effected by all the roads, will be carried out as far as practicable. The Baltimore & Ohio yesterday announced the discontinuance of some trains between Philadelphia and Washington, and this road and the Pennsylvania, both of which are bearing the greatest burden of freight business, will remove other passenger trains. The taking off of fast trains to the West is contemplated.

The experience of the roads in reducing the number of trains has not worked out well in several instances. Travel is so heavy now that the few trains left on the schedule cannot carry it, and as many as four sections have to be put on in some cases to take care of the demand.

The charging of greater rates for passenger travel, adopted by the British Government in order to discourage pleasure travel, is now seriously considered as a means of reducing travel. Travel was reduced by 50 per cent. in the British Isles after the increased rates went into effect. Excursions and all other unnecessary gatherings which increase passenger travel will be discouraged in the hope of subordinating travel to actual business and military necessity.

Before the plans now under way are actually consummated the Government, it was predicted today, will come to the rescue of the carriers and force the enactment of necessary legislation by Congress. Legislation to permit pooling of revenues, the abolishment of private routing, and perhaps Federal incorporation of the roads may come in the early days of the next Congress session.

Free Time for Freight Reduced

To reduce congestion at seaport terminals the Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized railroads to modify their rules, reducing from fifteen to ten days the free time for freight at North Atlantic ports and a reduction from ten to seven days at Gulf ports. The commission also approved a reduction from five to two days in free time allowed for domestic freight confined to New York lighterage, and declared reasonable the railroads' proposed doubling of storage charge on both export and domestic shipments.

The commission found proposed reductions from ten to five days in free time applicable to bunker coal at New Orleans, Mobile, and Pensacola justified.

The Lehigh Valley Transportation Company and the Ontario & Western Railroad asked the commission for authority to increase water rates on anthracite to New England by varying amounts ranging from 25 to 50 cents per gross ton.

POOL RECEIPTS A PUZZLE.

Railroads Face Problem of Just Division of Their Revenues.

While the Railroads' War Board is busy in Washington planning with the Government authorities for the operation of the Eastern carriers in a pool, transportation financiers and Presidents are facing the problem of working out a method for the distribution of receipts, so as to insure an adequate and continuing supply of funds for current expenses.

The operating Vice Presidents of the Eastern roads, who have been in conference with the War Board in Washington, are expected to return to their individual roads today and report on tentative drafts of plans for the pooling. Railroad executives in New York said yesterday that until they received these reports they could make no estimate of the practical effects.

For several months the War Board, with the co-operation of the Commission on Car Service, has been pooling freight cars and, without regard to ownership, ordering them to localities where most needed. The extension of this practice to include locomotives, and perhaps crews, would not be a complicated matter. But the common use of terminals, yards, bridges, stations, and other equipment opens a new and untried field and a problem of accounting of formidable proportions. The per diem freight-car charge is used in checking up the use of transferred freight cars, and some such plan could be worked out for the use of locomotives, but an entirely new basis of computation for the use of the terminals of one road by another would have to be worked out.

Pooling of Traffic.

But even these circumstances are small in consideration of the plan to pool traffic—in other words, to use some roads or routes, for instance, entirely for coal, a low-grade traffic, taking away the high-grade traffic such roads might have. Under the existing system a shipper routes his consignment over the road he chooses. If the War Board is to take that shipment and send it over another road, which perhaps might use some equipment from a third road, to a terminal of a fourth road, the problem becomes complicated. No one of these roads may be allowed to keep all of the receipts. Just how the receipts are to be divided is the problem facing traffic financiers.

ENEMY INSURANCE BUSINESS BANNED

Marine, Fire, and Casualty Companies Ordered Liquidated by Secretary McAdoo.

LIFE CONTRACTS CONTINUE

Concession to Policy Holders—Order Applies to Ally-of-Enemy as Well as German Concerns.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Under a decision announced by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo today all enemy and ally-of-enemy insurance companies, excepting those dealing in life insurance, are prohibited from doing further business in this country. Such life insurance companies may carry out existing contracts, but not write new business. The Secretary announced that all companies coming under the prohibition would be liquidated.

The decision, made under the Trading With the Enemy act, followed a hearing before Assistant Secretary Rowe, at which arguments against permitting the German and ally-of-enemy insurance companies to do business were submitted by the American Defense Society, of which Richard M. Hurd is Chairman, and others. The point was made at the hearing that it was "unsafe, unsound, unpatriotic, and unnecessary" to allow enemy or ally-of-enemy concerns to operate in this country during the war.

Text of the Decision.

Secretary McAdoo's decision follows:

"By virtue of the authority vested in me by the President under the Trading With the Enemy act, to grant or withhold licenses to enemy or ally-of-enemy insurance companies, a hearing was called of the various parties interested, including the State Superintendents of Insurance. The hearing was largely attended, and after full discussion briefs were filed.

"Upon careful weighing of the evidence submitted, I have reached the conclusion that the safety of the United States requires that enemy and ally-of-enemy marine, fire, and casualty insurance companies shall not be allowed to do business as going concerns. The consideration of safety is so important as to render it unnecessary to determine at this time whether this action is also demanded by other considerations incident to the successful prosecution of the war.

"In these circumstances I am convinced that the best interests of the country will be served by the liquidation of these companies under the direction of their American management and subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe.

"As the liquidation of the life insurance companies involved may work an injustice to policy holders, and as the information accessible to such companies cannot benefit the enemy, because of the character of the business and its inconsiderable proportions, these companies for the present will be allowed to continue existing contracts."

Facilities for Spy Work.

In the arguments offered before Assistant Secretary Rowe, it was stated that the German and enemy-ally insurance firms had access to the work of engineers and inspectors of the National or State Boards of Underwriters, and that they were able to send their inspectors through properties, including munitions plants, flour mills, storage warehouses, docks, wire factories, and other industrial establishments related to the war industries of the country. Information obtainable in this way, it was suggested, might be of advantage to enemy aliens in finding the easiest way to start fires, turn off sprinkler systems, and arrange for explosions.

Another point raised was that, by permitting German or allied concerns to operate, the way would be opened for the spread by German propagandists of sentiment favorable to Germany, on the theory that since Americans patronized German concerns they could be regarded as not ill-disposed toward the German nation.

Still another argument was advanced that no American ought to accept fire, marine or other insurance with a German or allied German firm while this country was at war with Germany, as to do so would merely put American money into German hands. It was pointed out that Americans, becoming awakened to the situation, already had canceled approximately two-thirds of the $3,500,000 of risks held Jan. 1, 1917, by enemy or ally-of-enemy insurance companies in the United States. The American fire insurance companies, it was stated, had canceled all their reinsurance treaties with German companies, but a few American firms still had reinsurance with Austrian or Bulgarian concerns. It was urged that to permit German ally concerns to operate would merely mean that German reinsurance would be kept up through their agency.

Companies None Too Strong.

The condition of German and allied fire insurance firms was also urged, figures being offered to show that they had assets of only $27,772,000 as against risks of $2,853,370,000. Danger existed, the Secretary was urged, in event of a large conflagration, of these concerns going bankrupt and evading payment of the policies. The experience after the San Francisco fire was cited, in which some German concerns denied liability, others paid 75 per cent. of the policies, and one or two a little more. That Germany was bankrupt and would not back the German concerns was offered in argument.

The work of liquidating the German and ally concerns is to be expedited, so that all of them will be wound up within a few weeks.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 26.—Fourteen alien insurance companies doing business in Texas will be affected by the order of Secretary McAdoo. The license of the Cologne Reinsurance Company of Cologne, Germany, was revoked a few days ago by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking C. O. Austin for failure to comply with the Trading with the Enemy act.

INTERN A GERMAN WHO FOOLED BRITISH

Steinforth, ex-Artillery Officer, Sent to Ellis Island—Rintelen Is Sentenced Again.

Wilhelm Steinforth, known also as Peter Stevenson, who during the first year of the European war was an officer of artillery in the German Army, and was captured by the French during the 1915 Champagne drive, was interned on Ellis Island by order of the Department of Justice yesterday. For some months past Steinforth, under the name of Peterson, has been employed as a teacher of German in the Franklin School, a private school for boys at 18 West Eighty-ninth Street.

Before his internment Steinforth said he was 27 years old. He speaks English like a native and has a knowledge of the Scandinavian tongues, by which he was able to pass as a Norwegian when he fell into the hands of the British, after his escape from the French prison camp near Rochelle, France.

Steinforth was in this camp for only a few weeks before he escaped. He tunneled under the electrified barbed wires and managed to get to a French port, where he stowed away on the British freighter Portland, then about to sail for New York via Bermuda. For six days out the German lived on chocolate cake. Not once during these days did he have a drop of water, and he was on the verge of collapse when his presence on board was discovered. At Bermuda the Captain of the Portland turned the stowaway over to the British authorities. To them Steinforth said he was a Norwegian, and added a pathetic yarn to account for his action in trying to make America as a stowaway. He was believed, and a few days later sailed for New York. He met friends who provided him with funds to refit himself with good clothes, and hearing that a teacher of German was needed by the Franklin School, applied for and was given the position.

Captain Franz Rintelen, the German naval officer, who in 1915 came to the United States to instigate strikes in munition plants, and who is now serving a sentence for his part in that conspiracy, was arraigned in the Federal Court yesterday to answer an indictment charging a conspiracy to defraud the United States by fraudulently obtaining a State Department passport in the Summer of 1915, just before he sailed for Europe under the name of "Gasche." He was captured by the British and sent back to answer the charges against him. When arraigned before Judge Mayer yesterday Rintelen, through his attorney, George Gordon Battle, entered a plea of guilty. Judge Mayer sentenced him to serve one year and one day in the Atlanta Penitentiary, the sentence to begin as soon as the present one is finished.

DEFERS HEARING ON LA FOLLETTE

Chairman Pomerene Is Awaiting Return of Absent Senators.

DEFENSE SOCIETY ACTIVE

Will Present a Brief Calling for Expulsion for Giving "Aid to the Public Enemy."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The hearing by a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections into the charge of disloyal utterances against Senator La Follette of Wisconsin went over today because of the absence of Senator Walsh of Montana, who is ill, and Senator Fall of New Mexico. Senator Pomerene, chairman of the committee, in putting off the hearings, announced that he wished to have all the five members present before proceeding. Senator James and Dillingham, the other members of the committee, were ready to go ahead, but deferred to Senator Pomerene.

William J. Bryan, who has announced his willingness to appear before the committee, to controvert a statement made by Senator La Follette that Mr. Bryan told him he had advised the President that the sinking of the Lusitania was justifiable, has an engagement in Washington next Sunday, and the committee will probably defer its hearings to accommodate itself to his convenience. That may mean that the hearing will not be resumed until next week.

Announcement was made here today that the American Defense Society of New York was prepared to aid in pressing the case against Senator La Follette. Attorneys for the society, it was said, were preparing their evidence in the form of a brief. The society urges the expulsion of Senator La Follette.

At the next meeting of the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, which is to consider the question of expelling Senator La Follette from Congress, the American Defense Society, of which Richard M. Hurd is Chairman, and which includes in its membership some of the most prominent men of the country, will present a brief showing that the expulsion of La Follette is entirely within the legal rights of the Senate, and demanding his expulsion because the "Senator from Wisconsin has given aid and comfort to the public enemy."

The brief will deal most emphatically with the question of La Follette's sending out over his mail frank propaganda the like of which has been seen used by the Germans in Russia and Italy. The Defense Society's Anti-Disloyalty Committee, of which James M. Beck was at one time Chairman, and which is now headed by W. H. Gardiner of 2 Rector Street, has been collecting evidence against La Follette. The brief itself has been prepared by New York lawyers of high standing.

It was after his speech in St. Paul last September, in which he defended the sinking of the Lusitania, that the American Defense Society first began to investigate the activities of Senator La Follette, of which thousands of complaints were received by the society.

DESPOTISM, NOT LIBERTY.

The new despotism in Russia moves fast. The other day it was merely beginning, by suppressing all newspapers except Socialist ones and by ordering the well-to-do classes to furnish the army with supplies. Such first steps inevitably presage new and longer ones. Now comes an order directing the Kronstadt soldiers to break up all organizations opposed to the Bolsheviki and arrest the members. Simultaneously comes a proclamation declaring that the bourgeoisie are "blocking efforts to provision the army," which evidently means that they are not coming forward with the supplies they have been ordered to furnish, and this proclamation is a preparation for confiscation. Along with orders to private citizens to support the army come orders to banks to turn over money to the "Government." The Moscow branch of the State Bank is seized, its manager arrested, and the gold deposit confiscated. On the eve of the elections to the Constituent Assembly the opposition posters are torn down, their campaign literature seized, and the Bolsheviki soldiers announce that if the elections are against the Bolsheviki they will disperse the Constituent Assembly with their bayonets.

These first fruits of the new tyranny have all been garnered within the last three days. As time passes, the pace will accelerate. This is certain, because it is impossible to conduct a nation's affairs by seizing banks and despoiling the rich; poverty and distress will merely increase, the demand for relief will be irresistible, and the ignorant zealots at the top will know no way to satisfy it except by increasing robbery, increasing tyranny, increasing spoliation. The more such measures are adopted, the more the general distress will grow and the faster will come the vain attempts to stop it by new outrages.

There is no indication anywhere of an attempt on the part of any influential party or faction to make Russia a land of liberty. The attempt is to substitute the despotism of the Socialist proletariat for the overthrown despotism of the Czardom. In lands which have long known liberty it has come to be recognized that liberty cannot be had by giving any class, whether majority or minority, the power of ruling over other classes, for human selfishness makes it impossible that a class so empowered will give just or fair treatment to the classes at its mercy. Perfect liberty is impossible. In free countries the condition which we call liberty has been reached by the abandonment of rule by any one class, and the substitution of a state of compromise, in which all give up a certain part of their liberty, that part at which it begins to infringe on the liberty of others, and all classes are equal before the law. This liberty was slowly won. It took many centuries to bring about a recognition of the fact that it, and it alone, was true liberty. It is seven hundred years since the Barons confronted King JOHN and won from him the first concession toward it. Through all those centuries "freedom "slowly broadened down from prec-"edent to precedent." We did not come upon our priceless possession suddenly, overnight. It is still imperfect, even now.

But Russia, with her old standards overthrown and lost, stands not even where the Barons did at Runnymede, but a century or two before that; and she has all the long way to go that we have gone before she will learn what liberty is. To her today it represents only the opportunity for the under dog to get on top and to bite the upper dog. LENINE, with his seemingly ultra-modern jargon of bourgeoisie and capitalism, is intellectually and politically considerably further back than WAT TYLER. It is five hundred years since he raised the Bolsheviki standard, making the demands which SHAKESPEARE has transferred to the mouth of Jack Cade, burning title-deeds, hanging lawyers, laying the rich under contribution, and making it illegal to read, write, or own property; and yet there was even in him a dim recognition of the fact that other people had rights as well as the working classes, to which his Russian imitators may not attain for a century or so.

IN SOUTH AMERICA.

When the arrest of a well-known resident of Brazil's capital was followed by the discovery in his house of elaborate plans for the operation and maintenance of German submarines along the coast, the Government gave some weight to the assertions of fishermen and steamship passengers who said they had seen a submarine near the southern provinces, where a revolt of German immigrants has been suppressed. It was recalled that LUXBURG, Germany's Minister at Buenos Aires, suggested in July to the Berlin Government that a squadron of submarines be sent to South America. Lighthouses have been darkened and Brazilian vessels move with care. Probably there are no submarines in the southern waters, but Brazil does well to be on guard. If they should appear, they would be found in the vicinity of those provinces where the entire army is now stationed to restrain the foreign settlers whose purpose has been to set up there a German State. LUXBURG said this was one of the Berlin Government's "principal aims" in South America. Brazil is solving her war problems. All German subjects are to be interned, and the Government has assumed control of their banks and commercial houses.

Argentina's President is asking for a conference of all the southern republics. The attitude of his country's people toward Germany has been clearly shown by Congress votes and in other ways. Some have thought that he was not in agreement with the majority. So far as can be learned, however, he is in sympathy with Germany's foes, but has opposed an open national expression of such sympathy because he fears it would cause great commercial loss and largely increase the republic's debt. Those whom LUXBURG called the "veneered Indians" of South America should unite in expressing to the world their opinion about the issues of the war and the conduct of belligerents. South America could co-operate in many ways for the benefit of those whom a great majority of the southern people are now willing to assist.

"ON TO WASHINGTON!"

"On to Washington!" cries Mr. MORRIS HILLQUIT at a meeting celebrating the great Socialist vote and woman suffrage given by it to New York. "The 150,000 votes which we gained in the State," he says, "turned "the [suffrage] defeat of two years "ago into a decisive victory this year, "and these votes have come in decisively numbers and heaviest from precisely the same districts which have "given us the heaviest Socialistic pluralities." Mr. HILLQUIT rejoices in "the 150,000 female Socialists" added to his party. The twin victories of socialism and feminism in New York must bear fruit at Washington. There must be "an imposing" Socialist delegation in the next Congress. "Socialism works for peace." Whereat there is tumultuous, ecstatic cheering. Socialism works for the obstruction of the war, for a German peace. We all know that. A large number of German pacifists has been added to the New York electorate.

"On to Washington!" is the cry of the National American Woman Suffrage Association also. Mrs. CATT, President of the association, is to head the campaign for the Federal suffrage amendment:

> She and the other leaders of the association assert that, with the new leverage of women's votes in New York, and the approaching election of forty-three members of Congress from that State, the National Woman Suffrage Association is confident of "putting through real business" early in the coming session.

The supreme business of the country and the world, the prosecution of the war, momentous legislation and revision of legislation, must be neglected. The suffrage amendment is "the real business" which Congress must agree to, under constant pestering and threat. The suffrage workers will be on hand next week when Congress meets. Delegates of every State suffrage association will be present. The name of each Representative will go on the black list or the white, according to his views, ascertained since adjournment by the indefatigable agitators. In the second week of December the National Association will meet in Washington. In that crowded city, full today of all the engrossing tasks, military, naval, economic, industrial, financial, transportation, a multitudinous nexus of the gravest responsibilities which the Government has ever had to bear, the national suffrage convention will be held for the purpose of personally bothering, persuading, or bulldozing Congress to pass the Federal amendment at once. There will be some 1,000 delegates. They will be there to filch the time which Congressmen owe to the country and the war, to distract their attention, to cajole or menace, to interfere with the vital work of the nation at the gravest hour of its history.

Plain speaking is best. It is but a disguised, more dangerous form of picketing which these sorely misguided women are about to undertake. The easy good nature, the weakness of the political man is but too often evident, yet surely the common sense, the personal dignity, most of all, the sober patriotism of Congress will rebel at this untimely and at any time inexcusable, concerted scheme of dictation. It is utterly unrepresentative of the majority of the woman voters in this State, and, we believe, in all States. It is, in its way, an attempt to obstruct the progress of the war, to divide the energies of the Government and the people. What new friends do the woman suffragists expect to make for their cause by this exhibition of the unwisdom, the lack of proportion, and the unconscious lack of patriotism of so many of its leaders and advocates? Female suffrage is more important than the winning of the war—that is all that can be made out of their conduct. Power brings them no sense of responsibility. They win this State only to browbeat Congress and to seek to impose suffrage on unwilling States.

To the Southern Congressmen, familiar with the melancholy history of negro suffrage, does suffrage by Federal amendment seem safe or desirable? To the prohibitionists of the South, where prohibition has come by the votes of white men, on account of and to the regret of the negroes, does Federal suffrage look desirable or safe? To Congressmen of whatever part of the country, does it seem wise to yield to women who prefer their whim to the vital necessities of the country, to set a precedent for interference in the domestic legislation of the several States?

PRICES, PROFITS, AND PRODUCTION.

The National Foreign Trade Council includes men inferior to none in times of peace in authority upon the subject on which they issue a statement designed to influence action by Congress at the approaching session. Probably none will dispute that it is a general principle that the price necessary to produce the goods must be paid, including a fair profit to the producer. Otherwise producers will not produce. But these are times when the customary laws of economics are not operative. We have recently seen such buying that even extraordinary profits failed to stimulate production. In the iron, copper, and coal trades, to name no others, profits inconsistent with public interest had no other effect than to raise prices to a level that drove out of trade all except the Governments that were spending tax money. They would spend soon all the money in the world if that policy persisted. We have also seen such excessive wages in some trades that labor was demoralized instead of stimulated. There have been published cases in which manual ironworkers have earned at the rate of $10,000 a year, and coal miners $5,000. In the coal trade at least the effect was that the men took holidays to such an extent that the production of coal was reduced. The general movement for shortening hours and limiting employment to favored classes of labor is known to all.

The time will come again when all will agree with the council that profits necessary to sustain production should and must be allowed. But the world is agreed that there should be a limit to war profits. For example, there appears on the same day with the council's statement a declaration by the Government manager of the trust of the meat trusts. The five concerns have named to them the profits which will be allowed as sufficient in the public interest. Their services are declared "vital" to the Government. Needless to say, the allowed profits are not niggardly. They would be ample in peace and could be exceeded in war. But they are restricted, and it is not expected that production will be restricted. The same thing is true of the railways. Their profits have been restricted, and their production has increased, at the same time that their costs are regulated upward by influences beyond their control.

It cannot be supposed that the council disputes the Government policy of restricting profits and prices. The council merely overlooked it because it has seen and had in mind such evil results from the policy of limiting fair profits through undiscriminating hatred of capital. There is no such motive in the Government's restriction of profits to prevent prices reaching an explosive tension. The present regulations lay least weight on prices asked by retailers. They lay greatest weight upon prices and profits by primary producers. In the flour trade each step in the entire series of processes is regulated, from the farm to the eater. In the steel trade the organization daily approaches that ideal. In the packing trade there is nothing left unregulated. There could not be a more complete suspension of the rule that producers are the judges of the profits which will bring production. The singular thing about it is that approval drowns dissent. The current number of the Bakers' Weekly says:

> Every baker is glad to be an agent of the United States and to do whatever work may be required of him by those who are being held responsible for the conservation of the food supply.

Judge GARY has expressed similar sentiments on behalf of the iron industry. The prices accepted by the copper trade actually had to be raised. The Government had to raise coal prices because it put them too low.

The moral is not that peace economics should control war policies, but that everything must yield to the most uneconomic and irresistible of economic influences. Our economic organization can never be the same after the war. The combinations now forming are more permanent than is appreciated. The anthracite coal trade has never reverted to the conditions which preceded the Roosevelt settlement. The Government warred upon its "trust" in vain, and in the nation's need the organized coal industry has been a most efficient servant of the nation. The war has produced a combination in the bituminous industry, which had theretofore resisted all attempts in that direction. There never was such a combination in the packing industry as the one now managed by the Government. The railway pool is an example of what the railways long wanted, which the law forbade in vain and which can never be altogether undone. When peace returns, the policies advocated by the Foreign Trade Council will revive in considerable degree, no doubt, and with hearty support. The thing to do now is to support the Government, for every one knows the alternative.

BUILDING THE SHIPS TO WIN THE WAR.

The program of the Emergency Fleet Corporation is all that could be desired on paper. Performance will depend upon complete co-ordination between officers of the corporation, the shipbuilders, and the army of labor. The labor forces must be so large that three shifts can be employed on every working day of twenty-four hours. Americans will be living in a fools' paradise if they think that any other arrangement will produce the promised 6,000,000 gross tons. It will be necessary to beat previous records in shipbuilding. Japan has set a high mark recently, according to the shipping journals. It is said that the Kawasaki Dockyard Company of Kobe has launched a 9,000-ton steamer with engines on board two months and twenty-seven days after laying the keel. In the building of small freighters the Japanese also had a fine achievement to their credit in the month of August, when twenty-six vessels, each exceeding 1,000 tons, with a total of 109,621 tons, were launched from their yards. May it not be expected that when the American builders get their machinery of construction running smoothly records will be made?

The preliminary work was on a colossal scale. Organization took more time than could well be spared, and discussion about designs and material was so long continued as to be obstructive. The wooden ship and steel ship partisans are still at loggerheads. Getting out the timber from the forests and transporting it presented other problems. And there was the rivalry of the Atlantic and the Pacific yards, some in existence and others to be fitted out. There were so many people getting in the way of one another it seemed as if a real start would never be made. But at last the wheels began to move. Today forty-three shipyards on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts are "humming with industry," and on the Pacific Coast from twenty-five to thirty yards are in operation. It has been estimated that it will take forty to sixty days to finish the wooden ships after launching. Calculations about the steel ships show variation. If at first American builders do not quite keep pace with the British and Japanese, it must be remembered that many of our yards have been literally created out of nothing. Consider that only a year or so ago there were but two yards in the East turning out wooden ships. The production of steel vessels was fair, but no more.

The American builders are already gathering speed. By Nov. 20 thirty-three requisitioned vessels had been completed and released; they were commandeered in an unfinished state in private yards. A good many ships of this class will soon be available. Long before Spring the new program, as distinguished from commandeered resources, should be well advanced. Mistakes too many to count were originally made, but what else could be expected in the multitude of counselors? If all is not order and economy of effort yet, the saw and the riveter's hammer are heard on every hand.

The figures given out by the Emergency Fleet Corporation, contracts let for 884 new vessels, 426 building vessels requisitioned, and 1,409 of all types to be ready and in service by the end of 1918, including 278 big cargo carriers of 7,500 tons and over and 70 transports, are full of encouragement when the warning of Sir JOSEPH MACLAY, the British Controller of shipping, is remembered: that unless the United States constructs 6,000,000 tons annually its military efforts will be crippled. It can be done, but only if there is a steady pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together, with a full realization that speed is essential to success in the vast undertaking. The manning of the fleet is another problem. That also calls for organization, mobilization, and the hardest kind of practical effort. No time should be lost in finding the solution and accelerating the ways and means.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Artist Shows His Sense.

Much lamentation over the determination of FRITZ KREISLER to retire from the concert stage till the war is over can confidently be expected from the superior persons who claim that Art is a thing without relation to anything else, especially frontiers. They can say, truly enough, that Mr. KREISLER does not play the violin the worse for having been an Austrian officer in active service, and they have a colorable excuse for saying that what he does with the American money honestly earned is, on general principles, nobody's business except his own.

They—and some people who do not claim to be very superior—can go further and say that Mr. KREISLER, being an Austrian, is not an "enemy alien" at all, at least in the technical sense of that phrase, and that, while he can hardly be called our friend, since his sympathies are confessedly with our foes, he, unlike a good many others in the same or an analogous position, has carefully and consistently observed, so far as the public knows, the excellent advice of the Attorney General—"Keep your mouth shut and obey the law."

None the less is it true that, in taking the action he has, Mr. KREISLER has acted wisely. His retirement is a recognition of facts and conditions as they are. Had he obstinately stood on his legal rights, he would have continued to offend no inconsiderable part of the American public, and though in almost any of our larger cities he could have attracted large and enthusiastic audiences, they would have been made up mainly, as they have been here, of people who applauded him as a Teuton rather than as a violinist, and who took the opportunity he provided to demonstrate that they, too, were in mind antagonistic to our national policies. Sooner or later this would have resulted in disturbances that might easily have developed into violence.

As it is, Mr. KREISLER can withdraw temporarily from view, and he will take with him an amount of approval as a good musician who was a good soldier and who has a sense of propriety and expediency that not all artists possess. This appreciation will be of value to him and to his country when come the better days for which we are all hoping.

A Failure That Was a Triumph.

In THE TIMES of Sunday last there was a remarkable narrative of experiences and achievements at Plattsburg, written by a man who, had he been less of a man, might easily have claimed a serious grievance against the training camp. For to go there he gave up, he said, a position that paid him $12,000 a year, which is a good deal of money. That position he cannot recover, as it is competently filled by a man whom it would be unjust to turn out, and, after doing for three months the hardest kind of work, the writer of the article has been sent back to civilian life as unqualified for holding the commission to which he aspired.

Here is heavy loss—a disappointment in which there lies something of humiliation—enough, surely, to serve not a few as basis for bitter complaint. Instead, there was in the article not even a word of regret. Its author declared that he had received at Plattsburg so much and so many benefits, physical, mental, and moral, that he counted his stay there quite the most profitable employment of time that he had made in his whole life, and with almost lyrical enthusiasm he praised the camp, its surroundings, and all its occupants.

What he wrote should be read with care by the opponents of military training—by those who in all the confidence of ignorant assumption assert that the effects of such training are invariably and entirely brutalizing and degrading. Conversions in that class, however, will be few, as its members scorn facts and are incapable of logic. From the article readers of another sort will get a different lesson, and they will be moved to ask why, if three months in the Plattsburg school do so much for a man, and so much that is as good preparation for peace as for war, exactly such training should not be made available all the time and for all.

To that question there is only one answer, and the answer is universal military training, for peace not less than for war.

Needlessly Starting a Quarrel.

There will be taken up tomorrow at the meeting of the Board of Education's Committee on the Course of Study a question sure to be discussed with bitterness, and sure, no matter how it may be answered, to excite bitter comment. It is the question whether or not the teaching of the German language should continue in the elementary and intermediate grades of the public schools of this city.

It is a great pity that the inquiry is so narrow. As compared with other foreign languages, much that is true can be said as to the value of German, and its equal or superior utility can be maintained by not a few sound arguments. On the other hand, they have a weak case who demand that German should be excluded from our schools because the United States, for many and good reasons, is at war with the German Government. But the Committee on the Course of Study would have avoided, if not all troubles, difficulties, and embarrassments, at least all connected with racial animosities and prejudices, and would have encountered only those that can be discussed calmly, if it had set out to decide, not the fate of German in the public schools, but that of all languages except English.

Even that question is not easy to answer, or rather it is to be answered only by answering another—Can any foreign language be taught in the lower schools efficiently enough to make the instruction profitable to anything like a majority of the pupils?

Opinions on that point will probably differ till the end of time, but it is a significant fact that the demand for the teaching of a foreign language in the public schools, no matter what language, invariably comes from parents who are themselves competent to give their children better training in the one language that interests them than those children can possibly get outside of their own homes. Germans never ask that French be taught, Italians do not yearn for Spanish. All that any of them really desires is "recognition"—recognition of their own racial importance—and for it they are willing that the time of their children should be wasted in the acquisition of what in at least ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is merely a worthless smattering, forgotten within a month after quitting school.

This larger question is the one which the members of the committee should take up.

A SONG FOR AUTUMN PASSING.

Adown the aisles of morning light,
Across the brooding depths of day,
And through the dark defiles of night,
Ye pealing pipes of Autumn, play!

Play the clear anthem of our praise
For harvests reaped and harvests stored;
A ringing jubilate raise
For all the granary's garnered hoard!

Let hill make echo unto hill,
Vale sound antiphonal to vale,
For the rich guerdon of His will
Whose tender mercy shall not fail!

Crowd bars upon melodious bars;
"Thanksgiving!" be the word they say!—
Until thy music touch the stars,
Ye pealing pipes of Autumn, play!

CLINTON SCOLLARD.

ART NOTES.

Sargent's Portrait of John D. Rockefeller and a Miniature of Bernhardt.

The portrait of John D. Rockefeller by John S. Sargent is now on view at the Knoedler Galleries. Mr. Rockefeller's fresh pink complexion is that of an outdoor man, a player of golf. The color blooms flower-like under the artist's agile brush, the shadows are translucent, and the beautiful half-tones about the eye sockets and the mouth are as ingratiating as only Sargent or Rubens could make them. The painting of the hands, too, is brilliant. The head seems to have been somewhat cut down in scale from a first plan, and the line where the background meets it is somewhat sharp. That Mr. Sargent is again painting portraits and painting them in this country is matter for congratulation.

Miniature of Bernhardt.

In the Knoedler Galleries is also an ivory miniature portrait of Sarah Bernhardt, painted from life at Long Beach last July by Alyn Williams, President of the Royal Society of Miniature Painters of London, who donates the miniature, which Mme. Bernhardt has signed, to be sold for the benefit of her special charity, the "Union des Arts Pour les Enfants des Artistes Tués à l'Ennemi." A facsimile of the same size as the original has been published by Manzi, Joyant et Cie., to be sold at $1 each for the same charity. The portrait represents an indomitable Bernhardt, practically untouched by time, slim and blond and fair as when twenty years ago she played in "Camille."

Demuth and Fisk.

At the Daniel Galleries Charles Demuth's charming color and original composition are on view in a number of beautiful little schematic designs over which something of joy in the visible world has played. This spirit of delight in colored visions is what they express and communicate. St. George's, Bermuda, is the scene in which the lively action takes place, and the interpretations of laughing sea and gleaming shore are more or less cryptic to the observer on the lookout for objective reality. It is worthy of note that the one picture in which a conventional statement of the thing seen is made is the least interesting of the group. There is some sort of a monument and the British flag. The latter is capitally painted, a triumph of difficult flag color, but the former is absolutely without artistic significance, a vacant spot in the composition that looks like a monument, to be sure, but has no relation to its surroundings in the matter of design; no relation whatever to the delicate shifting movements of color and rhythms of line about it. Perhaps it does more good by thus demonstrating the possibility of looking like something and having no artistic value than it could do in any other way. And the other notes of aesthetic adventure are lovely enough to make the lapse unimportant from the exhibition point of view.

In the smaller room are several landscapes and still-life subjects by Edward Fisk. The landscapes are rich in color and free in line, but are lacking in planar quality. The still life is admirable; the commonest objects, a glass fruit dish with scalloped edge, a cheap vase, a couple of books in ordinary binding, are given their full significance in the artistic scheme and gain distinction by their beautifully subordinated contribution to the whole.

LOOKS TO THE PATRIARCH.

Hope That Head of the Church May Save Russia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How to save Russia? That is the question nowadays repeated by millions and millions of people all over the world. Who will answer? Three centuries ago Russia was in a similar state of anarchy, helplessness and disorganization. There had been then an interregnum, Rurik's family having been extinguished. There were many pretenders to the Czar's throne, and the boyards had broken into several inimical factions. The Poles, mighty then, like the Germans of today, were supreme masters in the western provinces and, indeed, in Moscow itself. The Swedes were pressing from the north and the Cossacks dominated the south. Treason was rampant everywhere. Plunder, violence, and murder were going on unpunished. Then Patriarch Hermogen sent out his earnest appeals, calling up all true patriots. Whereupon Minin, citizen of Nijny-Novgorod, gathered plenty of money for the army, and Prince Pojarsky was made the chief commander. All the foreign enemies were driven out of Russia, order was established, and the Constituent Assembly selected young Michael Romanoff to the throne. Thus Russia was saved.

Today important news came from Moscow to the effect that the Patriarchate had just been re-established in Russia and that Metropolitan Tikhon has been elected to that post. It is certain that all Russians now are ardently hoping that the new Patriarch will imitate Patriarch Hermogen's glorious example. What a momentous opportunity for him to show to the world that his country was not called in vain "Holy Russia," that faith has not disappeared from the Russian soul, and that free Russians are able to sacrifice themselves for their country no less than formerly did the subjects of the Czar. Russia needs but a moral shakeup in order to re-establish unity, order, and the will to drive the foes from her soil.

Baron Rosen sends me word that the fifteen million Russian soldiers now with the colors do not want to fight, for since the Czar's abdication they see no reason for war. The new Patriarch may show them the reason: Russia must be cleared of the external and internal foes, order established, and the Constituent Assembly elected. Supreme efforts are yet needed in order that the Russian Republic may live.

Allies' Medals for Americans.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial article in your paper of Nov. 21, calling attention to the fact that American soldiers, having served with the allied armies, could not, upon joining the American Army, wear any medals of honor received for acts of bravery or deeds of valor while fighting against Germany, failed to mention the fact that Willard Saulsbury, Senator from Delaware, President pro tempore of the United States Senate, and a distinguished member of the Foreign Relations Committee, had foreseen the situation and had offered an amendment to Senate Bill 2796, providing for just such a contingency. This bill, with Senator Saulsbury's amendment attached, passed the Senate and was sent to the House, where it was favorably reported by the Committee on Military Affairs, and is now upon the House calendar, ready for action in the coming session of Congress.

FALSE RUMORS ABOUT THE CAMPS.

A Close Study of Life at Ayer Shows That Conditions Are the Very Best.

By HENRY ROOD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some of today's newspapers publish a dispatch from Ayer, Mass., stating that an officer has been appointed at Camp Devens to inspect and sample each meal served to soldiers of the Seventy-sixth Division of the National Army, now undergoing training there, and that "the step was taken as a result of rumors, thought to be part of German propaganda to spread discontent, that sour and stale food, poor meat, and cold coffee had been served the men."

For the sake of all concerned I desire to nail such rumors to the already overburdened mast of despicable falsehood and malicious intrigue whereupon so many other lies made in Germany, or by order of Germany, now are fluttering, exploded, tattered, utterly disproved.

About a month ago the Century Magazine commissioned me to go to one of the national army cantonments and there make an intensive study of the soldiers in training, paying particular attention to their living quarters, food, clothing, general health, and welfare as a whole. After calling at the office of the Secretary of War, after calling upon Provost Marshal General Crowder and Adjutant General McCain and Raymond B. Fosdick, Chairman of the War Department's Commission on Training Camp Activities, I decided that Camp Devens was representative of all the sixteen national army cantonments, and proceeded there. In response to a request from Washington the Divisional Adjutant of Major Gen. Hodges, commanding Camp Devens, willingly granted me a blanket permit to visit any and every part of the cantonment, freely to enter the 1,490 buildings, to talk with the men when off duty, to be with them at mess and in barracks, and everywhere else. There was absolutely no restriction, and you may be sure that the opportunity was fully availed of.

During the next fortnight I visited practically every part of that enormous military establishment; I was present over and over again at mess of both men and officers; I lounged around barracks and repeatedly talked with scores and scores of privates and noncoms. And I wish to say with all possible emphasis that the men at Camp Devens are getting better food and more of it than most of them ever had in their own homes. Six or eight weeks of the superb physical training they have received has worked a transformation. Most of the men arrived at Camp Devens as we see men on the streets of any city or town—civilians who have never been taught how to stand, how to walk; usually pale of face, with rounded or stooping shoulders. Some were fat, others of slight build, when they arrived. Today that body of soldiers in the making are husky, alert men, hard as nails, and working with intensity born of enthusiasm to get ready for the big job ahead of them on the other side of the Atlantic. No person can visit Camp Devens for half a day and have any possible doubt as to the quality and quantity of food being provided. The splendid physical appearance and the high spirit of those men eloquently give the lie, absolute and uncompromising, to any such wild stories as the propaganda rumor.

For a short time after Camp Devens was opened, I have been told, a company mess here or there did complain that the food was not always properly cooked; and it may be that in a few instances this was true. It is as difficult to obtain good army cooks as cooks for hotels, clubs, and other large groups which must be fed. But the difficulty which occasionally was encountered at the very beginning has been largely, if not entirely, done away with. Camp Devens had barely started its military training when an extensive school for cooks and bakers was opened, and there carefully chosen and exceptionally intelligent men have been taking a thorough and scientific course of cookery. As each week passes more and more of them finish this course of instruction and go back to the mess kitchens. This, I understand, is true of all of the other fifteen national army cantonments.

Let no father or mother, wife or sweetheart, of the men in training have the slightest anxiety as to the welfare of their loved ones. Those men are being better fed, better housed, better looked after physically—from every standpoint—than when they were at home. And they show it plainly to any one who has opportunity to visit a cantonment. If their food were poor or inadequate, their sick rate would not be so small as to be well-nigh unbelievable. The men wouldn't gain from ten to twenty pounds of solid beef and muscle in two months' time; they wouldn't be ruddy, upstanding, eager and determined to get ready for that hell-on-earth, (also made-in-Germany,) where soldiers of the United States Army, in co-operation with soldiers of the Grand Alliance, now are fighting a nation gone mad with blood-lust, a nation whose horrible excesses proclaim it a military degenerate—perpetrators of the most colossal crime in all human history.

HYLAN BOARD SEEKS ADVICE ON SCHOOLS

Wants Superintendents to Share with Them the Responsibility of New Policies.

GARY SUBSTITUTE NEEDED

Incoming Administrators Take Up the Coal Situation, Fearing Public Institutions May Be Hampered.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan and his associates of the incoming Board of Estimate will proceed cautiously in abolishing the so-called Gary system in the public schools. The "study-work-play" plan is doomed, as the Mayor-elect and his colleagues are pledged to its abolition both through the platform on which they were elected and emphatic utterances on the stump by Judge Hylan himself, but in order to silence any cry of "politics" they are determined that the teaching staff shall share with them the responsibility for abolishing it.

The question was before the new Board of Estimate at a secret conference held in Judge Hylan's private room at the headquarters of the Business Men's League, 50 East Forty-second Street, yesterday afternoon and evening. At this meeting it was determined to call into conference members of the Associate Board of District Superintendents and some of the District Superintendents themselves. The conference will be held on Saturday forenoon. The board was notified of the fact in a letter sent to Gustave Straubenmuller, Associate City Superintendent of Public Schools, who is in active charge of the work in the public schools during the illness of Supt. William Maxwell.

Will Consult Educators.

"A majority of the members of the incoming Board of Estimate, including Mayor-elect Hylan, agreed that the expert educators in the city service should have a say in the organization of the school work," said Borough President Maurice E. Connolly of Queens, who acted as spokesman for the new board. "For that reason we have determined to get in touch as quickly as possible with the District Superintendents and the Board of Associate District Superintendents with a view of obtaining their views on education to aid us in framing our new policy. We particularly wish to consult them about ways and means of eliminating the Gary system from schools where it has been established, without any inconvenience to the schools and any setback to the pupils. The Gary system is to go, for we consider ourselves pledged to its abolition; the question is what to put in its place."

The Mitchel administration, with the aid of William Wirt, who established the Gary schools in the Indiana city from which the system took its name, has been making plans to establish the Gary system generally throughout the city, and it is already in operation in about 100 schools. It was predicted yesterday that in all probability the so-called Ettinger plan, which involves a modification of the Gary system, temporarily would be substituted wherever necessary in order to give all children of school age in the district the educational opportunity to which they are entitled. Under the Ettinger plan pupils in the lower grades devote all their time to study.

"At the conference today," said Mr. Connolly, "we did not reach any conclusion as to what method should be substituted temporarily. I say 'temporarily,' because the incoming administration will proceed as rapidly as circumstances will permit to the construction of new school buildings in neighborhoods where they are needed."

Coal Shortage Discussed.

The members of the incoming Board of Estimate at the meeting last night took notice of recent alarming rumors that the city would be hampered after Jan. 1 by a shortage in its coal supply.

"We have instituted an investigation with a view of ascertaining just what the prospects are," President Connolly said. "We want to know where we stand so that we may make sure that public institutions and the work in the city departments and Borough Bureaus shall not be hampered for the lack of an adequate supply of fuel. Especially in the public schools, a shortage would be very serious. We expect to have a full report in a few days."

When questioned regarding prospective cuts in the budget, President Connolly said that the subject had not been discussed at the meeting yesterday.

"But it goes without saying," Mr. Connolly asserted, "that we will hold the Board of Aldermen to compliance with out recommendations that unnecessary new positions and unnecessary salary increases should be eliminated from the budget. In any event, the fact that money has been appropriated for certain men or for certain projects does not mean that the incoming administration will feel itself bound either to make the appointments or carry onward the projects."

Controller-elect Charles L. Craig and Sheriff Alfred E. Smith, President-elect of the Board of Aldermen, did not attend yesterday's meeting. Mr. Craig is in Florida, and Sheriff Smith sent word that he had missed a train at Good Ground, where he had been spending the week-end at his new country home. Sheriff Smith did not return to the city until after the meeting had adjourned.

Leader Charles F. Murphy, who had been at his home in Good Ground over Sunday, did not appear either at Tammany Hall or Delmonico's yesterday. It was said that he would be at his desk in Tammany Hall today.

MEETS PORT'S WAR BOARD.

Secretary McAdoo Makes Brief Visit Here.

Secretary William G. McAdoo of the Treasury yesterday made his first visit to New York since the first Liberty Loan campaign. He was accompanied by Mrs. McAdoo. Secretary McAdoo spent most of the morning in conference at the Custom House with members of the War Board of the Port of New York. Collector Byron Newton, Irving T. Bush, and Julius Henry Cohen, members of the board, outlined to the Secretary the magnitude of their task.

Following this conference Secretary McAdoo went to the Federal Reserve Bank, where he spent some time in going over details of the second Liberty Loan campaign. At noon the Secretary went to the Hudson Terminal Building, built above the Hudson tubes, which he constructed. The Secretary received a hearty welcome at an informal luncheon of 200 employes of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company, held in the clubrooms on the top floor of the building. There were no speeches, but the Secretary greeted many old friends who were associated with him in building the tubes under the Hudson.

In the afternoon the Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo visited Hero Land at the Grand Central Palace. Returning to the Hotel Vanderbilt after the visit to Hero Land, the Secretary stopped for a few minutes to discuss the War Savings Campaign, which begins next Monday.

"People will be able to buy savings stamps for as low as 25 cents," the Secretary said. "They may paste sixteen of these in a book and with the addition of 12 cents at any post office, making $4.12 in all. They may purchase a savings certificate that at the end of five years will be worth $5, the interest at 4 per cent. compounded quarterly.

"The war savings folder will be much the same. The folder will have twenty spaces, each one representing a $5 stamp. If these are purchased in January at $4.12 each, or $82.40 in all, the interest accruing at 4 per cent., compounded quarterly, will make them worth $100 in five years. Stamps and certificates will be sold at hundreds of thousands of places in the country. These will include post offices, banks, department stores, and institutions of all kinds.

"The people of the country ought to know what it means to save in small quantities. If they only would stop to realize that they may buy a stamp for a quarter, and in that act perhaps send food to a soldier who needs it, they will begin to see how necessary it is to begin saving now. This campaign will start a habit that will outlast the war and will do the country good."

Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo will return to Washington today.

JAPANESE MISSION HOME.

Ishii's Party Tells of Vast War Work in United States.

TOKIO, Nov. 26.—Viscount Kikujiro Ishii and the members of the Japanese mission to the United States which he headed, arrived home today after an uneventful trip.

No formal reception was given the returning mission, in accordance with the wishes of Viscount Ishii. The special train bearing the members was met at Tokio by Premier Terauchi and Foreign Minister Motono, with other Cabinet members, friends of the members of the party, and the chiefs of staff of the army and the navy.

The newspapers give much space to a statement by the mission regarding the vast war work of the United States. Viscount Ishii has made no statement regarding the work of the mission itself.

HERO LAND GREETS FRENCH AMBASSADOR

Jusserand Says He Hopes for Early Peace, but Only with Victory.

BIG NIGHT AT BAZAAR

Women Prominent in Society Preside Over Booths—British Envoy Expected Today.

Jules J. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, guest of honor at Hero Land, brought the "French Day" of the big war benefit bazaar to a climax last night when he said in an address in the great ballroom that America and France were in the war to win, no matter how long it took, and that they would fight on until the dawn of the day that would bring a better world, a world free from the threat of Prussianism.

The Ambassador and his party reached Grand Central Palace about 9 o'clock. They were taken over all of the four floors of the big show. The Ambassador carried a large envelope filled with dollar bills and stopped at every booth. He couldn't conceal a slight surprise when, after he had shaken the hand of "General Pershing," America's military leader, held out his hand until it received one of the dollar bills.

M. Jusserand inspected the official exhibit of the French Government, which was opened last night, the exhibits not having arrived in this country until Sunday. In his address later, he said in part:

"I give my thanks and the thanks of France for what you are doing; for your generosity which has taken every shape, which has manifested itself from the first days—from the time when you were officially neutral, for then your heart was not neutral, your heart was with us and your friendship was for us a token of victory.

"I have been around your splendid bazaar and I compliment you heartily—those who have devised this admirable piece of wonder. I have seen the names of a number of nations, all those nations suffering and bleeding, great nations and small ones, all suffering from the criminal tyranny of one set of men whose system has to be swept off the face of the world.

"And now is our chance, and your chance, and we shall not let it escape. The war may last long or it may not last long—I hope it will not last long—but so long as it may last we shall be in it, and you shall be in it, and we shall not lay down our arms until the smallest of these suffering nations is free.

"America has never been defeated, America, once more the ally of France, once more, as at the time when we were fighting with you for your independence. America and our allies will win today and then we shall meet again in triumph and shall once more exchange congratulations and our children and our children's children will be happy to praise the heroes of now who fought and bled. A better world is ahead of us and all of you will be proud to think that each one has done his bit in person or through his children.

"Long live the generous United States, the friend of France!"

Captain Richard Haigh of the British Army, in command of the tank on exhibition at the bazaar, said in an address that the British were perfecting a new-style tank which when put on the firing line next Spring would create a marked change in whatever situation then existed. He drew a picture of three lines of tanks, a thousand in a line, proceeding against the enemy and asked them to imagine what would happen.

"The enemy cannot stop such a line of armored British tanks," he said. "Once a British tank goes over the top and penetrates the enemy's defenses there is nothing more to it."

District Attorney Swann issued a statement last night with regard to Hero Land, in which he said:

"It is most unfortunate that the Army and Navy Bazaar scandal should have come just before the opening of Hero Land, which is a totally different sort of undertaking, and which I am confident is for worthy causes, and is being responsibly and honestly conducted. Mr. Moffatt, Executive Chairman, informs me that no commissions are being paid to any one connected with Hero Land. In prosecuting those who have been accused of breach of trust in connection with the Army and Navy Bazaar, this office has no desire to in any way deter people from visiting and contributing to Hero Land. I believe Hero Land comes under the category of those charitable enterprises deserving of public support."

The funds of Hero Land are being handled exclusively by employes of the Guaranty Trust Company, who make periodical collections from the various booths.

"The Daily Tank" is the name of a daily newspaper published at the bazaar containing notes of the affair. Charles Hanson Towne was the editor of yesterday's issue. Wallace Irwin will edit today's issue.

The management of the Bazaar yesterday received this cablegram from Miss Anne Morgan, addressed to the American Fund for French Wounded:

"Am arranging Xmas tree for French children. Please send stockings."

The stockings will be sent.

The official French exhibit attracted large crowds last night, although many of the exhibits were not in place. One feature that attracted much attention was a field gun, which has been nicked by shell and bullets in hundreds of places. Several gun crews were wiped out while this gun was in one battle.

The British official exhibit continued to draw a large number of visitors, as did the exhibition of official Canadian war pictures.

The favorite floor is that holding "Bagdad," in charge of which is Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. This is by far the gayest part of the bazaar, and has at the entrance the best "bally-hoo" artists in the place, two big parrots, which screech continuously.

"Smileage books," which were on sale for the first time at the Stage Women's War Relief booth, attracted great interest. These books are coupons made up in mileage form, admitting soldiers to theatrical performances arranged at every United States camp by the stage women.

This will be British Day at Hero Land. It is hoped that the British Ambassador will be able to come over from Washington. The official British exhibition room will be headquarters for a large number of distinguished British visitors. Lieut. Col. Rees and Arthur Pollen, the English naval expert, will be among the speakers. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sothern will give a performance in the afternoon at the Little Theatre. There will be a carnival at night, a feature of which will be an exhibition of bayonet fighting by British soldiers.

Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff has arranged the program for tomorrow, Jewish War Relief Day. Aiding Mrs. Schiff are Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. S. R. Guggenheim, Mrs. I. N. Spiegelberg, Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, Miss Harriet McB. Lowenstein. A large number of theatrical stars have given their talent to aid tomorrow's program. The feature of the day will be a pageant in the evening, "On the Road to Victory," arranged by Margaret S. Crawford, in which more than 200 persons will take part.

MISS LA FARGE WED TO LIEUT. OSBORN

Architect's Daughter Married in Grace Church Amid Evergreens and Chrysanthemums.

The wedding of William H. Osborn, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Church Osborn and a grandson of the late William Earl Dodge, and Miss Margaret La Farge, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant C. La Farge and a granddaughter of the late John La Farge, was solemnized at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Grace Church. The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Slattery, and the Rev. Edward C. Chorley of St. Philip's in the Highlands.

The nave pews were entirely cut off from the side seats by a tall hedge of evergreens and tall box trees terminating in circular leafage were arranged in straight lines. Boxwood and white chrysanthemums were arranged at the chancel entrance to carry out the garden idea.

Miss La Farge, who walked with her father, wore a simple white satin gown cut on long straight lines with a plain train and her tulle veil was held in a flat cap effect with orange blossoms. She carried lilies and orchids and wore a platinum and diamond chain having two large emerald pendants. The bride's only attendants were her two cousins, the Misses Mary I. and Florence B. Lockwood, who wore apricot-colored taffeta frocks with lace collars that extended into cape jackets, sashes of pale hydrangea blue and poke bonnets of the same hydrangea-blue satin with flat bows at the back and knots of pink rosebuds at one side. They carried long-stemmed Adam Ward roses.

Mr. Osborn's best man was his brother, Earl D. Osborn, recently invalided home from France, and the ushers were Christopher La Farge, a brother of the bride; Frederick H. Osborn, another brother, who married Miss Margaret Schieffelin; Henry Fairfield Osborn, Jr., a cousin, and Hamilton Fish Armstrong. A small reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, 124 East Twenty-second Street.

Mr. Osborn, who was graduated from Princeton in 1916, is a Lieutenant of the Officers' Reserve Corps and is stationed at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C. Pierson Hamilton, with her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Woods; also Henry G. Marquand, Mrs. William J. Schieffelin, Mrs. Arthur Murray Dodge, and others of the large family connections on both sides.

SIR STARR JAMESON, RAIDER, DIES AT 64

Leader of Famous Invasion of Transvaal in 1895, Just Before Boer War.

JAILED; THEN KNIGHTED

Former Premier of Cape Colony Was Ally of Cecil Rhodes in the Upbuilding of Rhodesia.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Sir Leander Starr Jameson died today in London.

Sir Starr Jameson, known in his early life to thousands of British Afrikanders as "Dr. Jim," was, next to Cecil Rhodes, the chief of the band of gentlemen adventurers whose fights against first the native and then the Boer led to the foundation of the Union of South Africa. As a token of his confidence and personal friendship, Rhodes made Jameson one of the trustees of his fortune.

Jameson's own career is marked for most people by its most dramatic and least successful incident—the raid on the Transvaal around New Year's, 1896. But it was only an incident—Jameson himself in later life called it "a bad blunder"—in a career which did much to promote the interests, not only of the British Empire but of every resident of South Africa. Jameson, who began life as a venturesome frontiersman, ended it as a statesman of repute. But he was the adventurer all the way through, from the beginning, when he was one of the group, with Rhodes, Burnham, Selous, John Hays Hammond, Carrington, and the rest, which made a civilized country out of the waste that was Mashonaland and is now Rhodesia, to the time when, as Premier of Cape Colony after the Boer war, he used his personality to promote the consolidation of the British and Dutch races into one nationality which had at heart the best interests of South Africa.

The man who died as the Right Honorable Sir Leander Starr Jameson, C. B., was born in Edinburgh, in 1853, and got his M. D. at the University of London in 1877. After a year or so of experience in a London hospital he found his health weakening, and partly for recuperation and partly for adventure he settled himself at Kimberley, then just emerging from the stage of the wild West mining camp.

In the course of a few years Jameson became the leading physician of the South African gold fields, and had acquired a practice whose value was estimated at $50,000 a year. But about 1887 he became well acquainted with Cecil John Rhodes, and from that time on the two men worked together toward the idea of a united South Africa, with a place for both the British and the Dutch races, inside the British Empire.

It was Jameson's intercessions with Lobengula, King of the Matabele, which led that chief to let the first British colonists go through in 1889 and 1890 to found what later became the settlements of Salisbury and Victoria, the nucleus of Rhodesia.

In 1891, after adventures that would have furnished a lifetime's excitement to most men, he was named administrator of Rhodesia. He served in this capacity for four years, during which time he saw the colony get itself established on something like a firm basis. In this period the principal event was the first Matabele war, in 1893, in which Jameson as Commander in Chief of the white forces won an easy and comparatively inexpensive victory. In 1895, at the close of this period, he predicted at a dinner of South African business men the eventual commercial federation of the South African States, in which even the Transvaal would join.

Meanwhile, however, Oom Paul Kruger's Government in the Transvaal had become fearful of British expansion, had encroached on Rhodesia, and was refusing rights to the non-Dutch settlers in the Transvaal. It is as well established as any historical fact can be, after only twenty years' time, that Jameson was made the "goat" of the unfortunate enterprise of Dec. 29, 1895, to Jan. 2, 1896, which had for its object the overthrow of the Kruger Government in the Transvaal. The British population of Johannesburg, including most of the financial elements of the Boer Republic, had promised to support it not only with money, but with arms; Cecil Rhodes, then Premier of Cape Colony, had had a large part in planning it, and though he later became convinced that it was unwise, would undoubtedly have given it every aid possible; and no effectual denial has been made of the general belief that Joseph Chamberlain, then British Colonial Secretary, was a party to the plot. At any rate, Jameson enlisted a column of adventurers who were followers of his name and of the recently disbanded Bechuanaland Mounted Police and entered the Transvaal on Dec. 29, 1895. The Johannesburg British failed to rise, the Boers mobilized quickly, and on Jan. 2, after heavy losses, Jameson was forced to surrender.

Because he had failed, Jameson, when turned over to the British authorities, was sentenced to ten months' imprisonment.

He had not only failed, but failed very unhappily. At the moment England was engaged in the Venezuela controversy with the United States; France and Russia were allied and still traditionally hostile, and William II. had seized the occasion for his famous congratulatory telegram to Kruger, which was the real beginning of modern Anglo-German antipathy. And so Chamberlain, and some of the others, sacrificed Jameson to save England's face.

Jameson served only six months of his ten months' sentence. During that six months, however, had occurred the second Matabele war. Jameson served in the South African war in 1899 and 1900, and in the last named year was elected member of the Cape Colony Parliament from Kimberley. Then came peace—an unsatisfactory peace to the Boers—and several years of tension. During this period, in 1904, Jameson became Premier of Cape Colony, and held that position till 1908.

Jameson was the Unionist candidate against General Botha for Premier of the Union in 1910, and, though defeated, with the approval of Edward VII., his personal popularity and reputation remained one of the strongest factors in establishing and maintaining the unity of the South African nation. He was a Director of the De Beers Consolidated Company from 1900, of the British South African Company from 1902, and member of the British Parliament from Capetown from 1910 to 1912.

CONCERTS OF A DAY.

Bauer and Thibaud, Bonnet, Clara Clemens, and Oscar Seagle.

Harold Bauer and Jacques Thibaud finished yesterday afternoon the series of performances they have been giving in the Punch and Judy Theatre of Beethoven's ten sonatas for piano and violin. It was the third concert, and the program comprised the sonatas in A, op. 12; in F, op. 24, and A, op. 47, dedicated to Kreutzer. The audience was the largest that has been to any of these concerts, and obviously enjoyed the finished and refined interpretations of the two artists.

Joseph Bonnet, the French organist, had another large audience in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon at the third in his series of historical organ recitals. His program for this one was devoted to Handel, represented by a prelude and fugue in F minor and the tenth organ concerto, and pieces by d'Aquin, Padre Martini, Krebs, Mozart, Samuel Wesley, and Boely; of the last four pieces were given.

Clara Clemens opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner," sung by Mark Twain's own daughter, her recital at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, when she was assisted at the piano by her husband, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, who also composed one of her contralto songs, "Goodbye." Mrs. Gabrilowitsch gave a place to German composers, including Richard Strauss, and to early Italians, one Leonardo Vinci, differing from the famous painter by two letters and 200 years. The singer made her best effect in Debussy's "C'est l'Extase," sung mezzo voce in contrast with much louder declamation yesterday, and repeated a second time, as were Bizet's "April" and Moussorgsky's "Hopak," to which last the accompanist added true Russian fervor.

Oscar Seagle, an admired baritone, put his wealth of voice at the service of patriotic airs in his Aeolian recital last evening, not alone American's anthem, which he sang first, but also a stirring martial song from Paladilhe's "Patrie," and a more descriptive "La-Bas" of Fourdrain, in which these French composers gave something of the war feeling of the present-day Belgium and Alsace. Mr. Seagle had rough, rollicking tunes like the "Vive Henri IV.," encored with the old French "L'Amour de Moi"; some Dvorak gypsy pieces, the last one repeated, and Fourdrain's "Carnaval," also done twice.

There were tenderer moments, and for variety there might have been more of these, such as Dvorak's "The Old Mother," a Swedish folksong of "The Dove and the Lily," and a group of negro spirituals, "camp meeting songs," that Mr. Seagle gave with a Southern relish. He encored "I Want to Be Ready" among the American melodies, adding at the close the beautiful "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," twice ever, and "Brother Andrew, Where You Been?" songs that lay on the borderland between smiles and tears, and were much applauded.

W. H. CRANE IN VAUDEVILLE.

He Appears in a Playlet at the Palace—Bessie Clayton Back.

William H. Crane made his vaudeville appearance yesterday afternoon in a sketch apparently made to order for the purpose and suffering from the weaknesses which commonly attach to a work evolved under those conditions. Despite its crudeness, however, the piece gives Mr. Crane certain opportunities, and it is possible that the popularity and distinguished service of the actor will supply the vital spark. The piece is a true-to-vaudeville playlet entitled "Winter and Spring," the work of Thomas F. Fallon.

Bessie Clayton returns to the Palace with a new and imposing dance production, and May Wirth, whose talent as an equestrienne has been amply demonstrated in other fields, proves no less amazing as a vaudeville artist. Adele Rowland, with several new songs and some of the old ones, is also present.

F. MATTHEWS DIES IN RAILROAD STATION

LONG IN NEWSPAPER WORK

Trustee of Cornell University and Historian of World Cruise of Our Navy.

Franklin Matthews, Associate Professor at the Pulitzer School of Journalism of Columbia University, was stricken with heart failure yesterday morning while passing through the Pennsylvania Station, and died within fifteen minutes. Although Professor Matthews had only missed two lectures at the School of Journalism in the last two years, he had been suffering from diabetes and hardening of the arteries. Hoping to stay the advance of these maladies and also to reduce his weight, he adopted a rigorous diet last September, losing twenty-six pounds in thirty days. He had a severe heart attack a week ago Sunday, but although weakened by suffering he continued his work at the School of Journalism, without discussing his condition, except to remark once to one of his assistants that the coming Christmas would probably be his last.

Prof. Franklin Matthews.

Professor Matthews left his home at 427 Manor Avenue, Woodhaven, L. I., yesterday morning on the 8:47 train to attend a meeting of the School of Journalism's Committee on Instruction, at which a five-year basis for the course was to be discussed. He had amused himself at breakfast by reading an article in a morning newspaper describing the easy familiarity with which he conducted his courses at the school. At about 9:30 o'clock an attendant in the Pennsylvania Station found him sitting partly conscious on a bench.

"Send for my son Crosby. He is upstairs in the Y. M. C. A. department," Professor Matthews managed to gasp. Dr. O. M. Radin, assistant physician of the station emergency hospital, and Crosby Matthews, who is physical instructor of the station's Y. M. C. A. department, were summoned, but when they reached Professor Matthews he was unconscious, and a few minutes later died. The body was taken to an undertaker's and will be removed to his home today. The funeral services will take place tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at his home in Woodhaven. In obedience to Professor Matthews' long expressed wish his body will be cremated.

Professor Matthews was born in St. Joseph, Mich., in 1858. He received his college education at Cornell University, graduating with the degree of B. A. in 1883 and remaining for a year of post-graduate work. He then became one of the assistant managers of the late Major J. B. Pond's lecture bureau, traveling with Henry Ward Beecher, Mark Twain, Carl Schurz, and Clara Louise Kellogg, the singer, whose cousin, in 1886, he married. In the same year he met Dr. Talcott Williams, who is now director of the School of Journalism, but who was then managing editor of The Philadelphia Press. Dr. Williams engaged him as a reporter and an editor of The Press, with which publication he remained until 1890. He then came to this city, and was at first employed by The World. From The World in the same year he went to The Sun, where he remained until 1912.

While he was in the service of The Sun Professor Matthews acted as a reporter-correspondent and as an editor. He represented The Sun on the historic cruise around the world of the United States Battleship Fleet in 1907-1909, going on the lecture platform for some months after his return, and writing for Harper's Weekly, Harper's Monthly, and other publications, and also publishing several books about the cruise.

Professor Matthews became a member of the staff of THE NEW YORK TIMES in 1912, remaining for two years, first as assistant Sunday editor and later as night city editor. It was also in 1912 that he became associate in journalism at the then newly established School of Journalism at Columbia. He was made an associate professor in 1914. Cornell University in 1913 elected him a trustee of the university.

In commenting on the death of his associate, Dr. Talcott Williams said yesterday:

"Professor Matthews's death will, temporarily at least, take away a very important side of our work in the School of Journalism. He had an extraordinary knowledge of the details of practical newspaper technique, having learned these details under the great newspaper men of the last generation of The Sun—Charles A. Dana and S. Merrill Clarke. The teaching of practical newspaper technique was his specialty in the School of Journalism. He also had a most winning personality. All his pupils called him 'boss.'"

The fourth and third year classes of the School of Journalism met at noon yesterday in the classroom where Professor Matthews taught to draw up this appreciation of what he had been to them:

Franklin Matthews was our friend, our comrade, and our "Boss," as he loved to be called. He often said, "My ideal of teaching is that it should be by personal contact rather than by rules of pedagogy." He was always willing to help, advise, and encourage. His work here will remain both for us and for the school a lasting influence.

The classes which Professor Matthews taught at the School of Journalism have been suspended until Dec. 4.

Tribute from a Former Pupil.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Great is the loss and sorrow that the death of Franklin Matthews, Associate Professor in the Pulitzer School of Journalism, brings to those who knew him in his academic life. Mr. Matthews has been an exponent of all that is best and most disinterested in journalism. His courses in the School of Journalism were catalogued as technical ones, essentials of newspaper technique, reporting, copy-reading, and editing. This was the smallest part of his work. Of far greater value was the love and appreciation of the profession that he instilled into each of his pupils. He loved journalism and he made every one with whom he came in contact love it.

In the outline he made of one of his courses was a list of "Dont's" for newspaper men. His pupils knew this lesson by heart before he taught it, for from the beginning he had been living out these principles for them. He gave technical explanations of the value of confidence, honesty, and kindness in journalism, but his every action showed the human working out of these principles.

"Never do as a newspaper man what you would not do as a gentleman," was one of his favorite maxims in his professional and private life. And in both branches he is equally worthy of the respect and praise of his associates and pupils.

ELEANOR PAINTER IN LIGHT COMEDY

"Art and Opportunity" a Charming Romance of Feminine Character.

MISS PAINTER SINGS TWICE

A Masterly Little Play by an American Boy Who Fell at Loos.

ART AND OPPORTUNITY, a comedy in three acts, by Harold Chapin. At the Knickerbocker Theatre.

That rarest of all things came to the Knickerbocker last night, a light comedy written with a masterly touch and sustained with workmanlike skill and vigor from the first word to the final curtain. There were those in the audience who seemed to wonder for a time what the Eleanor Painter of musical comedy was doing in this gallery of high art; and there were those who were baffled by the leisurely development and the subtle rhythms of the little play. But attention never for a moment wandered; and when the true scope and method were manifest the audience as a whole gave way to the freshest delight, the heartiest laughter. The end was a triumph of delicate inspiration and exquisite comedy.

One was reminded at first of "The Mollusc," that eerily clever study in selfish femininity with which Mary Moore and others delighted us. This Pauline is a young American widow, with slender income and mounting debts. She has captured a young English nobleman, and comes to be looked over by his family, who are bent on breaking off the match. She gives no evidence of loving the young man, and it presently appears that she does not love him. Half frankly and half with arch guile she owns that she is an adventuress. But she plays her little game with such resources in clever mystification, with such a fund of inspiration in guile, that she ends by charming the whole household—the boy's father, Lord Worplesdon, a dowager aunt, and Uncle Horatio, the Duke.

And very early in the evening a note is struck which sharply distinguishes the play from "The Mollusc," the heroine of which was the clever intriguer throughout, the sybarite of selfish ease. Quasi "adventuress" though Pauline is, and pushed by her needs to desperate simulations, there is a strong substratum of normal womanhood in her character, of bewitching amiability, and of tremulous, half-unconscious emotion.

Divining that the boy does not really love her, and that his father does, she shifts to the match which is more suitable in point of years. There even comes a moment when it seems that she may be setting her cap for the Duke, a dry and ridiculous old party, who in his way is also charmed. But her eye has ceased to be bent on fortune and social position. It rests, in fact, on the Duke's secretary, the only member of the household who is her equal in cleverness, in subtlety of address, and in native honesty and sense.

In fact, Pauline really proposes. Left alone with him, she sits at the piano and sings a song of Spring and love. It is a haunting, compelling melody, and with Miss Painter's fresh young voice and witching coquetry it lifts the play to a mood of essential poetry and romance. Only the man to whom the song was addressed failed to sense what it signified. The audience applauded to the echo. And once again, in the last act, Miss Painter sang—when she was sending her man the note that brought him to her side and to his senses. It was he who did the final proposing—trust Pauline for that!

The gradations by which the charming "adventuress" of the first act developed into the full-hearted, though still adroit, young woman in love are subtle in the extreme, exquisitely felt by the playwright and denoted with unerring art. On the whole, one is inclined to rate the play even above "The Mollusc," and that would make it the most masterly high comedy ever written by an American. For, like Hubert Henry Davies, who also lived in England and wrote of English life, Harold Chapin was an American. He was one of our young men who entered the English army at the outbreak of the war. He was killed at Loos, and in his death we have lost, among other things, the most promising of our playwrights.

For Miss Painter also the evening was a triumph. In youth and good looks, as in voice, she is thoroughly suited to the part. Histrionically she may be less expert than Marie Tempest, who played it in London, but she acts throughout with high intelligence and rare skill. It must be said that she used her eyes rather obviously, and emphasized her effects with many a moue. That was perhaps a trick she brought with her from the musical stage—or perhaps it was the result of an effort to make her effects register in an auditorium far too big for this type of play. But these are venial faults, which will doubtless be toned down. Potentially the performance was in every way worthy of the play.

The cast as a whole was admirable, and the stage management reflects high credit on Clifford Brooke. Unfortunately the success of the production is jeopardized by the slenderness of the play and the size of the theatre. "The Mollusc" itself on its first production failed for similar reasons, though this was by far the most successful artistically. Fortunately Miss Painter is one of us, and, whatever the present outcome, the time will arrive when play and performance come into their own.

A first-rate score by Franz Lehar is combined with a listless book and an ill-advised setting in "The Star Gazer," presented here for the first time last night at the Plymouth Theatre. The piece is a romantic costume play of the England of 1830, peopled with about a score of folk who dress in the bright colors of the period, but who are themselves rather dull. As a result the piece is really diverting only when the orchestra plays.

In at least two respects, however, the new piece is a novelty. In the first place, it is devoid of a chorus; secondly, it contains no person deliberately inserted for comedy purposes. These omissions are explained in part by the program, which describes the piece as a comedy with music instead of a musical comedy. Its three acts, however, contain twenty numbers, and the music is the most important factor throughout.

The story concerns itself with a pair of romances, one of which has the star gazer as its central figure, and is reported to be an original work by Cosmo Hamilton, related in no way to the libretto which accompanied Lehar's music when it was heard abroad. As a story it is altogether unimportant, but from the historical standpoint it possesses a certain value in demonstrating the overwhelming superiority of the present times. It proves, among other things, that there is nothing quite so brazen as an English maiden of 1830.

The cast is chiefly noteworthy by reason of the presence of John Charles Thomas, whose splendid voice is heard to greater advantage than ever before. In addition to singing well he also wears the clothes of the period with grace and distinction, an accomplishment not shared by the entire company. John T. Murray, hitherto identified more or less with the Winter Garden, gives a surprisingly good performance in the title rôle, and a young woman named Carolyn Thomson, called upon suddenly last Thursday to replace Beth Lydy, also distinguished herself. Miss Thomson's performance, regarded purely as a feat of memory, was a considerable achievement, but it had other merits as well.

Wanda Lyon, also erstwhile of the Winter Garden, was at all times a pretty picture, and Jennetta Methven sang some high notes which appeared to satisfy the audience. The lyrics, by Matthew C. Woodward, are considerably above the average.

John B. Foster Says Clubs Can Easily Meet Railroad and Pullman Burden.

EACH TEAM TO PAY $1,100

Secretary of Giants Suggests That Lower Player Limit Would Meet New Costs.

Secretary John B. Foster of the Giants compiled a few statistics yesterday to show that the war tax on railroad and Pullman fares is not going to be so great a burden as some of the baseball club owners have tried to make out. Mr. Foster points out that much of the talk of the calamity howlers is groundless, and that the war taxes on each club will not be so large as to make it difficult for each team to shoulder the burden.

The average mileage of a major league baseball club during the season is about 11,000 miles. Pittsburgh usually has the greatest mileage because it makes more trips to the Western cities for Sunday games than any of the other clubs, and the Pirates' figures usually go above 13,000 miles. Secretary Foster figures that the 8 per cent. tax on railroad fares and the 10 per cent. on Pullman tickets will mean a cost of about $1,100 a season for each club. So Uncle Sam's tax on the sixteen traveling baseball clubs of both major leagues next season will amount to about $18,000.

An additional cost of more than $1,000 a club for the season is, according to Mr. Foster, nothing for the club owners to sit up nights worrying about. As for additional costs at hotels, Mr. Foster doubts if the prices will be much higher than they were last season. The additional cost of baseball through war taxes and the advanced cost of living, Mr. Foster believes, can be met easily by cutting the player limit to eighteen or twenty players. Mr. Foster is an optimist concerning the conditions in baseball, and although the clubs will be hit hard through the draft, he sees no reason why the clubs cannot go right along with the players who are available.

President Edward G. Barrow of the International League got back to his office yesterday for the first time since the minor league pow-wow in Louisville a few weeks ago, when the pet scheme of Mr. Barrow and Ban Johnson for a new major league was voted down by the National Association.

If the promoters of the new circuit had money enough the plan would have been adopted. According to the rules of the National Agreement, provision is made for compulsory compensation to clubs which are dropped by a league for the purpose of including its territory into another organization of higher class. This is one of the fundamental principles of organized baseball, and it would have been necessary for the promoters of the new circuit to compensate four International League clubs and four of the American Association. A proposition of this sort to satisfy the injured feelings of the four clubs in each circuit, which were to have been left out in the cold, would have entailed an outlay of a large amount of money.

Another barrier which stood in the way and which was pointed out by Chairman Herrmann of the National Commission makes it plain that no club in any circuit can be dropped if the club has fulfilled all its contractual obligations except that adequate compensation be made for its privilege and territory. While unanimous consent of all the clubs in both the International League and American Association was necessary to put through this scheme there was not even a majority of clubs on either circuit willing to vote for it. So the Union League or the Continental League, or whatever they were going to call it, perished. If leagues were permitted to reorganize in this way to eliminate the weaker clubs, baseball would defeat its own ends, according to the opinion of baseball officials.

President Johnson continues to explain his suggestion about the exemption of players to keep the major leagues up to their high standard next season. In a statement given out in Chicago Sunday the American League head, among other things, admitted: "Fully 90 per cent. of the players in the major leagues will meet the draft requirements, and with the tremendous demand for men, it can be readily understood how great will be the drain upon the profession. The patriotism of the players is unquestioned, and I am confident that they will all cheerfully respond when the call summons them to the colors."

"In this trying period," continued Mr. Johnson, "the Government can wait on the convenience of none, and men must report when notified. Such conditions will arise in 1918 and must result in endless confusion in the great baseball family. The matter of maintaining a contest of keen interest that would appeal to the public seems impossible of accomplishment."

Most of the baseball men do not agree with this pessimistic view which Johnson draws of next season's possibilities. There will be minor leaguers to fill up the gaps. President Tener of the National League declared yesterday that it would be possible to call back the scores of veterans who have retired from the game during the past few seasons. Many of the old timers, who had to give way to youth, could still hold their own if it was necessary. When players like Chief Bender can come back and pitch the kind of ball that he did last year, it should be possible for many other veterans to achieve success. The draft will deplete the ranks of the major leagues, and while the standard may not be as high as with the youthful players, there is no doubt that the clubs can find enough players to make interesting the championship races in both circuits.

The American League yesterday filed its answer to the Baltimore Federal League Club's $900,000 damage suit in the District of Columbia Supreme Court in Washington. A general denial of all allegations was made.

Tris Speaker, the star centre fielder of the Cleveland American League club, commenting on the drafting of baseball players, says: "The players want to do what the Government most needs them to do. We have been given to understand, unofficially, of course, that the Government believes we can be of great service in entertaining the soldiers before they go to war and the wounded when they return. I am of military age and anxious to get into the service. I know the other players want to serve the country where needed."

C. C. N. Y. TO MEET COLUMBIA

Swimming Season to Open with Dual Meet Dec. 7.

The swimming team of the College of the City of New York opens its season with a meet in the local pool with Columbia Dec. 7. The schedule contains five home and home meets. Besides Columbia, Yale, Princeton, Penn, and Rutgers are to be met.

With a number of veterans still in college, City College is confident of making a good showing. The team lost William Karsten, the 2:20 star, through his enlistment. The water poloists have lost Gerstenfeld, who has become an instructor, and is ineligible.

The eligibles are: Baehr, Shenberg, Schreiber, Boones, Auslander, Hodes, Grasheim, Pepys, Thuor, Weis, Meyer, Sutta, Parker, Karsten, Leiter, and Auerbach.

The individual championships will be held this year in the New York Athletic Club pool. The schedule follows:

Dec. 7, Columbia at City College; 14, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 21, Rutgers at New Brunswick; Jan. 4, Princeton at Princeton; 11, Yale at City College; Feb. 8, Yale at New Haven; 15, Princeton at City College; 22, Pennsylvania at City College; March 1, Columbia at City College.

TEST FOR GEORGIA TECH.

Auburn May Give Line on Strength of Yellow Jackets.

Three football elevens in different sections of the country stand out as the strongest teams of the present season, Pittsburgh in the East, Ohio State in the West, and Georgia Tech. in the South, but the question of which one of the three is the most powerful football machine will have to be passed up without satisfactory solution.

When Georgia Tech. plays Auburn Thursday, a comparison may be drawn between the Southern and Western champions, because on last Saturday Auburn surprised the football world by holding Ohio State to a scoreless tie. It was believed that the Southerners would be easy for the strong Ohio eleven, but Auburn showed unexpected strength. The Thanksgiving Day game in the South should give a line on the relative strength of Georgia and Ohio.

Pittsburgh ends its regular schedule on Thursday with Penn State, but State is not up to the usual standard this year, and Warner's Panther eleven should have no trouble in this contest. Pitt will play a post-season game on Dec. 1 at Pittsburgh with Camp Lee.

Warner's eleven again stands out as the strongest team of the East, as it did last season. An array of victories over Pennsylvania, Syracuse, West Virginia, and Washington and Jefferson forms a more impressive record than that of any other Eastern eleven.

Coach Warner has developed a wonderful lot of material at Pitt during the last three years, but graduation will take many of his stars next Spring, while it is likely that some of them will enlist before that time. Among the players that Pitt will lose are Captain Carlson, Sies Sutherland, Miller, Seidel, and McClelland.

CORNELL DRIVEN INDOORS.

Cold Weather Forces Change in Practice of Football Team.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 26.—An unusually severe cold spell has caused a change in the plans of Cornell's final football practice before the Penn game. With the mercury below 20 degrees and the gridiron hard and slippery, further scrimmages have been halted and the men will work outdoors no longer except for daily drills in punting and handling the ball in passes. Secret signal drills, in which forward passes and a series of trick plays are being perfected, will constitute the program up to Wednesday, when the squad will leave for Philadelphia.

It is unlikely that any changes will be made in the lineup, although the improvement of Carry may cause Dr. Sharpe to give him a chance in the backfield at some stage of the game. Spiegelberg, right end, who was nursing a bruised leg last week, has rounded to good shape, while Nethercotte, Herriman, Strauss, and Harris, who had been ordered to take things easy, are now in fine fettle.

There is practically no hope among the undergraduates that Cornell can win, but there is a good deal of confidence that the Ithacans are due for a fighting comeback.

SERVICE TEAMS TO CLASH.

Naval Reserves and Aviators to Meet on Gridiron Thanksgiving Day.

Football teams from the Naval Reserve Training Station at Pelham Bay Park and the Aviation Training Station at Mineola, L. I., which will clash in a championship game of the Army-Navy Posts League at the Polo Grounds will offer one of the chief gridiron attractions locally on Thanksgiving Day. The two elevens are among the strongest in the league, and the entire receipts will be divided equally between the associations of the stations for the purpose of purchasing additional athletic equipment.

Captain Arthur McAleenan and Matthew P. Halpin, Chairman of the Athletic Committee of the New York Athletic Club, under whose auspices the present Army-Navy Posts Football League championship games have been conducted, are endeavoring to make the event a banner display of military sport in the metropolitan district. They have arranged with the authorities at both posts to send to the Polo Grounds their entire corps.

The Naval Reserves will march in a body from their barracks at Pelham Bay Park to the Polo Grounds, while the aviators from Mineola will invade the Harlem gridiron in their full war strength. A full squadron of Uncle Sam's latest war airplanes will accompany the aviator players. There will be a war game also. The Naval Reserves will attempt to defend their territory against the invasion of Uncle Sam's air fighters. Following this minature battle each corps will give an exhibition drill. This will be staged an hour before the start of the championship struggle.

HUNT RACE FOR OFFICERS.

Meadow Brook Feature Closed to Army Riders.

There will be a military innovation in the annual point-to-point steeplechase of the Meadow Brook Club this year when the event is held on Thanksgiving Day. Officials in charge have decided to close the event to officers in any branch of the national service. Since many of the polo players and Hunt Club members are enlisted now in either the Aviation Corps or else at some one of the nearby camps it is thought that there will be no dearth of riders.

The race this year is to be over Wheatley Hills country, a course picturesque and hazardous and about three miles in length. The race, open to two classes, heavyweight and lightweight hunters, will start on the Beekman-Winthrop estate, go through the Devereux Milburn and F. S. von Stade estates, and finish on the lawn near the home of F. Ambrose Clark. Captain Thomas Hitchcock will judge the race, and James Cooley of the Pacific Coast Polo Association will be clerk of the scales. Mrs. Charles Steele and W. Russell Grace have offered cups for the winners in the two classes.

An attempt is being made to arrange a half-mile race for officers, to be held at the same time. Invitations have been sent to the leading army officials, including General Henry Jerve of Camp Mills, to attend the race. All men in uniform are invited. Most of the Meadow Brook colony are to have Camp Mills soldiers for dinner on Thanksgiving Day, and these men will be taken to the race, too. Mrs. Robert Bacon is to have 200 guests at the turkey day dinner.

RICKARD TO REFEREE RACE.

Chosen Unanimously as Arbiter for Six-Day Cycle Contest.

Tex Rickard was chosen last night as referee for the six-day cycle race, which starts in Madison Suare Garden next Sunday night. The selection was unanimous, all the riders and Promoter William H. Wellman agreeing that Rickard was a most prominent figure in the sporting game and well equipped for the arduous task.

Oscar Egg, winner of the 1916 race, and Paul Suter, the European motor pace champion, reached New York yesterday. They will compete in next week's grind, Egg being teamed with Frank Kramer and Suter having Bobby Walthour as a partner. Egg expressed his confidence of repeating last year's triumph, when, practically unaided, he stole the lap that gave his team the victory.

Changes were made in the personnel of two teams last night. Alfred Goullet will ride with Jake Magin, instead of with Fred Hill, while the latter will have Willie Hanley as a riding mate. Magin and Hanley were originally paired. The riders and Wellman will meet today at the Newark Velodrome to reach an understanding on the new scoring system to prevail in the daily hour sprint in the afternoon and two-hour sprint at night.

BATHILDE AT LAST IN WINNERS' CLASS

David Gedeon's Two-Year-Old Takes Maiden Race from Big Field at Bowie.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 26.—The dark blue colors of David Gedeon, seldom seen in the van these days, flashed to the front in the opening race today when his homebred filly Bathilde, by Astronomer-Helen O'C, won the maiden race for two-year-olds. Bathilde was ridden by T. Rice, and was well played in the mutuels. She had little difficulty in defeating the large field, with J. Arthur's Juanita III. taking the place.

BOXING REACHES PALESTINE

British Soldiers Conduct Bouts in the Holy Land.

Civilization came from the East, and from one point of view seems to be finding its way back there again. Just as the manly art of self-defense died a legal death in New York news came that Palestine is seeing its first boxing bouts, at least the first bouts after the Occidental manner and rules.

Boxing follows the British Army, and reports reaching here tell that the Holy Land has seen one tournament—and probably more by this time—during the present invasion. The London battalion, members of which appeared in the ring "somewhere in Palestine," has furthermore held an athletic tournament, with cross-country running and soccer.

C. C. N. Y. Soccer Team Busy.

Today at 3:15 the City College soccer team will play the Naval Reserves, Base Section, No. 6, on the C. C. N. Y field. On Saturday the college eleven will meet the Crescent A. C. at the latter's Bay Ridge field.

Small Re-elected at Bowdoin.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Nov. 26.—Reginald T. Small of Westbrook today was re-elected captain of Bowdoin College football eleven. He has played centre two seasons.

STARS IN GOLF TOURNEY.

Norman Maxwell Among Those Who Will Play Thanksgiving Day.

Few of the golfers who twice a year make merry, starting and closing the metropolitan season with a tournament at the Country Club of Lakewood, will be missing when the annual Fall competition begins on Thanksgiving Day. Norman H. Maxwell, the United North and South amateur champion, is already at Lakewood with George W. Statzell of Aronimink, practicing for the event. Maxwell played around the course yesterday and seemed entirely satisfied when he made a 77. Mr. Statzell played with his young protege and was even more satisfied when his card was under 100.

Up to date nearly forty golfers have entered for the even and it is confidently believed that there will be enough for four or five sixteens for the match play which is to take place Friday and Saturday. Gardiner W. White of Flushing, who was defeated in the final round by Norman Maxwell at Lakewood a year ago, in all probability will take part again, if only to get another chance to regain some of his lost laureis. Percy Kendall of Deal, W. M. Reekie of Upper Montclair, J. S. Worthington of Sunningdale, England, and L. G. Spindled of Fox Hills are others who have entered for the affair. C. E. Van Vleck of Baltusrol is expected to be on hand.

There will be no silver cups this year, for the first time since the tournaments were started. Only gun metal trophies are to go to the winners and all of the proceeds of the tourney are to be turned over to the Young Men's Christian Association fund. Each participant will be assessed $10, which will pay for the tournament proper and for the handicap to be played on Saturday, which will be open to all players except these who reach the final in each division.

Although it has not been definitely decided upon, reports from Philadelphia have it that the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association is to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on Friday, Jan. 11. There is to be no dinner this year, as has been the custom in the past, and the Executive Committee of the U. S. G. A. suggests that only urgent business will be taken up. Under these circumstances it is possible that few delegates will attend and that much of the voting will be done by proxy. The election of officers, only recently selected by the Nominating Committee, takes but little time, as a vote usually disposes of balloting excepting by the one ballot ordered by the Secretary.

Several clubs about Long Island have offered their links for the use of soldiers stationed at nearby camps on Thanksgiving Day, and at many banquets will be provided for the players. The North Shore Country Club was a pioneer in this respect, offering to take care of 100 soldiers on that day.

COCHRAN OFF IN LEAD.

Beats Mayer, 300 to 219, on First Night of 2,500-Point Match.

Welker Cochran, the Chicago billiard expert, defeated Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia, one-time holder of the amateur billiard championship but now of the professional ranks, in the first block of a 2,500-point match at Maurice Daly's Academy last night. The score was 300 to 219, Cochran running out his string in seventeen innings for an average of 17 11-17. Mayer's average was 13 11-16.

Cochran again exhibited his recently acquired habit of playing open-table billiards, as compared with the close nurse game which he was developing a year or two ago. As a result his work with respect to average and interest as well was in a measure disappointing, even though he did achieve the victory in the opening clash. Mayer led at the outset and maintained the advantage for six innings, when Cochran broke loose with a neatly gathered run of 85 which demonstrated the better qualities of his billiard play. When he followed this two innings later with a run of 74 Mayer was left hopelessly behind, and, while the Chicago player's skill waned in the closing innings, he was never in danger from the plodding Mayer.

Mayer did some nice nursing, but consistency was lacking in his work. Several times he failed lamentably on easy shots when the ivories were, so to speak, "under a hat." These lapses cut short promising opportunities. Mayer's high run of the game was 42, and this he made in the first inning. Thereafter his counts were more often in single figures than otherwise.

The scores:

Cochran—3 10 1 0 0 85 17 74 31 38 1 0 0 3 20 13 4. Total—300. Average—17 11-17. High runs—85 and 74.

Mayer—4 2 8 0 2 6 31 1 0 6 2 31 1 6 28 18 0 28. Total—219. Average—13 11-16. High runs—42 and 31.

RALLY TO BILLIARD FUND.

Roomkeepers and Players Get Ready to Raise Huge Sum.

Billiard players throughout the country are rallying to the support of the plan announced several weeks ago, to raise an ambulance fund of $500,000. This was made clear at a meeting held yesterday at Joseph Thum's Academy, at which there were present a number of roomkeepers of this city as well as interested amateur and professional players from New York and elsewhere. The project was discussed from every angle, and a determined effort will be made to raise a large part of the billiard fund in this city.

Outside of Thum's Academy was tangible evidence of the preliminary success of the campaign, for on Broadway was the first ambulance of the many which it is hoped will be obtained for service overseas. This ambulance will be used to further the project in this city. It will tour from billiard academy to billiard academy in the interests of the ambulance fund, with David Kreuter, a brother of Louis Kreuter, the pocket billiard expert, driving, and posters, collection boxes, and the like will be distributed.

Several prominent professional billiardists have offered their services to the cause, among them Alfredo De Oro, the world's three-cushion carom champion; Louis Kreuter, and Frank Taberski, the pocket billiard champion. A committee to have charge of arrangements was appointed at yesterday's meeting. It is composed of the following men:

John T. Doyle, Joseph Thum, Maurice Daly, Sr., George Beaver, W. S. Farnsworth, E. L. Demmon, W. St. Denis, A. F. Steimer, Walter Trumbull, J. P. Sinnott, B. Bergman, Arthur Phillips, Maurice Steirer, W. J. Douglas, F. K. Sprague, A. Ravinowitz, P. T. Knox, W. C. Cranfield, Edward Lawlor, J. Klugman, W. C. Schneer, and Louis Servatius.

The first contributions from the billiard rooms were received yesterday. The Legrande Academy turned in $10 and John Doyle's room contributed $51. A tour of Maurice Daly's room last night netted a contribution of more than $25 for the ambulance fund.

MALTESE SHOW FRIDAY.

Classifications Made to Admit Exhibition of Dog Without Pedigree.

Thirty-six classifications of Maltese dogs have been made for the show of the National Maltese Dog Club, which will be held at the Waldorf on Friday. These have been divided so that all those who own dogs of that breed may exhibit them, even if they are pedigreed. Gold money prizes have been offered for the best of the twelve regular classes by Elbridge Gerry Snow and silver money prizes by Mrs. James Gardner Rossman for the second best. Nearly 150 unclassified special prizes have also been offered.

The National Maltese Dog Club was organized only last May, but since that time has met with encouraging success in bringing together fanciers and owners in the various parts of the country.

REACH SEMI-FINALS IN SQUASH TOURNEY

Hyde, Appel, Onatavia, and Riley Survive in Competition for Fall Honors.

Play in the annual Fall squash tournament advanced to the semi-final round at the Squash Club yesterday. Those who came through to the advanced brackets were Fillmore van S. Hyde of the Harvard Club, J. W. Appel of the Harvard Club, J. Onatavia of the Harvard Club, and A. W. Riley of the Squash Club. This leaves four of the strongest players in the metropolitan district to strive for the honors. When the semi-final round is played today Riley and Appel will be the contestants in the upper half of the draw and in the lower half Hyde will pit his strength against Onatavia.

In yesterday's competition there were two keenly waged matches. Probably the best contested, even though the score was onesided, was the match between Riley and Sterling Martin of the Greenwich Field Club. Riley displayed a well-balanced game which rose to real heights of brilliancy at times, and Martin, although he was putting forth a fine bit of play, was forced to bow in defeat to a score of 15—5, 15—6.

Onatavia made his advance at the expense of A. Baxter of the Crescent A. C., the score in this contest being 15—12, 15—11. Hyde met with little opposition from R. C. Coburn of the Harvard Club after the first game. Hyde was pressed to a 15—11 score in the opening clash, but after then swept with the full power of his finished play at his command and romped away with the final game at 15—1. Appel got into the semi-final round without even having to play for the bracket. His opponent, G. W. Mead of the Squash Club, defaulted to his Harvard Club rival.

With Hyde, Riley, Onatavia, and Appel in the round which will be played today, two stirring matches are anticipated, and there was considerable speculation as to the outcome among the squash tennis enthusiasts yesterday. The fact that none of the players has had much competitive experience thus far this season lends an element of even greater uncertainty than would ordinarily prevail.

MANY NAMED FOR MARATHON

Annual Yonkers Event Will Be Held on Thanksgiving Day.

Despite the unusual circumstances under which the event will be run in comparison with those of former years, the officials of the Mercury A. C. of Yonkers are enthusiastic over the large number of entries received for the annual Yonkers Marathon. This race, being held for the tenth year, will be run through the streets and roads of Yonkers on Thanksgiving Day.

The war will make itself felt on the event this year through lack of entries which have in the past given the race more than ordinary import. Among the absentees will be Sidney Hatch, the Chicago distance runner, who is now in some branch of the service. Entries of athletes from Canada will also be markedly absent this year, especially so since the long-distance runners of Canada in the past have made it a point of coming down annually for the race.

Up to yesterday a total of twenty-eight athletes had sent in their names to start in the event, and it is expected that before the entry lists are closed this number will be increased to thirty-five. Following is a list of those whose entries have been received:

B. Moore, unattached; S. Silverstein, Glencoe A. C.; L. Rado, unattached; F. Gillespie, Chicago; D. Dunn, Walkers Club of America; Roy Malary, Mohawk A. C.; Michael J. Dwyer, Mohawk A. C.; William Boak, Mohawk A. C.; W. Franz, Mohawk A. C.; James Brooks, unattached; C. J. Jordan, unattached; O. S. Weeks, Hollywood Inn A. A.; A. Hoffman, Glencoe A. C.; R. Hug, Ozanam Association No. 3; Charles J. Murphy, St. John's Club; George Kirkwood, Paulist A. C.; M. Seinfeld, Kings County A. A.; J. Silverdollar, Glencoe A. C.; I. Berjensky, unattached; James W. Hocking, Walkers Club of America; T. Ruffino, Ozanam Association No. 3; A. J. Bodlas, Jersey Harriers A. A.; A. A. Ince, Jersey Harriers A. A.; S. Arniotlo, Millrose A. A.; George Efante, Greek-American A. C.; P. Trivoulidas, unattached; P. I. Abhil, Pastime A. C., and F. Deatato, Italian-American A. C., Schenectady.

ATHLETES TO BE OFFICERS.

Higgins and Kelly Among Those Recommended for Commissions.

A number of athletes well known to local followers of track and field sports were included in the recent list of those recommended for commissions from the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg. Prominent among these are Joe Higgins and Andy B. Kelly, both of whom gained athletic prominence as wearers of the emblem of Holy Cross College. Both are New York products and had enviable reputations in the athletic world. They have been recommended for commissions as First Lieutenants.

Higgins's best local performance before entering the service was his victory in the 1,000 yard event at the last Metropolitan A. A. U. championships indoors. He was also the New England champion at this distance while he was attending Holy Cross. Kelly captured the senior national A. A. U. indoor championship title last March, and in doing so set a new record for the event. He, too, while attending Holy Cross College was New England champion at this, his favorite distance.

Others who have been recommended for commissions are James Stacey Sullivan, as Second Lieutenant, and Charles Reinerth, as First Lieutenant. Sullivan is the son of the late James E. Sullivan, recognized during his connection in the late years of his life with the A. A. U. as the foremost figure in that association. Reinerth formerly competed locally for the Long Island A. C. and was a creditable middle distance runner who occasionally took a fling at going over the hurdles. He performed with varying success.

RHODE ISLAND Y. C. ELECTS.

William B. Streeter Again Named to Serve as Commodore.

The Rhode Island Yacht Club has again selected William B. Streeter to serve as Commodore of the organization. Mr. Streeter has twice previously been elected to that office for terms of one year each. In the discussion of plans for next season at the annual meeting it was advocated that any work during the Winter should be directed toward the promotion of sailing races.

The associates of Mr. Streeter on the official board of the organization and the committees for the ensuing year are as follows: Vice Commodore—Louis D. Pierce; Rear Commodore—George G. Wheeler; Secretary and Treasurer—F. A. Barnes; Measurer—Scott C. Burlingame; House Committee—Fred L. Davenport, Edward C. Stickney and Ernest Cordin; Social Committee—Crawford Allen and Richard E. Wildprett; Sub-Station Committee—George F. Brownell; Race Committee—Bradbury L. Barnes; Directors-at-large—William H. Draper and Charles A. Stone; Delegates to Narraganset Bay Yacht Racing Association—Bradbury L. Barnes, Richard P. Jenks and William B. Streeter.

Clubs Raise Service Flags.

Officials of the Morningside A. C. and Brooklyn A. A. yesterday hung out their service flags after short ceremonies. The Morningside flag shows thirty-five stars, one for each athlete from the club who has entered the service, while that of the Brooklyn organization shows twenty-nine stars. This is 50 per cent. of the membership of the Brooklyn A. A. The flag was presented to the club by Sheriff-elect Daniel J. Griffen of Brooklyn.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Undergo Wide Fluctuations on Limited Dealings—Puzzling Railroad Situation.

Prices moved in a very irregular manner yesterday, with only a moderate turnover in stocks. The close saw advances running up to 4 or 5 points in a number of issues, most of them the less active industrials, but with declines of equal size in other shares. The rails were no more active, despite the highly important developments under way in the transportation situation, and the Street reflected its inability to measure the effect on them of the new conditions by fractional price changes.

What is to come out of the initial steps for the pooling of railway facilities is not clear even to the railway executives who are at work on the problem, but changes of far-reaching importance are likely to be decided upon within the next thirty days. The situation is one that may very likely call for a complete overturning of all settled ideas as to the essentially competitive nature of railroad service. Already a start has been made in this direction by throwing the Western Maryland into a three-track system with the Baltimore & Ohio's parallel line. The executives believe that it will be necessary before the Winter is far advanced to route freight and passengers without regard to the effect of changes on the earnings of the roads concerned. This will inevitably lead to some kind of a pooling arrangement for earnings as well. It may become necessary for certain roads to give up their best passenger trains because such service competes with equally good trains over another line, and for others to refuse some classes of freight in order to keep their cars free to handle other offerings. Whether such a pooling arrangement can be made or would be advisable for the whole country it is too early to say, but leading officials are convinced that it must be adopted at an early date for the Eastern lines. A proposal is put forward in some quarters that the Government adopt a plan somewhat along the lines of that followed in Great Britain, guaranteeing to the roads the same earnings reported before the war in return for their surrender of all rights over control of their traffic. In the light of the new problem the Street has almost lost interest in the forthcoming freight decision, which is looked for soon after the first of next month.

Throwing all the mileage and rolling stock of the carriers into one great system would put off for some time the imperative necessity for financing which some of the weaker companies now face by relieving them of pressure in some directions, while supplying them with cars for freight allotted to them under the new scheme. The great difficulty of evolving a method under which the Federal Government can finance the carriers lies in the fact that it is the weaker roads which need aid, and they are the companies which have not the collateral which would be required to cover advances. The transportation managers are being summoned to Washington for a series of meetings which may be productive of a solution of the existing difficulties, provided that Congress can be induced to authorize the necessary enabling legislation. Under Government regulation the idea that there must be keen competition among the railroads is being outgrown.

LONDON TRADING IS ACTIVE.

War News Stimulates Transactions on the Stock Exchange.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The war news stimulated business in most directions on the Stock Exchange today, and the market commenced the week distinctly strong and cheerful, oil, shipping, and Peruvian shares leading the improvement. Argentine rails were buoyant on the proposed purchase of Argentine grain by the Allies; gilt-edged securities were benefited by an accumulation of week-end orders and the prospects of the reinvestment of dividends at the end of the month. American securities were quiet.

Money was in increased request. Discount rates were quiet.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Almost All Settled.

The spirit with which the old order of handling railroad business is being relegated to the scrap heap of obsolete customs has allowed little opportunity for the consideration of the rights of the holders of railroad stocks. Those men at Washington who have been adopting the most radical suggestions offered to produce a greater stream of necessary commodities have so far said nothing about the effect of their plans upon net earnings. The situation recalled to the mind of a prominent railroad President yesterday an experience of his many years ago when he occupied a less important position on a Western road. His company had sent a traffic man to Chicago to settle a vexing question of rates on a number of leading commodities. The traffic man became interested in a poker game at his hotel and for three days and nights was hardly away from the table except to snatch a few moments' sleep. When the game broke up he wired his home office: "Please send $300 for expenses. Everything fixed but the rates."

A Good Day for Coal.

In the old days, when that issue was a speculative favorite, Brooklyn Rapid Transit used to sell higher on Monday following a record crowd at the beaches on the day previous. American Ice had strong days when the thermometer made new high records. The icy blasts which brought the first hint of Winter may have turned traders' thoughts to the demand for coal which has sprung up in all parts of the city. At any rate, Burns Brothers stock sold up to 116 yesterday, closing with an advance of 2¼ points. The Street had been prepared for the advance by the circulation of reports of a forthcoming extra dividend.

Advance in Price of Oil for Export.

The Standard Oil Company of New York has advanced the price of kerosene for export one cent a gallon and the price of naphtha and gasoline in ten-gallon drums 7½ cents.

War Loans and the Banks.

The changes in the condition of banks brought about by their co-operation with the Government in financing the war are indicated in the reports that are being published in connection with the Controller's call. One of the most interesting thus far printed is that of the National Bank of Commerce, which shows a tremendous increase in deposits, its total for general and Government deposits being given as $562,566,000. The bank's investments in Liberty Loan bonds and in Treasury certificates of indebtedness amount to more than $217,000,000, which is in excess of four and a half times its capital, surplus, and undivided profits. The fact that the Commerce, along with the other institutions, is availing itself of the facilities of the Federal Reserve Bank is indicated by the item of $27,000,000 for "bills payable" at the Reserve Bank.

Record Prices for Cotton.

December cotton contracts crossed the thirty-cent level yesterday and sold up as high as 30½ cents, the highest price reached since the establishment of the New York Cotton Exchange. The top figure represented an advance of more than $4 a bale from Saturday's closing figure. The lowest price for December contracts this season was 13.77. The price of spot cotton yesterday also made a new high record by selling at 31¼, the highest figure recorded since 1869, when 35 cents a pound was paid. A month ago spot cotton in New York was quoted at 28.65 and a year ago at 20.45 cents. Yesterday's rise was not a surprise, for traders had predicted that the price for futures, as well as for spots, would go above 30 cents.

Aiming at the Shining Marks.

No other reason is needed for the slump which has taken place in a number of high-class issues than the fact that they have been selling at high prices. In a bear market the time comes when even the highest classes of stocks occupy untenable positions because of their limited field among buyers. Traders sell a stock quoted at $150 a share on the theory that the large holders will not care to add to their investment and that the bargain hunters will not be interested in an issue which calls for such a large outlay of capital, or wide margins if carried by the broker. The weakness in some of these stocks has been intensified by selling of fairly large blocks by wealthy men who are shifting part of their funds into tax exempt securities.

Bonus for Quicksilver Production.

The New Zealand Government has offered a bonus of 8 cents per pound for the first 100,000 pounds of retorted quicksilver that the mines in New Zealand produce, under the condition that at least one-half of the quantity is produced on or before March 31, 1920, and the remaining half before March 31, 1921. It is reported that there are several rich deposits in the Dominion, but that little has been done as yet for lack of sufficient capital.

Form of Notes Changed.

The syndicate which sold recently $25,000,000 of ninety-day 6 per cent. notes of the American Tobacco Company under a renewal agreement extending the final maturity for two years has rearranged the financing in view of the Federal Reserve Board's statement that the notes were "undesirable as investments for Federal Reserve Banks." It is understood that the notes will be subject to three, instead of seven, renewals, and that their form will be such as to make them available for rediscount. It appears that the bankers who have charge of the financing had consulted with officials of the local Federal Reserve Bank and had obtained an informal ruling regarding the notes, which was subsequently upset by the Reserve Board's public announcement. The bankers acted in good faith, and when they learned that the Tobacco notes would not be accepted for rediscount promptly advised the purchasers that they were prepared to take the notes back or to change the character of the securities sold.

STAMP ACT COSTLY TO BORROWING BANKS

War Revenue Provisions Will Lay Heavy Burden on Promissory Notes Beginning Saturday.

Beginning Saturday, the day the stamp provisions of the new War Revenue act become effective, it will be costly for banks and trust companies to borrow from the Federal Reserve Bank on their promissory notes, secured by collateral. A great many institutions have been availing themselves of the special 3 per cent. rate for loans made by the Reserve Bank for periods of fifteen days or less. Frequently large banks find it convenient to borrow for only one or two days, and in many cases loans of this character have been secured by the deposit of Liberty Loan bonds or Treasury certificates, while the regulations permit of the deposit of eligible commercial paper as collateral for the bank's promissory notes.

The Revenue act provides for a tax of 2 cents for notes not exceeding $100, and an additional 2 cents for each $100 or fraction thereof. It was figured out yesterday that if a member bank borrowed from the Federal Reserve Bank for the period of one day, the cost of the use of the money would be 10 per cent., instead of 3 per cent., the charge made by the Reserve Bank. For a period of fifteen days the cost would be 3½ per cent., compared with 3 per cent.

The extent to which the banks are taking advantage of the special 3 per cent. rate for fifteen day advances is seen from the weekly statement of the Federal Reserve Board, which shows that $449,500,000 of $656,000,000 of discounts consist of these collateral notes. Over 80 per cent. of them are secured by Liberty bonds or certificates of indebtedness. In the case of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, about $300,000,000 of the $351,000,000 of discounts consist of "advances" made to member banks on their promissory notes.

In view of the fact that through these advances member banks have been able to facilitate Liberty Loan payments without disturbing the money market, efforts will be made to secure an amendment to the Revenue act, providing for the exemption from taxation of promissory notes negotiated with the Federal Reserve Banks, especially those notes specifically created for the purpose of financing Liberty Loan payments.

It is understood that no additional stamps will be required in the case where a bank rediscounts a customer's note with the Federal Reserve Bank, the stamp placed by the maker of the instrument being regarded as sufficient.

Bankers are waiting for the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to issue his rulings. In some banking quarters the view is held that call loans will not be subject to taxation by reason of the fact that accommodations are extended by banks to brokers under a general agreement, and new notes are not issued from day to day. It is not unlikely, however, that these loans will be taxable.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Although prices showed considerable advances during the day the recessions in the last hour of trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange did not rob the list of more than one-third of the day's gain. The final tone was steady, and the final reaction appeared to be principally due to profit taking by professional and commission-house traders.

COTTON AT 30 CENTS

New High Record in the Market Here—Strong Competition in December.

The bullish predictions of a week ago that cotton contracts would sell above the 30-cent level were realized yesterday, when contracts for December delivery opened up at 30 cents and advanced to 30½ cents. Thus there was established a new high record in the history of the New York cotton trade, which was accompanied by the quotation of 31¼ cents for spot cotton, a new record since 1869.

Throughout yesterday's session trading was active and excited. The sharp advance was due to a renewal of trade buying, a broadening outside demand, and covering, while there was evidently strong competition for the few notices which were issued against December contracts. At 30½ cents, December showed an advance of more than $4 per bale from the final quotation of Saturday, and it closed at 30.28, with the general list closing steady at a net gain of 46 to 65 points.

According to estimates around the ring, the December notices issued amounted to only 500 bales, and no less than eleven local and Southern houses were said to be in the market for deliveries. The strength of the near position naturally exercised a sympathetic influence on later months. Beyond that the market was dominated by reports that manufacturers were still able to sell goods for forward delivery at advancing prices, reports of an active spot demand in the South, and the circulation of small crop estimates.

The opening was firm at an advance of 15 to 28 points. The appearance of the predicted 30-cent level brought out considerable realizing, but offerings were readily absorbed. Brokers with both Liverpool and domestic trade connections were good buyers, the demand of this sort serving to increase the uneasiness of recent sellers, and during the early afternoon there were rumors of further British successes. January sold up to 29.73, with active months generally showing a net advance of about 71 to 88 points. Realizing then became more active and closing prices were several points off from the best.

Aside from realizing there appeared to be very little pressure against prices at any time during the day, notwithstanding the new high levels and the realization of old bullish predictions. Thirty cents has been the price most talked of in connection with Southern holding, but many of the advices received here yesterday suggested that the views of Southern holders had been advanced by the factors responsible for the recent upward movement in futures. Exports yesterday were 21,298 bales, making 1,641,565 so far this season.

PENNIES BY THE BILLION.

National City Bank Cannot Understand Reported Shortage.

In a statement issued yesterday the National City Bank said the scarcity of pennies reported from various parts of the country was the more surprising in view of the fact that the Government coinage of one-cent pieces had been much larger in recent years than in any earlier period of the history of the country. The bank's compilation showed that more than one billion one-cent coins had been manufactured by the Government and distributed to the people during the last dozen years.

According to the bank's compilation, the number of one-cent coins manufactured by the mints of the United States from 1793 to the end of the fiscal year 1916 was 2,804,000,000, while the number issued in the last decade alone was, in round numbers, one billion. Even in the single fiscal year 1916 the number of one-cent pieces was 101,230,317, while in the high record year, 1910, the total number turned out was 152,846,218. The number of pieces coined never touched the 100,000,000 line prior to 1907, the total for that year being 108,138,618, the annual average since that time having been nearly 100,000,000 per year.

The bank estimates that the number of one-cent pieces coined from the beginning of the Government to date would, even if all were in existence and circulation, allow for each individual about 27 one-cent pieces. Of course, the number actually available is far less than this, for it is quite probable that out of the two and three-quarter billion one-cent pieces coined by the Government not more than about two billions are now in existence, or at least in circulation, making the present average per capita for all the people of the United States of about 20 one-cent pieces.

"The face value of the 'token coins' issued by the Government (the one-cent pieces and the five-cent nickels) is, of course, much greater than the value of the metal which they contain," the bank's statement said. "In fact, the profit on the manufacture of these coins, together with a slight profit on the manufacture of the minor silver coins (ten, twenty-five, and fifty cent pieces) is more than enough to pay the running expenses of the mint."

RED CROSS SHIPMENTS.

35,000 Cubic Tons Sent to Allies Since Oct. 1.

The American Red Cross announced last night that since Oct. 1 last steamships plying between American and allied ports in Europe have transported approximately 33,000 cubic tons of war relief materials to the Allies. The shipments were valued at about $1,736,316. The statement points out that at the present time the Red Cross is not only supplying war hospitals, but also infirmaries, canteens, recuperating stations, homes or nurses, and various other establishments in France and the other countries of the Allies.

Since Oct. 1 the following foodstuff was despatched to Europe: Flour, 602 tons; beans, 431 tons; condensed milk, 320 tons; beef, 158 tons, and coffee, 55 tons. Seven hundred and eighteen cases of cigarettes and tobacco, weighing 100 tons, were included in the Red Cross shipments.

In addition to the shipments listed in the report of the Supply Service, the Red Cross has made arrangements to forward seventy-five tons of foodstuffs to American prisoners in Germany. Two thousand tons of foodstuffs are to be purchased for Rumania at a cost of about $1,000,000. Shoes, medical supplies, and other materials costing about $250,000 will be shipped as soon as possible to Rumania.

The Red Cross will shortly extend to Japan its activities in war relief work, announcement having been made here that the organization has accepted an offer to take over St. Luke's International Hospital in Tokio in case of need arising for its use by the military or naval forces of the United States. In making this announcement Dr. R. B. Teusler, director of the Board of Missions of the Episcopal Church, said the hospital would become the centre of Red Cross activities in Japan.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

WHEAT.

Notwithstanding the small receipts of wheat at Western points last week, the visible supply of domestic and Canadian wheat in the United States increased 1,649,000 bushels, bringing the total to 21,213,000, against 72,090,000 last year. Advices from Argentina said that prices there were strong on reports of negotiations pending for the purchase of the entire surplus of wheat as well as linseed and oats by the Allies. It was also said that the Argentine crop had been severely damaged by frost, and Broomhall's agent now estimates the exportable surplus at 138,000,000, compared with earlier estimates of 176,000,000 bushels.

RYE.—Market steady. No. 2 Western, $1.89, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

The corn market was feverish and irregular, closing ⅜c net lower to ⅜c higher. At best the market is a narrow one, owing to the restrictions placed on aggressive operations, and consequently prices are subject to quick changes both ways, as operations are mostly in small lots and traders are disposed to take small profits. There was further talk of prospective large receipts, and on this account some operators were disposed to look for lower prices. As a matter of fact, receipts are increasing, and the visible supply showed an increase for the week of 661,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 328,000 last year. In the local cash market new yellow corn was quoted at $2.02, cost and freight, New York, ten days shipment; Argentine corn at $2.06 to $2.10, free on board cars New York, to arrive.

OATS.

The oats market was slightly lower early under selling for a reaction after last week's advance. A sharp upturn in Winnipeg, however, again stimulated buying, and this, supplemented by export sales of about 300,000 bushels, caused a sharp rally. Final prices were 1¼@1½c net higher. The visible supply decreased 575,000 bushels for the week, and the total is now about 30,000,000 less than last year, despite the large crop. The local cash market was firmer. Standard quoted at 79@79½c; No. 2 white, 79¾c; No. 3 white, 78½@79c; No. 4 white, 76@78½c; fancy clipped white, 79@81c; ordinary clipped white, 78@79c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Larger receipts of hogs than expected in the West, and a decline of 10 points in the hog market, brought about an easier opening to the provision list, with more or less scattered selling. The firmness in grains, however, and buying which was thought to be by packers, caused a rally, and the close was firm and generally higher. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 55,000; estimated for Tuesday, 33,000. Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 12,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was irregular early, closing easy, with final prices 5 to 83 points net lower. Total sales were 4,600 barrels. The November position advanced 21 points on covering, but closed weak. Total tenders on November contracts during the month were 19,000 barrels. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The circulation of December notices, estimated at slightly over 20,000 bags, caused a renewal of liquidation and a good deal of switching from December to later months in the coffee market yesterday. These offerings seemed to have been pretty well absorbed on an early decline of about 8 to 12 points, however, and rallies followed on covering, while there also seemed to be some scattered trade buying during the afternoon. The close showed a net decline of 1 to 5 points. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 7½c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

There were no fresh developments in sugar. It is reported that the Russian sugar recently released has not as yet been distributed, but the committee is working out details, and it is expected that distribution will be made later in the week. It is now reported that no final agreement has yet been reached on a price for the new Cuban crop, and that the Cuban officials are returning to New York for a final conference here on Friday of this week. Practically all the Western beet sugar factories are working full time and turning out about 10,000 tons of sugar daily, but a good deal of this is going into warehouses owing to the shortage of cars. Spot prices follow: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c, and cost and freight, 5⅝c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER. — Receipts yesterday, 2,880 packages. Market still short of high grades of fresh creamery. Prices were further advanced, with a strong feeling at the close. Medium qualities are attracting rather more attention and are stiffening a little and there is a better movement in storage creamery. Most of the large chain stores are now running on the held goods. Fine renovated doing a little better. Ladles and Packing stock very quiet. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb., 47½@48c; extras, (92 score,) 47c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43@46½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@42½c; thirds, 38@39c; Creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 48½@49c; extras, 47½c@48c; firsts, 44@47c; seconds, 41@43½c; Creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43½@44c; extras, 42½@43c; firsts, 41@42c; seconds, 39¼@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 45@46c; good to prime, 41½@44c; common to fair, 35@41c; Renovated, extras, 41@41½c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, 35@38c; Ladles, current make, firsts, 33¼@34c; seconds, 32½@33c; lower grades, 31@32c; Packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31¼c.

EGGS.—Receipts, 4,883 cases. Fresh gathered eggs continue in extremely small supply, and there is a great scarcity of new-laid qualities. The needs of the trade are increasing as a result of the recent advance in prices, but dealers are still having difficulty in obtaining enough for urgent requirements, and the market is fully sustained, with a firm tone on all desirable qualities. The range of prices is still very wide, owing to the irregular quality of the receipts. Storage eggs are meeting a moderate demand and show a steady tone at unchanged prices. Nearby white eggs are a little more plentiful. Trading is quiet and selective and prices tend in buyers' favor. Most of the receipts are of mixed and irregular qualities, and comparatively few are now found to reach our top quotation. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 57@58c; extra firsts, 55@56c; firsts, 52@54c; seconds, 45@50c; thirds and poorer, 36@44c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 35c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@34c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice dry, 32@33c; under grades, 25@31c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34@34½c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 32½@33½c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 30@32c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 24@30c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 72@76c; ordinary to good, 60@70c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@72c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 55@60c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 55@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 58@62c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 48@58c.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In the matter of MAX MINTZ, Bankrupt.
It appearing to my satisfaction by the petition of Maurice L. Shaine, verified the 24th day of November, 1917, that a petition was filed in this Court on the 17th day of October, 1917, praying that the above-named Max Mintz be adjudged a bankrupt and that a subpoena directed to said alleged bankrupt was duly issued out of this Court to the Marshal of this District, and that the said Marshal has been unable to serve the same, and that said alleged bankrupt is now not within this District, so that personal service may be made upon him, and that diligent efforts have since been made to ascertain the whereabouts of the said alleged bankrupt, but that he is now not within the jurisdiction of this Court, it is now, on motion of Maurice L. Shaine, attorney for the petitioning creditors,
Ordered that the above-named alleged bankrupt plead, answer, or demur on or before the 21st day of December, 1917, to the petition herein filed in the office of the Clerk of this Court, and in case of his failure to plead, answer, or demur thereto, adjudication shall be made, granting the prayer of said petition; and it is further Ordered that this order be published in The New York Times once a week for two successive weeks, said publication to commence not later than the 27th day of November, 1917, and that a copy of this order be mailed to the said alleged bankrupt at his last known residence in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the day of the first publication.

Food for Thought!

There is no law of God or man by which a business man is guaranteed protection against his own incompetence. But there is a clearly demonstrated way by which an intelligent manufacturer can protect himself against present day emergencies, and that way is by availing himself of my funds.

Hundreds of manufacturers use my service and unhesitatingly indorse it to their business friends.

Why not investigate it for yourself? A conference involves no obligation, and the strictest confidence is assured.

Tie Business Up with Last Year.

Though there have been isolated cases in the men's neckwear trade of business falling behind the record of a year ago, there seems no indication that this condition is general throughout the industry. Reports from some of the largest factors in the local trade indicate that while business has not gone ahead of last year to any extent, it has not fallen behind. With the better grade of merchandise which is now being purchased, and with higher prices for nearly every grade, the year's business will amount to more, in dollars and cents, it is said, than the orders of the previous year.

Children's Sweaters Selling.

The cold weather of the past few days has been a great stimulant to business in the children's knit goods departments of the local retail stores. Sweater suits for small children and separate sweaters for larger boys and girls are said to have been very actively sought. Angora and Shetland weaves have been popular in these lines all Fall, though moderate weather during most of the season has to some extent held trade back. Blue, gray, and khaki shades have been the leaders, though it seems that red and green, the old standbys, are still in demand. The increased buying yesterday is said to have been largely in the better grades.

Men Buying Heavy Woolen Socks.

One of the striking developments of the Fall season in the men's wear trade is said to be the unusually large call for heavy woolen half hose. It is reported that the demand is felt both in and outside of the metropolitan district. Though, ordinarily, black and white were the most favored in these lines, this season a wide variety of colors in the darker shades is sought. Mixtures of green and brown, forming a dark olive drab, have been the best sellers so far. Plain weaves are popular, though ribbed and pearled goods in the better grades are said to be well taken.

Staple Dress Goods Doing Well.

Staple dress goods are having all the better of it at the present time, both for Spring and immediate delivery. While plaids are doing well for immediate shipment on French serge grounds, fancies as a whole are not as active as they might be. In the last couple of weeks, in particular, there has been an increasing demand for cotton-warp and all-wool storm serges, which had been having a rather marked rest. It is predicted that they will continue to get better as time goes on. French serges are selling well in cases where buyers feel their trade can absorb them at present price levels.

Good Outlook for Spring Trade.

Men's clothing manufacturers of this city, who have already sent their road men out with Spring lines, are said to be receiving glowing reports as to trade prospects for the approaching 1918 season. Retailers in all sections seem to have lost the gloom of last Summer, when so many fears were expressed as to the effect of the draft on business. A good Fall season at retail is said to be among the chief factors which brought about this general rejuvenation. As a result a healthy eagerness is shown for good merchandise, and in a number of cases good orders have already been placed. One house, whose salesmen have been out six weeks, reports orders in excess of the same period a year ago.

Spongers Make New Ruling.

An important step has been taken by the Textile Finishers' Association of New York looking toward more friendly business relations between the members and the garment manufacturers who are their customers. It has assumed the form of a kind of court of first resort, to which any garment manufacturer who feels that he has been unfairly treated by any member may present his case directly to the association. It will then be judged on its merits by that body, and if the sponger is adjudged at fault, he will have to make the necessary amends or lose his membership in the organization. It is expected that this will do away with many of the disputes that have arisen between the spongers and the manufacturers, and tend to place the business on a generally better footing.

New Hemmed-Top Hose.

Some misapprehensions as to the kind of hemmed tops now put on men's hose were called attention to yesterday by a man in the business. The goods that are now coming out with hem tops, he pointed out, are made on special machines, which knit the sock, the top and the welt all in one operation. This not only makes the hemmed socks cheaper to produce than ribbed tops, but gives them even more "stretch" than the latter have. Tests made yesterday proved this claim. It is said of the new process of manufacture, which is also being used in making women's hose, that it turns out socks that will not bind, will not break in coming on or off, and which will fit better at the top than ribbed goods. They are made with a four-inch hem, and it is claimed that garter "pull" will not tear them.

Warehouses Are Filling Up.

If investigators go hunting out alleged cases of hoarded dry goods they will not have much trouble in finding what looks like evidence. They would find, however, that this merchandise is not being tucked away against the coming of higher prices, but against the coming of ships to take it where it belongs. It was said yesterday, for instance, that there is one big warehouse here which is almost entirely filled with goods waiting shipment to the Eastern countries alone. Much of them are due buyers in India. Merchandise bought for other markets also is being held up for lack of tonnage, but with deposits of 25 to 50 per cent. in cash already having been paid on it, and other payments being made from time to time, the shippers of the goods are not being hit so hard by the shipping delays as the consignees.

Some Printcloths Withdrawn.

Things got so hot in the local gray goods market yesterday, due to the wild rise in cotton, that some lines of printcloths were withdrawn until the temperature, speaking figuratively, has a chance to drop a little. A large business was done, however. This year's deliveries of 39-inch 68-72s were sold at 131/2 cents, and spot business was reported on 381/2-inch 64-60s both at 113/4 and 117/8 cents. The same goods sold through the first quarter of next year at 111/2 cents. Ten cents was paid for deliveries of 381/2-inch 60-48s running to May, and 39-inch 56-44s sold for similar shipment at 93/4 cents. In the coarser goods 40-inch 4.25-yard sheetings sold at 131/2 cents to May, with nearby business done on four-yard 56-60s at 141/2 cents. Nearly 5.50 sheetings brought 101/2 cents. Sateens and twills continue to move freely. Printcloth prices, spot, averaged about this way:

39-inch,	80-80s...151/2c	381/2-inch,	64-60s..113/4c

Silk Merchant Honorably Discharged.

After a trial lasting several hours, the indictment of Louis Schwartz of the firm of Schwartz & Birnbaum, dealers in silks at 450 5th Ave., was dismissed by Judge Malone in the Court of General Sessions Monday, November 19. The indictment grew out of a charge preferred against Mr. Schwartz several months ago, for his having purchased property, claimed to have been stolen. It appears that Mr. Schwartz had no knowledge that the merchandise in question had been stolen, particularly in view of the fact that the man from whom the merchandise was purchased was known to the trade to be in the same line. The dismissal of the indictment is an absolute vindication of Mr. Schwartz, his reputation in the trade having always been irreproachable.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Midtown properties were features of an active real estate market yesterday, two important transactions being closed affecting holdings in that section. The Stonewall Realty Company, Robert P. Zobel, President, bought from Elbridge T. Gary the buildings at 8 to 10 East Twenty-ninth Street, on a plot 40 by 98.9, and the abutting property at 7 East Twenty-eighth Street, on a lot 25 by 98.9. The combined properties are assessed at $182,000.

Mr. Zobel stated that he had no immediate plans for the improvement of the site, although he expected eventually to build either a business building or an apartment hotel.

The site lends itself for reimprovement since it faces on Twenty-ninth Street the Little Church Around the Corner and adjoins on Twenty-eighth Street the edifice of St. Leo's Roman Catholic Church, assuring permanent light and air.

Another transaction in the immediate neighborhood concerned a modern store and loft building. Harry J. Luce, President of Acker, Merrall & Condit, sold the five-story building at 37 West Thirty-second Street, on a lot 25 by 98.9, just east of Broadway, which is assessed at $105,000. William B. May & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

The property was acquired by the seller about four years ago from Mrs. Jennie K. Stafford in an exchange involving the Sherwood Studio Buildings, at the southeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street.

The Parkway in Deal.

The United States Savings Bank has sold to an investor, for cash, the Parkway, a six-story elevator apartment house, at the southwest corner of Cathedral Parkway and Manhattan Avenue, on a plot 72.11 by 100.

The bank acquired the property recently at foreclosure. It was held at $150,000. Edward N. Crosby & Co. negotiated the sale.

East Side Tenement Sold.

Isadore Shapiro bought, through the Charles F. Noyes Company, 244 Delancey Street, a five-story tenement, on lot 25 by 75. The property was taken from Selg Goldstein in a recent trade at a $30,000 valuation.

Resale in East Harlem.

An investing client of Bernard Smyth & Sons purchased from Ennis & Sinnott, operators, 76 East 115th Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 100. The sellers bought the property last week.

Buyer for West Side Dwelling.

Mrs. Emily D. Way sold to a client of Slawson & Hobbs 5 West Seventy-fifth Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 23 by 102. The property, which is located about 163 feet west of Central Park West, was held at $45,000.

Bronx Sales.

J. H. Bohlen purchased for investment from Jacob Jensen 878 East 180th Street, a five-story new law apartment house with three stores on a lot 50 by 108 by 118. In addition to cash the buyer gave the two-family house, 2,876 Briggs Avenue, on a lot 25 by 125. John A. Steinmetz negotiated the sale.

Max J. Klein purchased from George J. Shapiro 851 Hornaday Place, a five-story twenty-five-family new law tenement, on a plot 50 by 100. S. Rosen negotiated the sale.

The Henry Morgenthau Company sold to an investor for cash 522 Southern Boulevard, a five-story tenment with stores. The building occupies a lot 25 by 75 on the southwest corner. W. Selkir negotiated the sale.

Brooklyn.

The McInerney Klinck Realty Company sold the three-story brick store and apartment building located on the north side of Church Avenue, 44 feet and 4 inches west of East Second Street, with a frontage of 20 feet and 10 inches on Church Avenue, and a depth of 93 feet and 8 inches on both sides, for Arthur H. Bull to a client for investment.

Queens Borough Sales.

F. F. De Rahm, as referee, sold to J. Seeman of Manhattan the property, 100 by 200 feet, on the southeast corner of Eighth Avenue and Eleventh Street, Whitestone, and 50 by 150 feet on the northeast corner of Kissam Avenue and Broadway, Whitestone.

B. Du Bosch sold to K. Goetz the property, 104 by 119 feet, on the southwest corner of Highland Avenue and Hillcrest Avenue, Jamaica.

The Kew Gardens Corporation sold to H. J. Arnold of Richmond Hill the dwelling and plot, 60 by 100 feet, on the south side of Pembroke Place, 460 feet east of Austin Street, Kew Gardens.

Staten Island.

Cornelius G. Kolff sold for Carl F. Grieshaber a three-story building, occupying a plot 97 by 99, on the northeast corner of Swan Street and St. Paul's Avenue, Tompkinsville, to Jiacom Mazzairella.

New Jersey.

The Edgewater Realty Company sold to Allen M. Clark of Watertown, N. Y., a frame cottage on Browne's Terrace, Englewood. The Englewood Real Estate Company was the broker in the transaction.

Godwin Auction Sale Today.

Interest will centre today on the auction sale of the holdings of the Godwin estate by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies in the Vesey Street Exchange Salesroom, commencing at noon. As a result of the partition suit instituted in the Supreme Court, 234 lots in the vicinity of the West 231st Street subway station will be offered at absolute sale.

The lots are located on both sides of Broadway, on Kingsbridge Avenue, on 230th and 231st Streets and on adjacent streets. The section is practically fully developed, the streets being improved, curbed, graded, and flagged.

Title Transferred to International Motor Company.

Title to the property 253 to 257 West Sixty-fourth Street, 75 by 100.5, purchased in December, 1911, by the Hewitt Motor Company, was transferred yesterday to the International Motor Company, which occupies the block front on West End Avenue from Sixty-third to Sixty-fourth Street.

New Standard Oil Company Garage.

Plans have been filed for the improvement of the plot, 150 by 160.11, at 523 to 533 East 119th Street with a three-story garage by the Standard Oil Company. The architect, C. A. Ellis, estimates the cost at $26,000. The company controls the entire frontage on the East River, between 119th and 120th Streets.

Recent Buyers.

Edward J. O'Gorman is the buyer of the apartment house 530 West 115th Street sold by the Oothout Realty Company.

Julius M. Rosenmann and Bernard Krausman are the buyers of the five-story apartment houses 1,532 to 1,540 Seabury Place, adjoining the southwest corner of Boston Road in the Bronx.

Dora Grubel is the buyer of the dwelling 1,447 Bryant Avenue sold by the Lawyers Mortgage Company.

Moves to Midtown Location.

J. B. Williams, display fixtures, for the last twenty-five years at 31 West Fourth Street, has leased the store and basement at 1,133 Broadway, in the Johnson Building, for a long term of years. The W. Rosenthal Company negotiated the lease.

Commercial Lease.

Pope & Brother sublet for John and Louis Boiardi the three-story building at 68 Perry Street, to Ralph Alberton, for a term of years.

Realty Notes.

The New York Fire Insurance Exchange has placed in effect a 10 per cent. increase on all future premiums. General increase of upkeep and overhead costs due to war and other abnormal conditions is given as the cause for the additional rate.

The Brett & Goode Company announced yesterday the leasing of all loft and office space in the twenty-two-story Printing Crafts Building, 461 to 479 Eighth Avenue.

Owing to the difficulty of obtaining coal, particularly in various sections of the city, buckwheat coal will be furnished. In order that there be no confusion in making out fuel reports, company commanders shall write in "buckwheat" over some unused coal columns on the fuel report and carry the record thereunder while this coal lasts. It is not expected, of course, that buckwheat will equal egg in all respects. For this reason 125 pounds of buckwheat will be considered equal to 90 pounds of egg coal. In round figures, five gross tons of buckwheat, 11,200 pounds, will be considered equal to 8,100 pounds of egg.

TELLS NEW OFFICERS TO BE CONSIDERATE

Colonel Wolf Warns Plattsburg Graduates That Otherwise They Will Demoralize Army.

SECOND CAMP BREAKS UP

Only 5 Per Cent. of the 2,743 Men Enrolled Failed to Win Commissions.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The second Plattsburg training camp is a thing of the past, the graduates finally being set down on the official records as being 95 per cent. of the camp strength of 2,743 men. About 200 of the former student soldiers were left here tonight after the last special pulled out at the camp siding at 9 o'clock, and Plattsburg now falls back into its four months of Winter quietude. To celebrate the event the Cole Gas and Electric Company put the city in darkness until after 10 o'clock, destroying what business the lunch rooms, hotels, and shops might have done. This was not on the schedule, but was due to an accident in the power house.

It was a busy morning at the camp, the Quartermaster, with all his assistants, paying off the students for the month of November, and at 11 o'clock the men were assembled at the camp theatre, where they were addressed by Colonel Wolf, commander of the camp. At the end of his talk representatives from each company and battery were called to the stage and received the parchment certificates of ranks for the men.

This graduation exercise lasted only three-quarters of an hour. Colonel Wolf in his address laid particular stress upon the fact that the graduates must not be carried away by the fact that they were to wear the insignia of an officer, but to retain that Plattsburg courtesy which they have been taught.

"And when you go among the men of the national army," he continued, "the men who are giving their lives for the protection of the country and the upholding of democracy, you must remember that these men come from all walks of life, and that they are human, just as you and I, and must be treated as humans, and on that point I have not the least doubt that you men of education and the training given here will understand that unless they are treated as humans you start a demoralization at once.

"I have personally talked with almost every man who is to be given a commission at the conclusion of my remarks, and I have sized each individual closely and have not the least doubt that the human feeling side of this great war undertaking is impressed in the breast of every man now holding rank. But before closing I want to repeat a few lines from an address made by the late Major Gen. John M. Scofield to the United States Corps of Cadets on Aug. 11, 1879. He said the discipline which makes the soldier of a free country reliable in battle is not to be gained by harsh or tyrannical treatment. On the contrary such treatment is far more likely to destroy than to make an army. Just remember that, please.

"I want officers to say of you 'That man must be from Plattsburg—he is so correct, so soldierly, so respectful of his superior officers.' Here you have been so careful as candidates to observe military courtesy. Carry this with you everywhere. When you go on duty with your companies, don't be stiff-necked and harsh with your men. Keep the fact that they are human in mind. Be sympathetic, be adviser, as well as leader.

"Study each man and try and get his point of view. Gain his confidence and respect, so that at the supreme moment he will not fail you. Don't stand on your dignity. Be natural; never bluff. Don't fear familiarity. There will be line enough between you and enlisted men—you, because of your superior education, your military assets. If you cannot get team work with your men you will not be a military success. Always keep in mind the Plattsburg spirit. There is nothing like it."

The headquarters staff announced tonight that there would be no more names of commissioned men given out here. All names of men who are not on the discharged list, and who have not appeared in the list issued here, are on record in the office of the Adjutant General at Washington, and these men will hear from that department within ten days of the rank given and their assignment.

James W. Burrows, whose name did not appear in the list issued Saturday, notifies THE TIMES that he has been commissioned a First Lieutenant of Infantry in the National Army and assigned to duty at Camp Devens.

PRESIDENT AT FORT MYER.

Reviews and Inspects the 940 Graduates of the Training Camp.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Wilson reviewed and inspected the 940 successful candidates at the officers' training camp at Fort Myer today, and Secretary Baker told them of the hopes officials and the country are building on their ability to help train the national army.

Mr. Baker said he wanted the American Army not only to bring back victory, but to leave in Europe memories of American chivalry and high moral standards. Just before Secretary Baker delivered the diplomas the new officers sang several songs which have become popular since the United States entered the war.

ingly advisable and would greatly simplify the situation.

"I have understood that some, if not a large number, of Austrian troops have been on the western front. They may now, or soon, be actually fighting against the American forces, the two forces firing at each other. Anyway, the Austrians are desperately engaged with Italy, which is one of our allies just as much as France or England."

Reasons for Speedy Action.

No authoritative statement has come from the Government as to its position on the question of making war on Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey. War Department officials are said to be preparing estimates for possible hostilities against those countries, and there is a widespread feeling that the situation of the United States would be simplified if a state of war betwen this Government and the remaining Central Powers were declared. It is felt that the operations of Austrian submarines against American merchant vessels, the use of Austrian ports by German submarines which menace American ships, and the employment of German troops to assist Austria in the Italian campaign would justify the step. It would also enable this Government to take measures against Austrian, Bulgarian, and Turkish spies and dynamiters in the United States.

Nevertheless some persons contend that it would be a mistake to engage in hostilities with Austria-Hungary. They argue that Austria is the weak sister of the Central Powers combination. Her people are weary of war, and her new Emperor and his Government, it is believed, would seek peace now if they were not afraid of the vengeance of Germany. Therefore, it is contended, it would be well for the United States to refrain from war with Austria in order to be free to act as mediator in any negotiations on Austria's initiative for an ending of hostilities with Great Britain, France, Italy, and Russia.

Despite this view, however, the general impression here is that a state of war between the United States and Germany's allies will be declared by the next Congress at the instance of President Wilson.

ORDER INQUIRY INTO SINKING

State Department Anxious to Know If Austrians Sank the Schuylkill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Instructions have been sent by the State Department to the American Consul at a Mediterranean port to investigate the sinking by a submarine of undetermined nationality of the American steamer Schuylkill last week. Advices to the Navy Department stated that forty members of the Schuylkill's crew had been landed.

Administration officials are anxious to determine whether the submarine was Austrian or German. Advices received by the State Department say that there was a black and white spiral mark on its periscope.

It is altogether probable that if the evidence shows the Schuylkill was sunk by an Austrian submarine, it will be utilized as another count in the indictment to be made against Austria when Congress is urged, as it will be next week, to declare war on Austria-Hungary.

It is argued here that it is not necessary to complete the evidence in the Schuylkill case in order to strengthen this Government's indictment against Austria-Hungary, and that there was sufficient evidence to warrant a declaration of war against Austria last April when diplomatic relations with that nation were severed. An Austrian submarine, on Nov. 7, 1915, sank the Italian liner Ancona in the Mediterranean without warning and with severe loss of life.

On Dec. 6 following, the United States called the Austrian Government's attention to the fact that that Government had been advised, through the correspondence between the United States and Germany, of the attitude of this Government as to the use of submarines in attacking vessels of commerce.

The Austrian Government was then warned that despite this knowledge the commander of the submarine flying the Austro-Hungarian flag which attacked the Ancona failed to provide for the safety of the crew and passengers of the vessel. Austria was warned that the United States considered this submarine commander's act a violation of international law principles, and the code of humanity, and we demanded an apology, the punishment of the commander, and guarantees as to the future.

Relations between the United States and Austria were very much strained by the Ancona case, and it was not until Dec. 31, 1915, that they were eased by Count Burian's reply, in which Austria offered compliance with our demands. Germany at that time did not want a break with the United States and used influence at Vienna in favor of a conciliatory answer.

Early in 1916, when Germany threw her solemn pledges in the Sussex and Lusitania cases to the winds, notifying the world that she intended to sink any ships that entered the barred zones, Austria did likewise. Under date of Jan. 31, 1917, Austria delivered a note to the United States, as to other neutral powers, declaring almost the same submarine danger zone as was delared by Germany. This notification was received on the same day that Count Tarnowski arrived in Washington.

It was explained to Count Tarnowski that the United States Government could not possibly receive an Ambassador from Austria and at the same time dismiss the German Ambassador, unless the Austro-Hungarian Government could recede from the position taken in its submarine note. Count Tarnowski was not accepted as Ambassador from Austria-Hungary, and a delicate situation between this country and the Vienna Government drifted until April 9, when the Austrian Chargé d'Affaires here, Baron Zwiedinek, called at the State Department and stated that he had received instructions to the effect that his Government had severed relations with the United States.

The Vienna Government based its action on the fact that the United States had declared war on Germany. We had been advised previously by Ambassador Penfield that, on April 1, he had been informed by the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs that Austria would break relations with the United States if we declared war against Germany.

The Austrian Government gave the United States the same solemn pledges that Germany did with respect to submarine warfare. This pledge was given in the Ancona case. It was broken Jan. 31, 1917, when Austria declared the same submarine danger zone as Germany.

ROOSEVELT EXTOLS CANADIANS IN WAR

Greeted by Cheering Crowds at Toronto, Where He Speaks for Victory Loan.

DOUBTS VALUE OF TREATIES

Colonel Mistrusts the Pledges of Some Nations—Advocates Universal Service.

TORONTO, Ontario, Nov. 26.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt received a tremendous ovation here tonight when he spoke in support of Canada's Victory Loan. Thousands of Canadians, waving Union Jacks and American flags, filled the hall, and when Colonel Roosevelt appeared on the platform the crowd arose and sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King."

"Colonel Roosevelt," declared Sir Thomas White, the Chairman, "has been of incalculable service in mobilizing the moral forces of the world against Germany and its iniquities. We welcome him as a statesman, a gallant soldier, as a humanitarian, and, above all, as a man, for he is every inch a man."

Praises British Colonies.

"In all its great history," Colonel Roosevelt said, "the British Empire has accomplished no task quite as great, and none fraught with more lasting benefit to her own people, and to the cause of orderly liberty throughout the world, than the task of the last three and a quarter years. In doing this task, a part of extraordinary significance has been played by the free overseas commonwealths of the empire: by Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and the Ocean Islands.

"I speak the literal truth when I say that what has been accomplished by you Canadians and by your brothers of the continents and islands which lie under the Southern Cross, is without a parallel in history. You and they have sent your stalwart sons in hundreds of thousands across the vast oceans, down beyond the rim of the world, to fight on fields of ancient fame which their deeds have rendered still more famous.

"This action was the supreme justification of the liberty-loving, self-respecting, and respectful of the rights of others—which your several commonwealths have enjoyed. Furthermore, it has been a proof of the vision, of the power to look ahead, and to sacrifice present ease for large future interest, which is possessed only by peoples that are mighty of soul. You have chosen to walk on the hard and glorious road of service and sacrifice and high achievement. You have made your bodies the servants of your souls' desire.

"A short-sighted or small-souled people, dwelling either across the Atlantic or south of the equator, would have shown only a tepid interest in the European war. Such a people would have easily devised a sentimental camouflage for action that would really have been due to self-indulgent materialism. Nothing would have been easier than to say that you felt such horror of bloodshed as to be unwilling to send your sons to slaughter that you wished to reserve them to fight on your own shores if you were invaded, or even that by refusing to be active in the war you hoped to be more useful when peace came—I have listened to plenty of such talk in my own country in the days before our people waked to their duty.

Spurned Counsels of Timidity.

"But, thank heaven, you men and women of the north, like the men and women of the continents far to the south, spurned the counsels of a mean and blind timidity. You have played your part in such fashion that your children's children, for generation after generation, shall hold their heads high and look all the world in the face without flinching. You have spent your wealth and your blood with a wise lavishness that is beyond praise.

"I did not accept any invitation to speak formally in Canada until the entry of my own beloved country into the war gave me the right to come here with pride, as an equal speaking to equals; for now, friends, your countrymen and mine have a common duty and the same single purpose. The duty incumbent on both of our nations is to fight this war through to a finish, no matter how long it takes and at no matter what cost of life and treasure, until we win the peace of overwhelming victory. Our common purpose is to break the offensive strength of the Prussianized Germany of the Hohenzollerns, so as to redeem Belgium and secure ample atonement for her wrongs, so as to restore to France what Germany took from her, so as to free every people now tyrannized over by Germany or by her vassal allies, Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria.

"When the world is safe for orderly freedom, for all the free peoples, great or small, who live justly under the Governments of their choice, then, and not until then, our purpose in this war will have been achieved. Then, when peace comes, we must endeavor to make it lasting; and in order that we may be even measurably successful in this endeavor, we must show both sincere desire to realize an ideal and also sound common sense in the course we follow to that end.

"As regards certain nations, I am sure that it will prove entirely possible both to provide for permanent peace among them, and also to provide for common and disinterested action along certain lines and within definite limits, to secure a betterment of general international conditions, diminish the likelihood of future wars, and to restrict their limits if they break out. As regards Canada and the United States, I think the time has come when we should declare that no possible question can arise which cannot be determined substantially as questions between the various States or provinces are determined, at Washington or Ottawa.

Mistrusts Some Nations.

"As regards some nations, I question whether as yet we can trust the future safely to even the most carefully devised treaties—lest in any real emergency we suddenly discover that they are regarded merely as scraps of paper. Therefore, on the general matter of securing lasting international peace, I feel that probably our action ought to be twofold. We ought, with entire sincerity, to take every step which makes it likely that thereby the chance of future war will be minimized. But we should treat this action as an addition to, and not as a substitute for, preparing in advance to guard our safety by our trained strength. Let us in good faith enter into all reasonable treaties which will render it less likely in the future that the peace of the world will be broken. But let us not trust too much to paper guarantees.

"Let us, ourselves, make no agreements we cannot keep, and observe every agreement into which we enter. In addition, let us, as a matter of permanent policy, keep our strength prepared for our own defense. In order to do this let us insist that every right enjoyed shall carry with it the obligation to perform the corresponding duty. Inasmuch as the first duty of a nation is self-defense, let us insist that in our democracies universal suffrage shall go hand in hand with universal service, and therefore with obligatory universal training of our young men in time of peace so that they may be fit and ready to defend the hearthstones of the nation in time of war."

Tremendous enthusiasm greeted Colonel Roosevelt on his arrival here shortly after noon today. Sir Robert Borden, Canadian Premier, who was leaving for a political meeting at Uxbridge, had his train held so that he might shake hands with the former President. Among others who welcomed the Colonel were Sir William Hendrie, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario; Sir William Hearst, Provincial Premier; Mayor Church, and army officers.

On leaving the car the Colonel was greeted with three rousing cheers. When he reached the street, thronged with people, he received an ovation. The Military Headquarters Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the guard of honor from the Canadian Officers' Training Corps presented arms.

Cheering crowds lined the streets all along the route to the Government House, whither the Colonel and his party proceeded in automobiles under the escort of a contingent of the Royal Flying Corps mounted on motorcycles. A luncheon followed at the York Club.

SEES OFFICERS DUPES OF CHARITY BAZAARS

District Attorney Swann Says Agents for War Relief Work Are Pocketing Bulk of Receipts.

District Attorney Swann said the continued investigation yesterday of the methods of profiteers who conducted bazaars in the name of patriotism or charity, and ostensibly for the benefit of soldiers and sailors, had disclosed information that indicated military and naval officers had been duped in certain instances. He said that some one had impersonated Colonel John J. Byrne of the 9th Regiment, Coast Defense, in making collections for a bazaar in the Manhattan Opera House to provide for dependents of the command.

A naval benefit bazaar also was a subject of inquiry at the District Attorney's office, and the Prosecutor appealed to Rear Admiral Usher at the Brooklyn Navy Yard to have his officers give such information as might be in their possession concerning this case or of others. In a talk over the telephone Admiral Usher said he had no personal knowledge of the subject, but said he would co-operate in the inquiry by assigning Captain Kellogg to assist the District Attorney's office. In reference to the methods employed in behalf of the Coast Defense benefit, the District Attorney said:

"The general scheme is this: A person representing himself to be Colonel John J. Byrne of the Ninth Regiment would telephone ostensibly from the armory in West Fourteenth Street and plead for contributions. On receiving a favorable reply from the person at the other end of the telephone wire the man impersonating the commander would announce: 'Then I will send my personal orderly to see you.' The contributor would later receive a personal call from a man representing himself as the orderly and attached to the 16th Company, who would get the money and sign a receipt reading: 'For the fund of dependent families of the 9th Regiment.'"

Mr. Swann asserted that of $14,521 thus far collected, it appeared that not more than $4,000 would ultimately get to the regimental fund. Most of the contributions go to the persons making the collections, he said. Mr. Swann has obtained the name of the chief agent, who has an office with a firm in Fifth Avenue, and while no direct charge has been made pending completion of the inquiry, the District Attorney says the profiteers appear to be benefiting far more than the real charity.

Colonel Bryne, who was reached at his military post last night by a telephone call, said he had heard from friends that his name was being used to further the benefit, and when he had called the agent to account for it the latter had replied he had not represented himself as the commander but simply as "speaking for the head of the regiment."

"I told the agent that under no circumstances was he to be permitted to use the name of any officer in furthering the objects of the benefit," declared Colonel Bryne. "The contract was made by a representative of the regiment on the recommendation of some one who had been interested in the benefit of the Twelfth Regiment, which was conducted by the same agent. As I am assured that the Ninth Regiment will receive some 75 to 80 per cent. of all the moneys taken in and that the agent is to get no part of the benefit proceeds, I thought it best to continue the work is arranged, although I asked Mr. Swann if he would suggest breaking the contract. He agreed with my view of the matter."

Mr. Swann also extended his inquiry to the hired agents who are engaged in promoting the collections for the benefits of the Amateur Comedy Club of America, 24 East Fortieth Street, and The Minute Men, who have an office donated to them by the Astor Estate, at Broadway and Vesey Street.

Several witnesses were heard by the Grand Jury yesterday in the inquiry concerning the Army and Navy Bazaar. Eugene Jess, an advertising solicitor of 639 St. Ann's Avenue, Bronx, was convicted by a jury in General Sessions yesterday on a charge of fraudulently collecting funds for a charity. It was alleged that Jess obtained donations and advertisements for a concert he said was to be given at the Manhattan Opera House for the benefit of the American Red Cross.

A "dummy" program for which Jess sought advertisements, it is said, contained the names of Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Henry Clews, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and others, who had not authorized the use of their names.

I DANCED, BUT NOT IN MY HEART, SAYS MRS. DE SAULLES

Wrote Gay Letters and Flattered Her Husband to Keep Him, She Testifies.

STROVE TO HIDE DISTRESS

State Reads Letters to Prove She Was Not Low Spirited When De Saulles Was Away.

CROSS-EXAMINATION ENDS

Story of $20,000 Ring for Mme. Errazuriz Brought Out—Nurses Take the Stand.

Mrs. Blanca De Saulles underwent an exhaustive cross-examination yesterday at the hands of District Attorney Charles R. Weeks. She was confronted with letters she had written which apparently contradicted her direct story on the witness stand, because the letters were bright, cheerful, and gossipy, although written at times when she said her heart was broken by the treatment she had received at the hands of her husband. She was apparently trapped again and again by gay letters written when she said she was suffering most, but she explained that they were written to seem cheerful, to please her husband, and to flatter him in order to hold him.

The mentality of the young woman appeared to be roused by the questions of the prosecutor. She had answered her own counsel almost automatically, but she used her wits to fashion answers to questions from a hostile source. When her attention was called to a letter written in 1914 to De Saulles, in which she said she had danced her "heels off," and was asked how she reconciled it with the statement that she was depressed and suffering at that time, she answered: "We don't dance with our hearts."

At another time, when she was questioned regarding the cheerful tone of letters to her husband, though she said she had been pained by his affronts or by discovering his mode of life, she said: "I meant the letters to show that I was anything but unhappy."

"Whether you were unhappy or not?" asked Justice Manning.

"Yes," she replied.

Made Use of Woman's Wiles.

Some of the letters introduced yesterday and some of the replies she made on the witness stand threw light on the social and mental attitude of the young woman, which had not appeared before. Her character as a devoted wife and mother did not suffer, but it was shown that she was thoroughly human. Her gay letters, read yesterday, showed her enough to sneer at those she considered below her. One paragraph in a letter described how she had flattered and cajoled a customs official who met her at the pier on the arrival of the Lusitania, which brought her back to this country from England in December, 1914. This official accompanied Dudley Field Malone, then Collector of the port, who met her at the dock. Of this subordinate official, she wrote:

"He said, 'It isn't always we have such a passenger as you, and although we all know who Mrs. De Saulles is, we have not the honor of knowing you.' So I told him that he was perfectly splendid. It would bitterly cold and we had to wait some time for my case of silver to come out of the hold. So I said it was a shame he had to wait so much, and he answered that he would not mind waiting every day of his life, if he were to see me. So I said I would not mind arriving every day, if I could see him. The result was that everything was expedited—no questions asked, I shook hands when I said good-bye. I told him he must come to see us, &c., &c., &c. Of course he was in the seventh heaven of delight. You know better than any one what saying that means to people of that class. It was all very amusing and very useful."

Later in her examination, District Attorney Weeks suddenly asked:

"This is not the first time you have been in a courtroom, is it?"

She replied that it was not, and he asked her if she had ever attended the Carman trial.

"Yes," she said, "one afternoon I drove Mrs. Degener over to the trial." This was Mrs. Caroline Degener, a sister of De Saulles.

"Did you hear any of the proceedings?"

"Yes, I heard a black thing testify."

"Did you say you heard a black thing testify?" asked Justice Manning.

"Yes."

"What did you mean?"

"A nigger."

"Is that the way you refer to colored people in the country you come from?"

"We don't have any of them."

Turns to British Slang.

In her gayer letters Mrs. De Saulles frequently fell into the slang she had picked up while she was being educated in England, and many things were "beastly" or "rotten." In her letters to her husband she occasionally spoke in a manner that appeared disrespectful of her own mother, possibly because she knew that De Saulles had had a violent quarrel with his mother-in-law. In a letter written from London in June, 1914, when she was preparing to go to Uruguay, where her husband had been appointed Minister, she said:

"I got another beastly letter from my mother, so that I have given up trying to bridge the gulf. She is out of her mind. Shall tell you about it later."

Mme. Vergara-Errazwiz, the girl's mother, did not seem to hear this when it was read, but later during the cross-examination she began to cry, her first display of emotion since the trial began. A little later she left the courtroom. In a letter written from London at about the same period, she told frankly of her love of luxury and of her high social ambitions. Later she reproached herself for spending money too extravagantly on dress. She wrote:

"Dinky, London is delightful, and you must get named Minister here just as soon as you've made money enough to live comfortably, (or in other words luxuriously.) It's nicer to be Minister here, because there's the court and all that which makes it very interesting and amusing."

Mrs. De Saulles spoke without emphasis and with no marked change of expression, but her eyes, which had been half closed throughout the trial, became wide and bright and her manner vivacious by contrast with her previous attitude. When she finally left the stand, her cheeks were flushed and she looked a little like the pictures taken before or shortly after her marriage.

Americans Killed Must Lie in France Until War Ends

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 27.—The Commissioners of Allegheny County today were informed by the War Department of the refusal of their request that the body of Thomas F. Enright, a private with the American forces in France, who was one of the three men killed in the Americans' first action, be sent to his home in Pittsburgh for burial.

The War Department announced that on recommendation of General Pershing no bodies of deceased officers and soldiers would be sent to this country until after the close of the war.

MURPHY CALLS ON JUDGE HYLAN

Tammany Leader and Mayor-Elect Hold a Long, Secret Conference.

PATRONAGE TALK DENIED

"General Topics" Only Discussed, Judge Hylan Announces.

For the first time since Tammany won its great victory on Election Day, Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, yesterday afternoon visited Mayor-elect John F. Hylan at the headquarters of the Business Men's League, 50 East Forty-second Street. Mr. Murphy and the Mayor-elect came up in the elevator and entered the room together. According to Judge Hylan, Mr. Murphy and he met in the elevator. According to the Hylan version the meeting was accidental so far as the Mayor-elect was concerned, although Mr. Murphy may have come there for the avowed purpose of seeing him. According to some other persons Mr. Murphy and the Mayor-elect entered the building together. With Mr. Murphy was John A. McCarthy, a contractor, who is Treasurer of the Democratic Fusion Committee. Mr. McCarthy did not sit in at the conference however.

In any event, the Tammany chieftain and Mayor-elect Hylan remained in secret conference for fully an hour and a half. When Mr. Murphy emerged he was happy and smiling. Judge Hylan, when he appeared in the ante-room where a score or more office-seekers had been waiting, seemed in a happy mood, too. Mr. Murphy did not have a great deal to say to the reporters who were awaiting him as he came from his meeting with the Mayor-elect.

"The man inside will do all the talking," said the Tammany chief, when the reporters asked him if he had anything to say.

"Does that mean that you are willing to leave it all to Judge Hylan?" asked one of the reporters.

"Yes, sure," said the Tammany leader as he entered an elevator.

Mr. Murphy had not been out of the building long when a telephone call came for one of the newspaper men. It was from Mr. Murphy. The Tammany leader, prompted possibly by fear that his allusion to Mayor-elect Hylan as "the man inside" might be regarded as disrespectful or informal, in the case of a man with much patronage to bestow, urged that "the Mayor" be substituted for the phrase used on the spur of the moment.

It was fully half an hour later when Judge Hylan emerged. Last week Judge Hylan, in an interview, denied that he had any appointment with Leader Murphy or "anybody else," but he added that he was at his headquarters every afternoon, that the door to his private room always was open, and that Mr. Murphy, John H. McCooey, Democratic leader of Kings, the Republican leaders, or anybody who had supported him or honestly opposed him and who had aid or suggestions to offer, would be made welcome.

"Mr. Murphy referred us to you as the man who was to do all the talking about your conference. What can you tell us?" the Mayor-elect was asked.

"There isn't much to tell," was his reply. "Mr. Murphy told me that he wanted to be of help to me and my administration in every way possible. He told me to call upon him for any help it was in his power to give. Of course, I want the help of everybody in what I am trying to do for the people of this city. That includes Democrats, Republicans, and the press."

"And the suffragists?" one of the reporters suggested.

"Yes," said the Judge, with a laugh, "and the ladies."

Talked on General Topics.

"Did Mr. Murphy make any recommendations regarding appointments?" the Mayor-elect was asked.

"No, no," said Judge Hylan. "We just talked on general topics."

"Did not Mr. Murphy manifest any curiosity as to the amount of patronage the organization is to receive?" he then was asked.

"No, no," said the Mayor-elect. "We just talked in a general way."

Judge Hylan was asked whether during the hour and a half that Leader Murphy remained in conference with him prospective budget cuts had been discussed. He answered this question in the negative, as he did another question as to whether the proposed municipal ownership program of the incoming administration had been taken up at the conference.

Before his conference with Judge Hylan, Mr. Murphy was interviewed at Tammany Hall, where he seemed in a very happy frame of mind. Many politicians were waiting to see him after his absence from the city of two weeks.

"Who are all these people around here—are they job hunters?" Mr. Murphy was asked. The Tammany leader smiled broadly.

"Not at all," he replied. "There isn't a man in the crowd that would take a job. They're all patriots."

"Then, don't you want a job for yourself?" asked one of the reporters.

"I've got one right here," said the Tammany Chief with a comprehensive

RUSSIAN LEADERS MEET TO OPPOSE THE BOLSHEVIKI

Milukoff and Tchernoff in Group That Plans to Organize New Government.

GATHER AT HEADQUARTERS

"WARNING" BY DUKHONIN

Vienna Says He Told Army We Would Stop Sending Supplies —Allies Likely to Act.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 28.—A conference of Russian political leaders has assembled at army headquarters for the purpose of forming a Government representing all parties, according to a Petrograd dispatch to The Times.

The leaders have been joined by M. Tchernoff, M. Avksentieff, Professor Milukoff, and Generals Verkhovski, Ivanoff, and others.

Professor Paul H. Milukoff was Minister of Foreign Affairs in the first revolutionary Cabinet and is leader of the Constitutional Democratic Party. M. Tchernoff was Minister of Agriculture in the Kerensky Cabinets of July 24 and Aug. 7. M. Avksentieff was Minister of the Interior in the Kerensky Cabinet of Aug. 7. Both he and Tchernoff are Socialists. General Verkhovski was Minister of War in the recent Kerensky Cabinet and resigned before the recent Bolsheviki revolt. He favored using strong measures in the army. General Ivanoff was formerly commander on the Volhinian and Galician fronts.

German Officers Advising Lenine.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Information was received here today from Petrograd that a number of German staff officers have arrived there and are acting in an advisory capacity to Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier.

A dispatch from Copenhagen today reads:

"General Dukhonin, the Russian Commander in Chief, has sent an order to the Russian Army pointing out that the Entente had protested to the Russian supreme command against any breach of the treaty of Sept. 5, 1915, (the treaty of London pledging the Entente Powers not to make separate peace,) and threatening that any breach from the Russian side, especially the calling of a separate truce, would be fraught with serious danger, according to the semi-official Austrian Correspondence Bureau, says a Vienna dispatch.

"The Russian supreme command has further announced, according to the same authority, that the United States had stopped the transportation of supplies to Russia until the situation cleared, and that should the Bolsheviki retain power and make peace with Germany this prohibition would be maintained."

All Government officials who decline to recognize the Leninite Government, according to a Petrograd dispatch to The Times, will be dismissed from office, as were the employes of the Ministry of Finance who declined to work for the Bolsheviki.

The Central Committee of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates announces its firm intention to crush the opposition in the Ministry of Finance and among bank officials and to undertake to control the State expenses itself.

Judson Warns Chief of Staff.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 27.—Lieut. Col. William V. Judson, Chief of the American Military Mission to Russia, has addressed to the Chief of the General Staff at Petrograd a declaration concerning the alleged embargo on shipments to Russia. He disclaims knowledge of such embargo, but asserts that such a measure would be the logical result of Russia's persistent efforts for an armistice and peace.

Reviewing the press statement about the embargo, Colonel Judson says:

"It seems only just to inform your Excellency that neither I nor the American Ambassador has received from America instructions or information regarding the alleged facts given above. Nevertheless, justice demands that I should inform your Excellency that the declarations of the press correctly express the point of view of the United

100 ITALIANS TAKEN IN ANARCHIST PLOT

Federal Agents in Northwest Charge a World-Wide Pro-Teuton Conspiracy.

PRESIDENT'S LIFE SOUGHT

200,000 in a Secret Society Alleged to Have Planned to Foment Uprisings.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 27.—More than 100 Italians, most of them miners and shipyard employes, said to belong to the Corcola Studi Sociali, an alleged anarchistic society, were arrested in Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Tacoma, and other Northwest cities by Federal agents in raids which ended today, according to announcement by H. M. White, Federal Immigration Commissioner.

The society is said to have a membership of 200,000 in the United States and is alleged to have plotted bloody disturbances in this country as part of the world-wide propaganda for Teutonic victory in the war. The ruining of the morale of the Italian armies also was planned.

According to Federal agents, the Italians plotted to help Germany in the war by fomenting revolution in Italy to overthrow King Victor Emmanuel. Federal officers in disguise, it was announced, attended some of the society's recent meetings, at which calls were issued for volunteers to cause disturbances in this country. It is alleged that some of the prisoners had plotted to kill President Wilson.

The roundup was carried through to a finish by thirty-five Secret Service and other Federal agents working quietly in the Northwest, particularly among the mines and shipyards of the Puget Sound country. The first arrests were made Saturday night when several meetings had been planned and others were being held in attics and basements known only to "faithful" members of the society, whose books show members from all parts of the Pacific Northwest.

Plot to Kill President.

It was two weeks ago that a plot to murder President Wilson was being hatched, where Secret Service men in disguise attended a meeting of the society.

The books and literature seized here and at other places, including Spokane, Portland, and Tacoma, show that the plotting has been going on for some months, and has been especially active since the Austro-German drive on the Italian front. The literature which has been sent broadcast from this city, the headquarters of the conspirators, asked for volunteers to carry out the plans to kill President Wilson and King Victor.

The Federal Immigration Inspector at Spokane, Wash., received word to arrest six Italians said to belong to an anarchist society, and today reported that he had arrested one at Walla Walla and another at Lind, and that four others would be arrested at or near Spokane.

Officials plan to gather all the prisoners together in one camp, where they probably will be interned for the duration of the war. Nineteen Italians arrested in the raid in Cleelum, Roslyn, and Easton, in Kittitas County, Washington, were brought here today in a special car and lodged in cells at the Federal Immigration Station. Fifteen armed Government agents accompanied the prisoners.

Incited Italians to Revolt.

Pamphlets entitled "Buttale il Fucile" were among the papers Federal agents said they seized at the society's headquarters here. According to the officers, the title, when translated, means "Throw down your arms." The propaganda, it was said, urged Italians everywhere to rise against their Governments and resist all military service. The officers said the literature was printed by the society's newspaper, Cronaca Sowersiva of Lynn, Mass.

Federal officials recently raided rooms in Weir street here, which are said to be the Pacific Coast headquarters of the society. Industrial Workers of the World posters, red flags, and pictures of notorious anarchists hung on the walls, they said.

In a glass case near the door, officers said, they found framed photographs of some of the Industrial Workers of the World killed in a riot at Everett, Wash., Nov. 5, 1916.

Berlin Says Americans Fought Desperately; Calls Prisoners 'Sturdy and Sportsmanlike'

BERLIN, Sunday, Nov. 25, (via London, Nov. 27.)—A report received from the western front, describing the American troops in action, says:

"Independent American units have been thrown into the trench line. The felt hat has given way to the English-fashioned steel helmet, and the whistling and bursting of the shells have become familiar sounds to American ears.

"For the first time since they have been participating as independent contingents the Americans have tasted the real earnestness of war, even though it was but a minor hand-to-hand scuffle. But this time the shells did not merely fly over their heads, but into the very trenches they had selected, and presently, with an infernal noise, these things which the young soldiers believed to be a firm protection began to quake and burst.

"And hard on the heels of this a firm attack by our onrushing Bavarian reserves forced the way into the American trenches, and musket shots and bursting hand grenades relieved the artillery fire.

"Our new opponents made a most determined defense, and desperate hand-to-hand fighting set in. Fists, and hand grenades were freely brought into play, and many men fell to the ground before the rest gave up resistance and surrendered. After a bare hour the German storming troops were back in their own trenches with booty and prisoners.

"There they stood before us—these young men from the land of liberty. They were sturdy and sportsmanlike in build. Good-natured smiles radiated from their blue eyes, and they were quite surprised that we did not propose to shoot them down, as they had been led in the French training camp to believe we would do.

"And in reply to no reply to our query, 'Why does the United States carry on war against Germany?' The sinking of American ships by U-boats, which was the favorite pretext, sounds a trifle stale. One prisoner expressed the opinion that we had treated Belgium rather badly. Another asserted that it was Lafayette who brought America French aid in the war of independence, and because of this the United States would now stand by France."

GERMAN THREAT TO SEIZE DENMARK IF NORWAY LETS ALLIES GET A BASE; BRITISH RETAKE PART OF FONTAINE

BERLIN FEARS ANOTHER FOE

Inspired Christiania Conference, Hoping to Keep Scandinavia Neutral.

THREE MONARCHS TO MEET

Danish Belief Is That Norway's U-Boat Grievances Will Not Drive Her to War.

HOPES TO COMBAT EMBARGO

Germany's Plan Evidently to Frighten Northern Kingdoms Into Ignoring Our Demands.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 27.—Behind the meeting of the Scandinavian monarchs and Ministers at Christiania this week lies the fear, unfounded though it may be, of Norway's entry into the war and of the German threat that, in such a case, she would feel called upon to occupy Denmark as a countermeasure.

The Associated Press learns from a responsible source that the proceedings of the conference, which was arranged in consequence of an intimation from Germany that the growth of anti-German sentiment in Norway, particularly after the sinking of convoys in the North Sea by German cruisers, are being followed with concern by Germany, and that it is feared that Norway may be impelled, either by excited public opinion or pressure from the Allies, to enter the struggle at least to the point of granting a naval base to England and the United States, in which event Germany would hold it imperative to seize a corresponding base in Deamark.

Hurried to Berlin.

On the receipt of this information at Copenhagen word was hurriedly sent to King Gustaf of Sweden, and Denmark's most prominent citizen, President Andersen of the Danish East Asiatic Company, who is high in the confidence of Berlin, as well as London, was dispatched to Berlin to verify the report and, if possible, to change the German attitude.

Mr. Andersen conferred with Dr. van Kühlmann, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and the former has confirmed the report, adding that, in consequence of the Italian and Russian developments, the militarist and Pan German elements are again in the saddle in Germany and exerting influence against which the Foreign Office, with its more moderate views, has found it most difficult to contend.

King Gustaf came to Copenhagen and spent a day in conference with King Christian, President Anderson, and the Danish Ministers, the subject matter of the conferences being covered by a display of gala performances, an opera ballet, a ceremonial banquet, and the conventional interchange of speeches.

As a result of the conference a decision was reached to make every possible effort to moderate the excited Norwegian sentiment and hold the three Scandinavian kingdoms to the path of joint neutrality.

King Gustaf returned to Stockholm and launched the suggestion of a conference of the three Kings, accompanied by the Premiers and Foreign Ministers, at Christiania, which was accepted, the Norwegians being flattered at the idea of a visit from a Swedish monarch for the first time since the separation of the two countries.

Part of Pan German Policy.

It is difficult to judge how far Germany was actuated in its step by genuine fear of Norwegian action, and how far by a desire to force Norway into toning down its strongly anti-German sentiment, and to wave the "big stick" over the three countries during the pending negotiations with the United States and the Entente regarding the embargo, and thereby get as good a bargain as possible for Germany.

On the one hand, a Dane in high position with whom the correspondent discussed the subject considered it utterly out of the question that Norway, of her own accord, should abandon neutrality, and said he attached no importance to the sporadic reports of an intention on the part of England or America to seize a base in Norway the better to combat submarines. Prominent Norwegians assert that war sentiment in their country is negligible. The same view has been expressed in statements in the Norwegian Parliament, probably inspired by the German warning.

Berlin Has Fears of Norway.

On the other hand, Germany is evidently perturbed by the state of Norwegian public opinion. The German Minister to Norway, Admiral von Hintze, who, it is reported, had been sent to that country as the apostle of the strong hand, has been visiting Berlin to report on the situation. A Danish member of the German Reichstag has just visited Norway on what may undoubtedly be described as a pacifying mission, and a mass of inspired editorial matter is being telegraphed from the German press by the correspondents in Berlin in an endeavor to convince Norwegians of the unwisdom of extreme anti-German feeling and of the benevolence of German intentions as respects them.

Many Peace Demonstrations in Berlin Sunday; Vorwaerts Wishes for Them in Allied Capitals

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27.—Vorwärts reports numerous peace demonstrations in Berlin on Sunday. Especially in the northern part of the city did they assume considerable proportions.

In going through the streets the demonstrators called for cheers for peace, and the name of Karl Liebknecht was loudly applauded. At one point there was a struggle with the police, and several arrests were made.

The German Socialist organ says that the police authorities ought not to regard such gatherings as dangerous, "because the whole people are at one with the demonstrators in their aim of bringing about peace and because this effort calls forth no serious opposition throughout the country." Vorwärts wishes that such demonstrations would take place in Paris and London, for then "we would not be far from peace."

PREMIERS GATHER FOR PARIS COUNCIL

Plan Direct and Businesslike Discussion of War Unity Problems.

BRITISH OFFICIALS ARRIVE

Sonnino and Venizelos Also There for Meeting—House Holds Conferences.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The clans are assembling rather slowly for the inter-allied meetings. The English delegates were delayed by the weather, which interfered with the Channel crossings.

It is understood that an effort is being made to cut out oratory in the conference and get right down to business.

One of the Premiers is expected to open the proceedings with a statement in one sentence, to the effect that "we are here to transact war business; what is the pleasure of the meeting?" This brief opening will strike the keynote of short, sharp, decisive methods.

The members of the American mission are less busy here than they were in London owing to the fact that much detail of the relationship of the French Government has been disposed of by the Tardieu mission in Washington and the special representatives who met the mission in London. There remain considerable negotiations with Spain and Switzerland, which are now proceeding here.

Ambassador Willard, who left Madrid a few weeks ago on his doctor's orders for rest, is here, very opportunely, to help the mission.

One of the biggest obstacles in the way of reducing unity of control to the concrete is national pride, and it is on this rock that any effort to have a single military head may split. As a member of the mission put it: "There is an irreducible minimum of indestructible individualism in every country, and no mere academic principle, however sound, can be carried too far in face of this condition."

The more closely the scheme of a Supreme War Council is studied, the more shrewdly it seems to have been contrived to avoid the obstacle mentioned, and still reach the goal of unity. The Supreme War Council practically consolidates in one group the civil power of the European allies, thus fixing the gravamen for the various national war authorities. It is probable that the decision of all large inter-allied policy will naturally gravitate toward the Supreme War Council. While this body would not concern itself with the strategy on any single front, it might settle all overlapping questions.

For example, the matter of whether and how to help Cadorna, which hung on the horns of indecision all Summer and Autumn, could have been promptly settled if the Supreme War Council had existed. It is also fair to assume that the council could and would have supported efficient measures for steadying Russia at the time when Kerensky made and broke his agreement with Korniloff, the carrying out of which might have composed the Russian situation on a basis of a temporary military dictatorship, and thus prevented the subsequent catastrophes.

All these possibilities are discussed among Americans and others now in Paris as fortifying the argument for maintaining a Supreme War Council and allowing it the fullest power in action.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The members of the Interallied Conference, which is to open its sessions here on Thursday, are beginning to gather.

Premier Lloyd George arrived tonight accompanied by Foreign Secretary Balfour. Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty; Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, Chief of the Naval Staff; Earl Reading, the Lord Chief Justice, and General Sir William Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff at British Army Headquarters. They were met at the station by Premier Clemenceau, former Premier Painlevé, and Stephen Pichon, French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Lloyd George has a suite of rooms across the corridor from the apartment occupied by Colonel House. Premier

ITALIANS SHATTER BRENTA ATTACK

Reinforcements Drive Back an Entire Teuton Division and Take Prisoners.

HOLDING HILL POSITIONS

Fourth Italian Army Repulses Five Assaults on Its Lines Near Monte Pertica.

ROME, Nov. 27.—An entire division of the enemy made an attack yesterday in the Branta Valley in an effort to break through the Italian northern front. Today's official statement says that these troops, which attacked in massed formation, were driven back.

The text of the announcement follows:

Yesterday afternoon the enemy, after bombarding furiously our positions on Col della Berretta, to the east of the Brenta Valley, launched against it a massed attack of an entire division of infantry. The ensuing struggle was very fierce, and the defenders, isolated by a violent barrage fire, would perhaps have been compelled to give way, in view of the size of the attacking force and the violence of its assault, had not their support, composed of splendid Sicilians of the ancient and glorious Aosta Brigade, with parties of the 94th Infantry and the Brenta Valley battalion of Alpini, arrived in time.

Having crossed the death zone with élan, our gallant troops rushed against the enemy with irresistible impetus, carrying all before them and compelling him to retire with very severe losses, leaving prisoners in our hands.

BERLIN, Nov. 27, (via London.)—The situation on the Italian front is unchanged, Army Headquarters announces.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 27, (Associated Press.)—The reports from the Italian line on the northern front were favorable today. The heavy fighting is continuing, with the Italians holding in the main.

Five Austro-German Attacks Fail.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 26, (Delayed.)—(Associated Press.)—Five determined attacks by Austro-German forces on the left wing of the Italian Fourth Army, near Monte Pertica, between the Brenta and the Piave, were delivered today. The enemy rushes were broken by the defensive troops with heavy losses to the attackers.

Not only the left but the right wing and the centre of the army holding this sector were subjected to attack, the enemy effort now attaining its full force here. On the right and the centre the struggle raged from Monte Monfenera westward, with the Italians holding their lines at all points.

The fluctuations of the great battle have now developed to a stage where the resisting power of the Italian army has been demonstrated to be sufficient to retard, if not to prevent any sudden rush through the passes leading to the Venetian plains. This was regarded as a serious menace six days ago, but as each day has shown the Italian lines holding solid against repeated attacks and their defenders ready even to take the aggressive against heavy odds, the feeling of apprehension that then prevailed is changing to one of restored confidence and unwavering determination, coupled with a spirit of buoyancy which pervades all ranks of the army and civilian life.

There is also the feeling that allied support is near at a timely moment, and that the mingled ranks of gray, blue and khaki will combine to offer the resistance that Italy has maintained alone until now.

Many British officers were at headquarters today, and the streets showed almost as much khaki as gray. The Prince of Wales renewed his earlier visit, going about the streets and mingling with the officers at public restaurants in the most democratic fashion.

It is reported from the Friuli region occupied by the enemy that the civil population has been required to turn over all copper articles, grease and oils in its possession within five days. Emperor Charles is said to have made

Byng's Men Advance Both Their Fontaine and Bourlon Lines.

CAPTURE MORE THAN 500

Daring Drive Rescues English Troops Isolated in the Thick of the Conflict.

GERMANS ARE REINFORCED

Attempt to Restore the Hindenburg Line West of Moeuvres Fails.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 27, (Associated Press.)—The British have made another advance in the Cambrai area, and, according to the latest reports, have worked their way forward though the northwestern part of Fontaine Notre Dame, which they captured at the beginning of the attack last week, but subsequently lost.

They are now said to have advanced almost to the main street, which runs east and west through the centre of the village, and are pressing their attack in the face of strong resistance.

A new assault was made at Fontaine at dawn after a comparatively quiet night. Hot fighting developed immediately. The Germans poured a heavy machine gun fire against the British from the windows and roofs of buildings. A large concentration of enemy machine guns in La Folie Wood, southeast of Fontaine, was also brought into action against the attacking troops. This machine gun fire presented the main difficulty to the advance, for the Germans in the hamlet were working behind walls and other cover, while it was necessary for the British to charge across more or less open stretches, giving the Germans a good chance to sweep their ranks with an intense fire.

British Rescue Isolated Comrades.

The battle on the southern edge of Bourlon Village continued last night. As a result of a determined drive against the German line the British were enabled to break through at one point and bring back a party of English troops that had been holding out in the southern part of the hamlet and had been isolated for some time. No attempt was made to remain in the village after this body of men had been rescued and gotten back through the gap in the German line.

It was reported this morning that another body of British troops was holding a position in the northern section of the village with Germans all about them. But this is uncertain.

The Germans delivered a counterattack against the northeast corner of Bourlon Wood about 10 o'clock last night, but were repulsed. The British line this morning is holding firm along the northern fringe of the wood and up to the edge of Bourlon Village.

Outside of the operations about Fontaine and Bourlon, there was little infantry action on the rest of the front last night. The British artillery has been hammering the Germans heavily at various points, and during the night projected a considerable quantity of gas into Queant.

The weather changed late yesterday and heavy storms set in. It rained torrents most of the night, and for a time this turned to snow, small patches of which are still to be seen about the countryside. The rain continued today, making the position of the troops operating in the new territory most uncomfortable.

The air service was active yesterday. A party of British machines destroyed one enemy machine and brought down two others out of control in a fight.

Haig Reports Advancing His Line.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Field Marshal Haig reports an advance of the British line in the neighborhood of Fontaine Notre Dame and Bourlon and the capture of more than 500 prisoners. The official statement tonight says:

At dawn today our local attacks in the neighborhood of the villages of Fontaine Notre Dame and Bourlon led to severe fighting. The enemy, strongly reinforced, contested our advance with great stubbornness, and the fight swayed backward and forward during the day.

We have advanced our line and taken over 500 prisoners.

During the afternoon the enemy attempted to attack the position we hold in the Hindenburg line on the spur west of Moeuvres, but was driven off by our fire.

The enemy's artillery has again shown great activity east and northeast of Ypres.

The afternoon official statement reads: During the night the Germans undertook another counterattack against our position in the northeast corner of Bourlon Wood. The attack was repulsed.

There is nothing of special interest to report on the remainder of the front. The weather is stormy and wet.

The Belgian communication issued at Havre says:

During the course of yesterday we bombarded various German works in the region of Dixmude. The German artillery has for the most part directed its fire against our organizations at Steenstraete and Dixmude. In reprisal for the enemy bombardment near Furnes and Avecapelle we shelled St. Pierre Capelle and encampments at Leke.

The night of Sept. 26-27 was marked by great activity. Enemy patrols near Kippe, south of Dixmude, were driven back by our fire.

South of Stuyvekenskerke an encounter took place between one of our patrols and an enemy patrol, the latter being forced to retire with considerable losses.

Today our works south of Stuyvekenskerke, around Pervyse, Caeskerke, Dixmude, Oestkerke and Kippe were bombarded. Our batteries replied energetically against the German trenches.

BERLIN, Nov. 27, (via London.)—The repulse of a British attack on Bourlon Wood and Village, in the Cambrai area, is announced in today's official communication from Army Headquarters.

The text of the communication reads:

Western theatre, front of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders the artillery activity again assumed great violence in the afternoon between Houthoist Wood and Zandvoorde.

In some sectors of the battlefield southwest of Cambrai there was an intense firing duel throughout the day. British infantry, which had been drawn up ready, attacked in the evening under the cover of darkness the village and wood of Bourlon, but were repulsed in heavy hand-to-hand fighting. Forefield activity continued lively on the whole battlefront.

FRENCH ROUND OUT GAINS.

Complete the Possession of Verdun Field Won on Sunday.

PARIS, Nov. 27. — The French last night overcame the resistance of Germans still holding out on the field of operations of the French attack on the Verdun front Sunday, says today's official report. Prisoners were taken in raids elsewhere on the battle line. The communication follows:

Active artillery fighting is under way north of the Aisne, in the sector between Filain and Pinon.

In Champagne one of our detachments last night penetrated German trenches north of Prunay. After having explored the positions, destroyed shelters, and captured materials our men returned to their own lines without losses. This morning we made a successful raid west of Tahure.

On the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) we carried out with success last night an operation in detail north of Hill 344. We reduced a point of resistance, rounding out the gains obtained on Sunday afternoon. On the left bank of the river a patrol action near Bethincourt enabled us to take prisoners, including an officer.

In Lorraine, northeast of Nomeny, we made a raid and brought back prisoners.

The communication from the War Office tonight reads:

Quite spirited artillery actions occurred in Belgium, in the region of Juvincourt and on the front of the Chaume Wood. There was no infantry action.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—The official statement issued at Army Headquarters today says of the fighting on the French front:

Front of the German Crown Prince.—North of Prunay a French attack was repulsed as a result of trench fighting. On the eastern bank of the Meuse the fighting activity was moderate throughout the day. In the evening there was a considerable increase in the fighting between Samogneux and Beaumont. Between St. Mihiel and Pont-à-Mousson the firing at times revived.

FIERCE HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTS.

Struggle Before Cambrai Inspires American Officers' Ardor.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Monday, Nov. 26, (Associated Press.)—British troops, including some from London, continued last night to bore their way forward through the Hindenburg support line west of Moeuvres. There was vigorous fighting at close quarters in this region, and, as a result, the British today were in possession of a further section of support trenches 2,000 yards long running east and west, just south of Pronville and Inchy-en-Artois.

The British advance to the last few days had made this section of the line virtually untenable, and the Germans were forced to withdraw when pressed by a new attack.

Fighting was renewed today between Bourlon Wood and Cambrai about Fontaine Notre Dame, where the Germans were still installed and continued to work machine guns from roofs and windows. At Bourlon Wood and Bourlon Village the situation remained much as it was last night after the Germans had forced the British out of most of the village in a fierce counterattack which involved still more furious hand-to-hand fighting through the streets. The battle continued here today.

The fight for Bourlon Wood and village will long be remembered as one of the most bitterly contested and sanguinary yet fought along the British front in France. American officers visiting the Cambrai sector have been thrilled at this renewal of old-type warfare, and with one accord say:

"That's the kind of fighting American troops would like to be in, for you are in the open, where you can get at the enemy with cold steel."

The Germans have been concentrating all efforts in the attempt to oust the British from this elevation, which is vital for the enemy to hold if he is to maintain himself in the present positions further north.

The British have clung tenaciously to Bourlon Wood, defended partly by tanks, which have taken positions at advantageous locations from which they can work their guns. Fontaine Notre Dame was being hard pressed by the British at latest reports. Throughout yesterday this hamlet remained unmolested, for it in no way hampered the operations about Bourlon Wood.

In a certain British casualty clearing station on the Cambrai front there has been working for several days a well-known New York surgeon, who belongs to the American Medical Corps and who volunteered his services for the present battle. Most of his work has been done among the German prisoners, who have come to look upon this big, cheerful officer as almost superhuman because of several remarkable operations he has performed. The Germans all swear by the "big American" and treat him with utmost deference.

It fell to the lot of this surgeon to operate upon a German who had left the Russian front only thirty-six hours before. He was among the reinforcements rushed from the east. It took him twenty-four hours to get into the battle before Cambrai and twelve hours later he was a prisoner in a British clearing station.

CAMBRAI RAILROAD BOMBED.

British Airmen Also Raid Douai Station at Night.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The official communication issued this evening dealing with aviation, says:

The weather Monday was slightly better for flying, but low clouds and a strong wind again hindered work in the air. Some successful artillery work was done by our airplanes and many photographs were taken.

Enemy troops, batteries, and transports were constantly attacked by our low-flying machines. During the day bombs were dropped on the crossings over the River Sensee and the railheads near Cambrai and north of Douai. At night the Douai Station was attacked. Bombs also were dropped on the Souain Station and aldings. In all, over three tons of bombs were dropped.

A few fights in the air occurred in which one hostile machine was downed and four were driven down out of control. Another hostile machine was shot down by our fire from the ground. None of our machines is missing.

Succeeds Judge of Bolo Notoriety.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Paul André has been appointed by the Government to replace Fernand Monier as First President of the Court of Appeals in Paris. Monier was recently dismissed from office because of his connection with the Bolo case.

BRITISH HAMMERING TO GO ON STEADILY

Midwinter Campaign on West Front Is Expected to Set New Precedent.

BYNG IN CIRCLING MOVE

If Present Operations Succeed Germans May Be Forced to Retreat on a Large Front.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The British drive on Cambrai will be followed up relentlessly by similar offensives along the western front, in the opinion of officers familiar with what is in prospect in France. Authoritative announcement has been made abroad already that this Winter would see no halt in operations, and with the return of American divisional commanders from observation tours in France it has become certain that the French and British armies will prosecute midwinter campaigns such as were never before attempted.

Secretary Baker said today that the returning officers would proceed to their divisional camps and resume the personal direction of the training of their men. So far as known, there will be no general conference of the officers here, but it is likely that they will call on Mr. Baker and General Staff officials while on the way to their posts.

Already the allied troops have forced their way forward against more serious obstacles than they will encounter later when the cold has hardened the ground for the passage of troops and artillery. The mud of Flanders has been the greatest barrier to major operations during the last few weeks, but the Cambrai attack was forced home despite it.

Meagre official reports of the progress of the drive on Cambrai indicate clearly that General Byng's forces are aiming at a great encircling movement. With a wide wedge driven into the Cambrai front, the British commander apparently is working his way behind the German lines on his left flank. If he succeeds in penetrating deeply in that direction many officers here believe he will force a retirement by the Germans on a wide front.

Meanwhile the British and French pressure further toward the Belgian coast is unceasing. A new offensive effort there is expected as a part of the whole plan on which the Allies are engaged of forcing the Germans back from a long section of the coast, where submarine bases are situated. The Cambrai successes have an important bearing, in the opinion of officers here, on this general plan of accomplishing during the Winter a decisive result in the coastal region as the foundation upon which next year's offensive campaign can be laid.

POPE'S APPEAL FAILS.

Baron de la Grange Remains in a German Prison in Spite of It.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—After Pope Benedict, at the request of Cardinal Gibbons, had made intercession with the German officials, word came here today that Baron Louis de la Grange, whose wife was Miss Anita Carroll, daughter of the former Governor of Maryland, John Lee Carroll, would not be released from a detention camp, where he has been for some time. The German officials announced that for military reasons the Baron, who is over 60 and said to be in feeble health, must remain a prisoner indefinitely.

Cardinal Gibbons, who is a close friend of the Carroll family, made the appeal to the Pope. Cablegrams have passed between the Pope, the Cardinal, and the German Foreign Office, but the Cardinal said tonight that his efforts appeared fruitless.

In another German prison camp is Bertrand Kergolay, son of Countess Jean Kergolay of Paris, who was Miss Louisa Carroll, sister of Baroness de la Grange.

AMERICAN AMBITION BLAMED FOR THE WAR

German Paper Says Wilson Seeks World Leadership and People Covet Trade.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 27.—The German press continues in the field of editorial exploration as to why America declared war. Every organ brings some new discovery. The Catholic-Annexationist Cologne Volkszeitung says that any one who knows President Wilson and his vanity realizes that his reasons were personal, and that when future world history is written he aspires to figure as the great man of insight, energy, and power, who brought the war to a happy ending.

"He wishes to be President of the supreme court of the world and judge of the highest court of justice and humanity," says this paper.

The Volkszeitung comments on the statement that "America now is to be an official Entente ally" and is to send representatives to the coming Paris conference, saying that up to the present time America has been unwilling to become involved in European politics and so has declined to take part in conferences, but that Wilson is now advocating a less independent attitude in order to assume a more important rôle in the peace negotiations. Washington, says the paper, has decided to become a more demonstrative ally of the Entente.

It asserts that President Wilson once stated in an unguarded moment that England and America must share the world's commerce, and that "this is another of Uncle Sam's war aims, even if he talks of freedom." America, says the Volkszeitung, would never have entered the war if she had not already lent so much money and if she did not regard the war as big business.

The paper quotes the American banker, Henry Clews, as saying that the war would bring tremendous prosperity to American industry, which otherwise would require a century to build up, that she would become the second greatest world power and that every conceivable industry would be swamped with orders for Europe. This may be correct, says the Volkszeitung, but there is no reason why America shouiud have all the benefit, for the same thing would apply in other countries and in Germany trades and industries would likewise be busuyu, although the lack of workmen would be felt much more in Europe than America so that high wages would be required.

Mr. Clews's statement about America's tremendous development in foreign trade and shipping is correct, the Volkszeitung says. It continues:

"From now on America may be considered a seafaring nation. Before the war shipping was in European hands, and this weakness was long a thorn to American national pride, but the United States will now compare with England as a sea power."

The paper asserts that Americans are too good business men not to rejoice over the war, and that if they pray for peace on Sundays they work in munition factories all the week for the Entente, and they are now dreaming of untold wealth after whe war, though hiding their joy behind the idea that they are bringing peace on earth.

RUSSIAN LEADERS OPPOSE RADICALS

States of America. We daily expect to receive instructions in line with these facts. Before sending this I submitted it to the Ambassador, who fully agrees."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Official confirmation of the news from London that German Staff officers are in Petrograd acting as military advisers of the Lenine faction probably will be followed promptly by action on the part of the United States and the Allies definitely to place the Bolsheviki régime in the list of Germany's allies.

If the Germans are there all doubt as to the purpose of the Bolsheviki is removed, and the diplomats will be obliged to withdraw to a neutral capital, probably Stockholm, to await instructions from their Governments. Such a development undoubtedly would be followed by immediate cancellation of all orders now in process of execution for military and other supplies for Russia both in the United States and Japan. Several cargoes from the United States are now on the way to Vladivostok, but these can be diverted by wireless orders, and it has been understood that their delivery would be contingent upon evidence that they would not fall into unfriendly hands.

Reports that come from the Don Cossack county that the Hetman, General Kaledines, may be the master of the situation through his control of the food which is necessary to maintain any military force in the North of Russia, have encouraged military experts here to believe that in spite of the aid of his German advisers, Lenine and his faction may be brought to terms.

The Viennese reports crediting General Dukhonin, the Russian Commander in Chief, previously reported to have been deposed by the Bolsheviki, with having received a communication from the Entente Powers threatening grave dangers if Russia should make separate peace with Germany are accepted in Washington with a large grain of salt. It is believed to be part of the German game of propaganda being played for purpose of throwing dust in the eyes of the outside world and stirring up trouble in Russia against the Allies. Officials of the Washington Government have insisted during the past week that there was no foundation for the report that this country was cutting off Russian supplies.

From private conversations in Russian circles here it is gathered that Russian diplomats feel that the withdrawal of the allied, or of American, diplomatic officers from Petrograd or the treatment of Russia, while in the grasp of the Bolsheviki, as a semi-hostile country, might tend to drive Russia into the hands of the enemy, whereas statesmanship, guided by forbearance and sympathetic consideration, might ultimately result in saving Russia not only from her enemies in Berlin and Vienna, but also from her present internal political perils and restore Russia to her proper place in the Entente Alliance.

MOVE AGAINST BOLSHEVIKI.

Committee of Safety Socialists Appeals to the Army.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAPARANDA, Sweden, Nov. 27.—A counterproclamation to the army has been made in reply to the Bolshevist peace decree by the non-Bolshevist Socialists and Moderates of the Committee of Safety. The proclamation states that the step taken by the Bolsheviki means the definite destruction of Russia. The Bolshevist Government is recognized by no allied State nor by Germany. When the Bolsheviki, however, have brought about a truce with the German Generals the Allies, it says, will regard Russia as a traitor and will refuse help and support after the war.

This, the proclamation goes on, will rapidly weaken Russia, which has not an effective army or money or food, with the result that it will fall an easy prey to those who intend to plunder and divide it. Repudiated in every quarter, Russia will have to pray the Kaiser on its knees for peace, and pay in territory and money whatever he claims.

According to the Novaya Zhiza, Lenine and Trotzky sent letters to all army organizations and revolutionary committees at the front pointing out that Admiral Verkhovsky, M. Auksentieff or Tchernoff, M Tseretelli and others had been summoned to the headquarters of the ex-Commander in Chief for the purpose of forming a new Government. Lenine and Trotzky appeal to the army committees to arrest these "enemies of the people" if they refuse to leave military headquarters.

NORTH CUT OFF FROM SOUTH.

Official Messages Reaching Odessa by Way of Persia.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—All communication has been broken between North and South Russia. The Foreign Embassies at Petrograd are unable to establish any touch with Odessa and other points in Southern Russia. Official messages, however, are reaching Odessa by way of Persia.

The Russian Army on the northern front has had no bread for several days, according to reports received in Petrograd and transmitted by the correspondent of The Daily Express, and only two or three days' supply of army biscuit is on hand. The army delegates are reported to have recommended the withdrawal of the troops in order to prevent a general flight with its consequent excesses. Instead of a hundred cars of food arriving daily at the Dvinsk front, only twenty have been received.

Large numbers of troops being moved to different places have been stopped by the removal of sections of railroad track to prevent their reaching Petrograd. They were stopped at towns where food could not be obtained.

The Russian revolutionists have made a "ghastly failure" of their attempt at administration, according to the Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post, writing under date of Saturday. He adds:

"But behind or beyond all this apparently hopeless chaos, the forces which made Russia an empire are not idle, and those who know Russian history understand perfectly well how matters will end.

"Even as I write the situation is becoming clear. The elections to the Constituent Assembly will take place, but the Constituent Assembly will not meet with success. The Bolshevist movement, whatever that movement may really mean, already has damned the Constituent Assembly.

"Meantime I would call attention to the following facts:

"The vast gold reserve of the Russian Empire, which was removed from Petrograd to the Kremlin in 1913, was later carried still further into the interior. It is in safe hands.

"General Kaledines, Hetman of United Cossackdom, is in secure possession, with trustworthy and disciplined troops of all arms of all those regions of European Russia that produced a harvest this year, and is rapidly capturing those remaining territories upon which Russia relies for its daily bread.

"A vast union, under the name of the Southeastern Union has been formed. It includes the Don territory, a great part of Little Russia, the lower Volga provinces and Turkestan — the area which feeds all Russia. This union is extending and promises to cover the Siberian corn land.

"General Kaledines, holding the gold reserve and the bread supplies, is master of the situation and those he serves will accept dictation neither from Kerensky, Lenine, nor anybody else, least of all from Germany.

"The Allies may safely admit a bowing acquaintance with the curious individualities thrown up from the depths by internal disturbances, but for intimate friendship and future partnership they must look elsewhere, and in the meantime they must wait unconcernedly until their old friends reappear above the present turmoil."

The Council of People's Commissaries, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Petrograd dated Sunday, has declared a two months' moratorium from the day of the beginning of the recent revolt.

A decree issued by the council creates a special State Education Commission to replace the Ministry of Education. All schools are placed under the control of the municipalities.

The Petrograd authorities yesterday published a long list of employes of the Ministry of Finance who have been declared dismissed for failure to resume their posts. They include M. Shipoff, manager of the State Bank, which is still under control nominally of the old authority.

Efforts to force a resumption of work under a Commissioner failed. The final effort was made Saturday, when it was demanded that the employes of the bank and Ministry should line up for or against the Bolshevist Government. They all walked out.

MORE SECRET DOCUMENTS.

Show Germany Sought a Separate Peace with Russia and Japan.

PETROGRAD, Sunday, Nov. 25.—The Bolshevik Government continued today the publication of secret documents of the old Government. Among the documents printed today was a telegram from Sergius Sazonoff, former Foreign Minister, to the allied countries dealing with the efforts of Germany to make peace between Germany, Russia, and Japan through the German Embassy at Stockholm.

In reply to Germany, M. Sazonoff is quoted as having said that he advised the Japanese Ambassador that Russia was willing to listen to a peace proposal, provided the proposal was made to Russia, Great Britain, France, and Japan, in which event he would notify Italy, which then was not in the alliance.

Another telegram, sent by the Russian Ambassador at Rome Oct. 31, 1917, told of a desire of the Italians to have Russia make an attack on or a demonstration against the Austro-Germans to relieve the pressure on Italy.

WANTS FINLAND RESCUED.

Stockholm Paper Advises Swedish or Joint Scandinavian Intervention.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen quotes the Stockholm Aftenbladet as advising Swedish or Joint Scandinavian interference for the salvation of Finland, for humanitarian, rather than political reasons.

The Aftenbladet says Sweden has sufficient means to carry out intervention in the interest of culture and humanity and for the protection of Swedes and of Swedish property in Finland.

TROTZKY PRESENTS DEMAND ON BRITAIN

Calls for Release of "Heroes of Revolution" Under Arrest in England.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says that Leon Trotzky, Bolshevist Foreign Minister, has written to Sir George W. Buchanan, the British Ambassador, demanding the release of two Russian citizens—Chichirin and Petroff—under arrest in England, characterizing them as "stainless and self-sacrificing men of high ideals." He demands also the release of others under arrest.

Trotzky alleges that many Englishmen living in Russia are openly engaged in political activities with the counter-revolutionary Russian bourgeoisie, and adds:

"The revolutionary democracy cannot accept the position that worthy heroes of the Russian revolution languish in concentration camps in England while counter-revolutionary British citizens suffer no restraint in Russian revolutionary territory."

DEPLORES TATIANA STORY.

Russian Relief Association's Head Calls It Most Unfortunate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—In behalf of the Russian Civilian Relief Association, C. C. Calhoun, President of the organization, today disclaimed all responsibility for the published story that Tatiana Nicolaevna Romanoff, a daughter of the deposed Czar of Russia, had escaped from Siberia and would sing, dance, and write in this country for the benefit of the society.

The society, organized to gather funds for the relief of the civilian population in Russia, Mr. Calhoun declared, aimed to conduct its propaganda in a dignified manner, and he considered such an appearance of the former Grand Duchess as most improbable and publication of such a story as most unfortunate.

The story of her escape through a mock marriage, accredited to Ivan Narodny, one of the members of the New York office of the society, now is regarded by most Russians in the United States and many others as somebody's idea of a practical joke.

CHECK AUSTRIANS IN ALBANIA.

Italians Rout Assaults That Gained Initial Success.

ROME, Nov. 27.—Austrian troops made another attack on the Italian lines in Albania on Sunday, in which they scored an initial success, the War Office announced today. Regulars came to the assistance of the Albanian bands that had been driven back in the region southeast of Berat, and the Austrians were forced to retreat with heavy casualties.

The text of the statement follows:

In Albania on Sunday night the enemy forced a passage of the Osum River between Cipan and Kobkara, southeast of Berat, attacking our Albanian bands there. The prompt intervention of regular troops drove the enemy back with the infliction of heavy losses upon him.

Clemenceau will confer with Mr. Lloyd George tomorrow morning.

Premier Venizelos of Greece also arrived tonight. Admiral Sims is also here.

Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister, came this morning. The Italian Premier, Vittorio Orlando, Minister of the Treasury Francisco Nitti, Minister of Munitions Alfredo Dallolio, Minister of Transport Bianchi, and Aviation Commissioner Chiosa left Rome for Paris last night.

General Bliss and Admiral Benson, each accompanied by two members of his staff, motored to French Army Headquarters today. They were the guests at luncheon of General Pétain, the French Commander in Chief. Marquis de Chambrun, who was a member of the French mission to the United States, went with the party.

Colonel House and the other members of the American mission to the conference spent the day in conferences here.

Captain André Tardieu, High Commissioner to the United States; Etienne Clementel, Minister of Commerce, and Albert Thomas, former Minister of Munitions, called on Colonel House at his headquarters this afternoon. In the evening Colonel House was a dinner guest of William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador.

ITALIANS SHATTER BRENTA ATTACK

another visit to the invaded region, going to the coast cities of Grado and Monfalcone.

ITALIAN LOSSES ARE HEAVY.

Outnumbered 4 or 5 to 1, Mountain Troops Are Fighting Heroically.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 26, (Delayed,) (Associated Press.)—In the course of a trip of 100 miles today through the fighting zone in the north, The Associated Press correspondent met the Major General in command of the most exposed front between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, where the pressure has been greatest and the losses heaviest, and obtained from him details of the situation. As the General spoke a heavy cannonading resounded through his field headquarters, and he looked out upon a great stretch of the Brenta Valley, where the enemy was concentrating his forces in an effort to break through to Bassano and the Venetian Plains.

Staff officers and orderlies were arriving with reports from all vital points and hurrying off with orders for the manoeuvring of troops. It was a stirring scene, but the General paused long enough to give a good general idea of the situation, and details of the condition of the troops and the splendid fight they were making against heavy odds.

He estimated these odds at four or five to one; but even against such odds, he said, his men were fighting with a power of resistance, courage, and dash beyond all praise. Attacks were almost continuous at one point or another, but the Italians were always ready to respond, and had not only repulsed attacks, but driven the enemy back after a series of heroic charges.

The General summed up the physical conditions of the battle ground which made the struggle particularly trying to the troops. First, he said, there was that terrible strain and natural fatigue accompanying nights and days of ceaseless fighting with the relentless foe. Then there was the extreme cold, with the temperature at nights at about 14 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit. This extreme cold was made worse, he said, because the men were without any kind of shelter, everything having been swept away in the terrific artillery action, and the constant shifting of position.

There were no trenches or dugouts, and there was no water from unfailing sources, such as soldiers should have when going through such an ordeal. The troops were on the barren foothills, covered with rocks and stones. This ground was without habitation and the slightest natural facilities usually required by fighting troops.

After summing up the physical hardships, the General added that there was the still more serious condition of many commands being with very few officers, as the continuous fighting had told terribly on officers. As a result, new men were suddenly called upon to lead forces far exceeding those they had been accustomed to command, and sub-officers as well as junior officers were directing superior commands in many instances.

The General said that there had been fearful losses among the troops, which required a constant re-forming of companies, regiments, brigades, and divisions. But, with all these terrible conditions, the spirit of the men was unabated in the determination to hold at any cost.

The rumble of heavy artillery fire continued throughout the General's talk, while through a dense mist over the valley was seen a faint outline of the rising hills where one attack was following another in this fateful battle.

Enemy's Losses Enormous.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 26, (Delayed.)—It is now a month since the Austro-German offensive started, and more than a fortnight since the Italians checked the enemy on the Piave line. The whole campaign is made up of episodes of heroism too numerous to be catalogued. The battle still rages in the mountain region. One brigade fought for eight days together, stopping neither day nor night—all this in terrible cold, ten degrees below the freezing point, in a region covered with snow, where the soldiers are compelled to remain for a long time motionless, lest they be discovered against the whiteness of the snow, before they pounce in surprise attacks upon the enemy.

The Alpini and Bersaglieri who defend the strongholds on the Asiago Plateau are troops taken from the Carnia and Cadore fronts, where they have passed their lives in the mountains. They dig trenches in the solid rock during the battle, build shelters for the wounded, hide machine guns under ground and suffer hardships which are aggravated by the Winter season. A battalion of Alpini which were attacked by great enemy masses near Meletta di Gallio lost two-thirds of its effectives without yielding an inch of ground.

The enemy's losses are enormous. Three divisions on a front of ten miles, between San Marino and Fener, have been withdrawn because they were decimated.

One group of Alpini, fighting against Prussian Jägers, seeing one of their officers wounded by an explosive bullet, flung themselves furiously against the enemy, charging with the bayonet. The Germans tried to escape, but got entangled in barbed wire, where they were all caught and killed with the exception of one who fled crying: "I am an Alsatian!"

One of the Alpini after the battle remarked with satisfaction: "I have discovered that the Prussians are made of flesh and blood, like us."

Another division of Alpini charged over unprotected ground against opponents who were the best troops the Austro-Germans could muster, having been fighting in the Vosges, and drove them from their higher positions.

The sacrifices which they are undergoing have not for an instant shaken the determination of the Italian soldiers, who understand the momentous character of this mounting fighting.

Teutons Used Up Six Divisions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Semi-official advices from Rome received today indicated that the Italian Army had withstood successfully all attempts of the Austro-German forces to break the solidarity of the Italian line along the lower Piave and in the mountain sectors. According to this dispatch, the Italians have vigorously resisted and repulsed the enemy attacks and inflicted severe losses upon the invaders.

"Some enemy outposts," it says, "in the confusion of the struggle, fought among themselves. So the 31st Landsturm, during an action near Monte Tomba, fought from the evening until dawn against other Austro-German troops, which were decimated.

"From the Asiago Plateau to the Piave the enemy has suffered appalling losses without gaining any advantage. Between the Piave and the Brenta the enemy has already worn out six divisions."

The crew of the American steamship Actaeon was composed of fifty-eight men, including twenty-six American citizens and five naturalized Americans. Formerly the German steamship Adamsturm, of 5,000 tons, the Actaeon left New York early in October, carrying Government supplies for Bordeaux. It is believed she was on the return voyage when sunk. NOTED AMERICAN FLIER KILLED BY A HORSE

Paul Pavelka of Foreign Legion and Lafayette Squadron Dies Near Monastir.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Advices have been received here from Saloniki to the effect that Sergeant Paul Pavelka of the French Flying Squadron was killed recently by being thrown from a horse near Monastir. He was buried at Saloniki.

Pavelka was the first American fighter killed on the Macedonian front. His home was Madison, Conn. He enlisted in the Foreign Legion at the outbreak of the war but was transferred to the aviation branch in November, 1915. He served with the Lafayette Squadron before Verdun and in the Somme battle and later volunteered for service at Saloniki, where he was decorated with the War Cross for his bombing and fighting exploits.

MANY OF OUR SAILORS WON BRIDES IN IRELAND

Nearly a Hundred Said to Have Married Since the Flotillas Went Abroad.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD OF AN AMERICAN NAVAL BASE, Nov. 27.—Although I have no exact figures, I am told that the number of marriages among American sailors since their arrival here is very great and that in the flotillas stationed in Ireland the marriages now number nearly a hundred since they first made their headquarters here, about six months ago.

The Irish girls and the men of the American fleet get on very well together, and the smiling blue eyes of the Irish colleens capitivate the strangers. A large percentage of the American sailors are Irishmen, and they have married girls whom they knew before they went to the United States.

Uncle Sam is looking well after his sailor men and an ordinary day's menu on an American ship is good enough for a first-class hotel. When the fleet arrived here first, whole herds of cattle were bought up for their use and killed as required, but now the meat is brought direct from the United States. Of all the forces fighting in the world war the Americans are the best fed.

WOODS TELLS SECRET OF STEAMSHIP FIRES

Commissioner Says White Liquid Timed to Burst Into Flame Was the Cause.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—An innocent-looking white liquid, timed to burst into flame by the solution or weakness of the solution, has been the source of fires with which American shipping has been menaced ever since the war began, according to Arthur Woods, Police Commissioner of New York, who delivered an address here tonight on chemical warfare. Mr. Woods said, was the cause of ruinous fires aboard sugar ships at sea some months ago.

"For a long time," he said, "we couldn't find out how the inflammable material which caused these fires was put aboard ship. But we think we have it now—at least, no more ships are being burned."

STIRS ZEAL FOR COLONIES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 27.—Germany is trying to educate its people on the subject of colonies. With this end in view the Duke of Mecklenburg has just formed a new committee, with headquarters in Dresden, with the idea of awakening more enthusiasm for colonial politics.

The committee is to form a traveling exhibition of colonial products, to be sent all over Germany.

running a hardware store

Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Company of Chicago sell hardware wholesale to an immense number of stores. The company has systematically distributed among these, at its own expense, reprints of SYSTEM'S figures on safe expense for rent, salaries, delivery, heat and other retailing items. Mr. Macomber, the credit manager, says these reprints have benefited the hardware trade generally. In addition his company uses them constantly to educate storekeepers who fall behind in payments.

MARTIAL LAW RULES CITY'S WATERFRONT

First Detachment of Soldiers Ordered to Take Up Patrol Duty at Atlantic Piers.

MORE WILL FOLLOW SOON

Barbed-Wire Fences Will Be Erected at Barred Zones Today, and No Enemy Alien May Pass.

Coast artillerymen drawn from the fortifications on and near New York City, under command of Captain W. A. Heath, U. S. A., have been ordered to guard great Atlantic piers which are included in what is known as the Chelsea Docks, south of Twenty-third Street, and the Southern Pacific piers, in the Christopher Street section of the North River river front. These are the first Federal troops assigned to duty on the New York waterfront. Barbed-wire fences will be erected in front of these piers this morning, and from now on no person will be permitted in the reservation who fails to prove he has business there and is a loyal citizen or a friendly alien.

The artillerymen will probably go on duty today or tonight, the patrol beats in West Street being about ten feet beyond the pier entrances. Other piers will be taken over as speedily as possible, and soon every pier in the waterfront zone will be in charge of the army.

It is probable that troops will be ordered to duty today at the more important points, such as the Bush Terminal reservation, the India Wharves section, and certain of the South American docks in Brooklyn.

The decision to place barbed-wire fences in front of the more important piers was arrived at yesterday afternoon at a conference attended by Brig. Gen. Eli Hoyle, commanding the Eastern Department, on Governors Island; Chief Inspector James E. Dillon of the Police Department, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy, Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox, and representatives of the various transatlantic lines. Following this conference it was stated that, in addition to the soldiers who will be in charge outside the piers, police will continue on duty at the entrances.

In addition to the registration of all enemy aliens, resident in New York, which will probably begin the latter part of this week, it has been decided to make a census of all persons living in or doing business within the limits of the 100-yard zone. The taking of this census will probably begin within twenty-four hours and when it is completed the guard commanders will be given the names of all persons entitled to reside or do business in their section of the zone. All these persons will get identification cards which they must show on entering the zone.

Marshal McCarthy delivered to the police last night several thousand placards, to be posted on all buildings in the barred zones and at the foot of all crosstown streets at a point 100 yards from the waterfront. These cards are printed in English and German, and will be put in place today.

"All Germans, if they heed my advice," said Marshal McCarthy, "will strictly live up to the warning on the placards. When a German arrives at a point opposite one of these placards he had better execute an about face, for if he keeps on going it means his arrest and internment. The soldier guards will be on duty just outside the barbed wire, which will be stretched about twenty yards from the street car tracks, on the river side. It should be made plain that the Government intends to be absolutely just in this matter. The orders cannot possibly be misunderstood by any person who reads them."

As soon as the waterfront guard situation is cleared up the Federal authorities will arrange for the registration of enemy aliens throughout the city. This registration will probably be handled by the police, and will mean the grouping of enemy aliens by police precincts and the reporting by them at stipulated periods to the Police Captains.

Several hundred German subjects visited the Federal Building yesterday to find out what was the last day of grace, so far as the order to move out of the waterfront zones is concerned. They were informed that the orders were to move immediately, and that the period during which they are expected to get out of the zone ends at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. A delegation from the Gansevoort Market section called on the Marshal to plead for several Germans employed within the barred zone at that point.

"Who are these Germans!" the Marshal asked.

"They are Gansevoort Market butchers and we can't get along without them," the spokesman said.

"Well, if they are in the zone you will have to get along without them, and I hereby order you to direct them to move at once," replied the Marshal.

Another man, head of the company which does the largest business in hops in the United States, pleaded for several German employes. He finally gave in and said that he would move his business out of the zone. "I can't do business without those Teutons," he added.

Another request came from a woman who owns a restaurant on West Street and who employs a German cook. She said that her kitchen is exactly 264 feet from the pier, that the German cook enters the building from the rear, and that he could not see out of any door or window, and that she had a chalk line drawn on the floor beyond which he had been instructed not to pass. For him she asked special consideration, but was told that the rule could not be altered to suit her cook, and that if he went within 100 yards of any pier he would be arrested and interned.

So rigid have become the regulations that persons wishing to use public telephones within the restricted area are forbidden to enter unless they display identification cards, and the telephones on piers are forbidden to all who are not personally known to the watchmen on duty.

Special Inspectors and guards provided by the owners and leasees of piers were on duty on all piers in Brooklyn and Staten Island yesterday and will be continued until they are replaced by troops. In addition a policeman is assigned to duty on all of the more important piers. Inspectors and guards are also on duty on piers north of Seventy-second Street in the North River, and at certain of the piers in Yonkers. The same is true of all piers on the New Jersey shore.

TRIPLEX GLASS FOR WAR.

British Patents Acquired for Its Manufacture in This Country.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A group of New York financiers has acquired the patent rights for manufacturing a triplex safety glass for war purposes, including its use in automobile wind screens, ships port-lights, chart table tops, bridge screens, aviation goggles, airplane wind screens and observation panels.

W. J. Finlay, a member of the syndicate, who is at present in London, says that a factory is in course of construction in America for the manufacture of this glass, and that it will soon be in operation.

RECORD MEAT ORDER GIVEN.

Largest in World's History Placed with Packers in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—A group of about fifteen packers sat around a table in the food administration offices today. At its head was Joseph P. Cotton, Chief of the Government Meat Division. Before him was a long list specifying the meat needs of the Allies, the Red Cross, and the Belgian relief organizations. For about two hours the group conferred, and when the session broke up the greatest meat order in the history of the world had been placed.

A large order, covering meat for the American Aarmy, failed to arrive in time and will be divided later. The greater part of the meat will go forward early next year. Cured meats and lard make up no inconsiderable portion of the total.

FOOD BOARD NAMED TO EXPEDITE WORK

New Plan Worked Out by Hoover to Prevent Confusion in New York State.

MITCHELL NAMED CHAIRMAN

National Administrator Will Define Policies of the Body and Superintend Price Fixing.

In order to prevent further duplication of work and confusion between the State Food Commission, of which John Mitchell is the Chairman, and Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator of the National Food Administration, a Federal Food Board for New York State was created yesterday. The plan was worked out by Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Administrator. It was brought from Washington by his personal representative, F. C. Walcott, and accepted at a joint meeting of State and city food administrators.

The new Federal Food Board consists of five members, as follows: John Mitchell, Chairman; Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, and Charles A. Wieting, State Food Commissioners; Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator, and Charles E. Treman of Utica, Food Administrator for the State outside of New York City. Mr. Treman is a banker and a Trustee of Cornell University. He was Superintendent of Public Works under Governor Dix.

The agreement signed by the members of the new board states specifically that the National Food Administration and not the State will define policies and superintend the carrying out of the food conservation and price-fixing campaign. A statement given out after the meeting reads:

"The Food Administration at Washington must determine the broad national policies, but the administration of these policies must be carried out largely by organizations within the State." John Mitchell called the agreement a happy solution of the problem of conflicting authority.

Under the terms of agreement the general policy to be maintained during the war in food matters must be national and will be directed from Washington. Enforcement of regulations of retail distribution, including milk, will be directed by State authority, and while the Federal Board will have supervision, it will not interfere with the work of the Federal Milk Commission.

While it is recognized that at certain points Federal and State authority overlaps, it is understood that the State Commission possesses much wider authority over retailers, control of public selling places, established public markets, collection of information, control of transportation, established markets, the stimulation of production, and the purchase and sale of foods by the municipality.

The authority of the Federal Administration extends in the main to interstate transportation and distribution of food through the manufacturers, wholesale and commission men, which can only be administered from Washington. It was decided that the control of transportation and distribution, the regulation of manufacturers, wholesalers, storage and commission men, and enforcement of the law against hoarding, being in a large degree interstate trading, shall be under Federal direction.

State and Federal authorities will cooperate in investigating complaints. For expedition in administration, Mr. Williams is to act as the direct representative of Washington in New York City, and Mr. Treman outside of the city.

The board may be dissolved without notice by the National Food Administration.

Mr. Hoover will be in New York Monday to attend the first meeting of the new board.

While the Federal Board was being formed Henry Moskowitz, City Commissioner of Markets, was conferring with a committee of civic bodies appointed last week to organize a Citizens' Food Council for New York City. This committee will have organizations in all the election districts. Its objects, according to the commissioner, are:

That this Food Council is to act as the co-operating agency for all three commissions, the Federal Food Administration, State Food Commission, and Department of Public Markets.

To act as a Citizens' Food Agency for the three food administrations in connection with complaints. This council will have representatives in all parts of the city who can check up abuses in retail stores, send in complaints to the Commissioner of Markets, check up any complaints which the Commissioner may receive through other channels. The council will also exercise local influence in every part of the city in obtaining the enforcement of regulations.

To act as an organization for the distribution of literature on food matters for the food administrations and to organize meetings in local districts.

To promote wherever possible the co-operative movement, such as the organization of co-operative purchasing through co-operative stores and buying clubs.

To aid in the formulation of such a comprehensive market and food program for the city by the food administrations as will merit the support of public opinion.

To co-ordinate the work of all existing organizations to the end that duplication and overlapping in their respective activities may be eliminated.

The meeting of the Federal Milk Commission was abandoned for the day after the Commissioners had waited more than an hour for the milk producers to appear. Dr. W. H. Jordan, the Chairman, said the Commission would resume the inquiry Monday morning.

Cyrus C. Miller, Fuel Administrator for the Bronx, and Joseph A. Hall, Controller of Peddlers' Supplies, said yesterday that there is not much suffering in the city because of the scarcity of coal. Ninety per cent. of the cases investigated, Mr. Hall said, showed that the complainants have from two to three tons of coal in their cellars and wanted to get more because of a fear that prices might increase.

Mr. Miller said that the Fuel Administrator had obtained 20,000 tons of coal from barges moored in the harbor and of this amount 9,000 tons are going to Manhattan, 7,000 tons to Brooklyn, and 4,000 tons to the Bronx.

Patrick Jones, Superintendent of Supplies of the Board of Education, said that there was coal enough on hand to keep the schools running.

CALLS ON JEWS TO HELP.

Jacob H. Schiff Urges That $5,000,000 Be Raised for War Work.

Jacob H. Schiff, as General Chairman, has issued a circular from 500 Fifth Avenue calling attention to the joint campaign for the Jewish War Sufferers' Fund and the Jewish Board for Welfare Work in the United States Army and Navy, which will continue from Dec. 3 to Dec. 16. It is proposed to raise $5,000,000.

"It was deemed advisable to join these causes," Mr. Schiff says, "rather than have separate campaigns so that there be no waste of time and energy on the part of our splendid corps of workers.

"It is solely from a feeling of duty that in these serious times I must not avoid responsibilities that I have accepted the Chairmanship of the local campaign to obtain funds for both these worthy causes.

"We shall need the combined goodwill and the generosity of New York Jewry to be able to secure the $5,000,000 which we must raise before the end of the campaign.

"Become a soldier in the cause of humanity and start serving today by talking to your Jewish neighbors, to your fellow-workmen, to your business associates, to men with whom you buy and sell. Arouse them to a sense of their Jewish duty and you will have played no small part in this great work."

The Campaign Committee includes Charles L. Bernheimer, Edward C. Blum, Abram I. Elkus, Lee K. Frankel, Daniel Guggenheim, Justice Irving Lehman, Louis Marshall, Henry Morgenthau, Mortimer L. Schiff, Nathan Straus, Felix M. Warburg, Dr. Stephen Wise, Bernard M. Baruch, George Blumenthal, Joseph B. Greenhut, Adolph Lewisohn, James Speyer, Oscar S. Straus, and William J. Wollman.

NEW WAR COUNCIL TO UNIFY OUR WORK

Closer Co-ordination on Food, Fuel, Finance, and Shipping Provided in Washington.

SIX OF CABINET INCLUDED

Hoover Board Creates a Division for Buying for Army, Navy, and Other Nations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President Wilson's advocacy of an Inter-Allied War Council to develop greater unity of action and co-ordination of the war energies of the United States in association with the Entente Powers has been followed by steps to unify the American end of the war machinery.

The Council of National Defense today announced a new and larger "co-ordinating body," which will include six members of the Cabinet—Messrs. Baker, Daniels, Lane, Houston, Redfield, and W. B. Wilson. Finance, shipping, food, and fuel, which are vital factors in the war proposition, are not fully represented in the Council of National Defense. These four lines of attack upon the war problems have been incorporated into the new body. The Defense Council issued the following explanatory statement:

"At a special meeting of the Council of National Defense this morning, action was taken to bring about a closer coordination of the war-making activities of the Government. It was determined to hold a joint weekly conference of the Council of National Defense, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board, Food Administrator Hoover, Fuel Administrator Garfield, and Chairman Willard, of the War Industries Board of the council. Director Gifford of the council will be present at these meetings as heretofore.

"Since the Council of National Defense, composed of Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of the Interior Lane, Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Secretary of Commerce Redfield, and Secretary of Labor Wilson, represents the military alms of the Government, as well as those Federal executive departments dealing most directly with the vital resources of the nation, this larger coordinating body will work toward unification of the machinery necessary in the prosecution of the war."

A preliminary conference of the new "council" was held today. It is understood that President Wilson will attend some of the sessions. A Cabinet member of the Council of National Defense said tonight that the creation of the new body was considered in Administration circles as a step of the highest importance. It was expected to bring about not only unification and co-ordination, but prevent duplication and produce better team work all along the line. It was pointed out, for example, that as national coal administrator, Dr. Garfield might think that coal should be supplied to certain industries on the theory that these were essential, when members of the War Trade Board might think other industries more essential.

The Food Administration announced tonight that it had completed the coordination of purchases for the army, navy, and allied and neutral countries, in food staples, embracing grains, flour, meat products, and canned goods. The purchases have been put under control of a division of co-ordination of purchases.

"The necessity for such an organization," says the administration announcement, "grows out of the Governmental consolidation all over the world of buying of certain commodities into such large orders as to extend beyond the ability of any one manufacturer to supply, and the failure to co-ordinate which may effect price level and supplies to the civil population.

"The army and navy supplies of such commodities are handled by an Inter-Department Committee representing the army, navy, Food Administration and Federal Trade Commission. The allied supplies are handled by the various allied purchasing agencies co-ordinating through the Food Administration, which in this case acts under a delegation of powers, set up by contracts between the United States Treasury and the various allies. The co-ordination of neutral buying is obtained through the conditions laid down in export licenses by the War Trade Board."
